WALLACE OFFERS NEW AAA; GETS O. K. OF FRIENDS

Process Taxes Kept; to Face Court.

To Lose AAA Jobs

Washington, D. C., Jan. 11.—(AP)—Chester C. Davis, farm administrator, indicated tonight that the clerical force of the AAA would be curtailed next week.

"While it is regrettable," he said, "unquestionably we will have to begin reducing the forces."

Six thousand five hundred are employed in Washington. Their pay was shut off last Monday night after the Supreme court had outlawed the AAA. A definite decision on the pay question has not been made by Controler General McCarl.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 11.—[Special.]—The administration's substitute for the demolished AAA, crop production control through a soil conservation program, formally was approved this evening by the conference of farm leaders, handpicked by Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace.

The plan is to be rushed to the house committee on agriculture, which is determined to write the AAA replacement bill although it is expected to lean heavily on department of agriculture brain trusters. The committee may be summoned to a special session Monday to consider plans of committee members and to tackle the administration proposal.

Although it has not been set forth in detail, the soil conservation plan appeared to observers to be only a restatement of the AAA. The system recently outlawed by the Supreme court limited acreage of crops to a percentage of land tilled in base years and paid benefit checks to contract-signing farmers. The money came from processing taxes.

The Supreme court held the AAA act unconstitutional because congress employed its taxing power for local rather than national welfare. The new proposal would withdraw the same acreage from production as a soil conservation measure assertedly for the national welfare. The same subsidies would be paid to the farmers through some scheme yet to be devised, probably through leasing the withdrawn acreage to the government.

Under the new plan crop control virtually equal to that of the AAA will be vested in the federal government. For that reason, officials acknowledged, the proposal after enactment immediately will head into a court test to determine its constitutionality. In anticipation of such a test, administration lawyers were set to work to fit the plan into the restrictions fixed in the Supreme court's AAA decision.

Renews Crop Control.

The selected farm leaders approved the plan with the adoption of a resolution, drafted by a committee of thirteen of their membership delegated to study the plan. The resolution contained the following seven points:

1. Legislation for rental and withdrawal from production of land found "necessary to promote the conservation of soil fertility and to bring about a profitable balance of domestic production with the total effective demand at popular prices."

2. Direct appropriation of funds by congress.

3. Levying of processing taxes on foodstuffs.

4. Retention and strengthening of all positions of the AAA act not declared unconstitutional.

5. Creation of farm commodity cooperatives, authorized under the Capper-Volstead act, for marketing or distributing farm products.

6. A declaration for reserving the American market for the American farmer and expansion of foreign markets for surplus crops.

7. The conclusion that the committee confine its report to consideration of a substitute for the AAA, leaving other farm issues to consideration of farm organizations.

Favors Farm Equalities.

The resolution opened with the declarations that students of agriculture were agreed, because of the peculiar

LEADERS READY TO PUSH BONUS TO SENATE VOTE

Favor 'Baby Bonds' as Pay Method.

Pension Fight Next

Washington, D. C., Jan. 11.—[Special.]—Virtually certain of early passage of the soldiers' bonus measure, two of the major groups of ex-service men are preparing for a combined drive for more liberal pensions.

The American Legion, in accordance with the mandate of the St. Louis convention last September, will present a bill calling for pensions for widows and orphans of ex-service men who died from nonservice causes.

The Veterans of Foreign Wars will demand a uniform pension law for veterans of all wars. The disabled American veterans are not expected to take part in new proposals, but to resist any effort to reduce benefits now paid.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 11.—[Special.]—Leaders in the senate today prepared for speedy action in that body on the veterans' bonus question, which was put up to them yesterday by the passage of the Vinson-Patman-McCormack bill in the house.

The house measure, together with the question of financing the 2 billion dollar payment, will be taken up by the finance committee on Monday and the bonus is expected to be made the senate's unfinished business before the end of the week.

Administration leaders, it was learned, have been conferring with President Roosevelt and treasury officials and are virtually agreed upon the small bond method of payment as the easiest way out for the treasury. The veterans would receive small bonds in denominations of $50 or $100 in exchange for their adjusted service certificates and they could cash these as they needed the money. As an inducement to hold them, however, and thus relieve some of the strain on the treasury's financing operations, they would receive interest of 3 per cent on those retained.

Roosevelt Silent on Plan.

President Roosevelt, it is said, has made no commitment as to approving or vetoing a bond bill, but the senate leaders are proceeding on the assumption that he will veto any bill. The administration, on the other hand, is proceeding on the assumption that the bonus payment will be passed at this session, regardless of a veto, and therefore wants the bond payment method for the treasury's sake.

Also, it is pointed out by bonus leaders, the bond method will serve as an excuse for senators who last year voted to sustain the President's veto of the Patman greenback bill to switch their votes.

Senator Frederick Steiwer [Rep., Ore.] co-author with Senator James F. Byrnes [Dem., S. C.] of a bill providing for immediate payment of around 98 per cent of the certificates' face value, said today that he knew of at least six senators who were prepared to switch their votes on the question of overriding a veto.

63 Votes Would Kill Veto.

This would not be enough, for the vote to sustain the President last year was 54 to 40 and if 95 senators voted—the present membership—63 votes would be required to override. However, the bonus advocates have no doubt that a veto would be overridden on a bonus bill that offered a "face saving" excuse for the switch.

The bill passed by the house, which is sponsored by the three leading veterans' organizations, does not specify the method of payment, but would require an ultimate expenditure of $2,282,000,000. Bonus leaders in the senate estimate that the bond payment method would result in an immediate outlay of not more than 1 billion dollars.

They base this estimate on the expectation that 500,000 veterans, holding certificates to the value of $500,000,000 upon which they have not borrowed, and enough others would hold their bonds to reduce the immediate disbursement to 1 billion dollars.

New Dealers Fear Deficit.

But the addition of even a billion dollars to the deficit for the present fiscal year is not contemplated with

ROOSEVELT DECIDES DIPLOMATIC PUZZLE WITH SHORT ORDER

Washington, D. C., Jan. 11.—(AP)—To keep peace among the wives of the American diplomatic corps, President Roosevelt has issued an order deciding a dispute. The question was:

How much latitude is allowed a chief of mission abroad in choosing an "official hostess" for a social affair if he happens to be a bachelor or his wife is away at the moment?

President Roosevelt ordered "in the absence of the wife of the head of a diplomatic mission, only the daughter, mother or sister of the head of the mission or the wife of the counselor or highest ranking secretary having a wife present at the post may act as hostess for the head of the mission."

$5,000 Kidnap Plot Aimed at John W. Behr

An attempt to extort $5,000 from John W. Behr, athletic director of the Illinois Athletic club and a widely known boxing referee and physical trainer, under a threat to kidnap his 18 year old daughter, Barbara Ann, was disclosed yesterday. Miss Behr, a freshman student at Lake Forest college, is under constant guard.

Department of justice agents, pretending to follow directions in a series of three notes mailed to Mr. Behr, set a trap for the writer in a loop hotel yesterday afternoon, but failed to make a capture.

Envelope Highly Scented.

The first of the notes was received at the Behr home, 1627 Forest avenue, Wilmette, on Monday. Both the envelope and the letter were heavily scented. The message, rather crudely printed in block letters with ink, asserted that the author contemplated doing bodily harm to some member of the family and warned:

"You had better deal with us."

Due to the fact that no street address had been placed on the envelope the message was delayed and Mr. Behr was unable to comply with a demand that he insert a want ad in an afternoon paper stating: "All is ready," and signed "Barbara."

Print Ad Three Days.

On the recommendation of the department of justice agents, to whom the letter was handed over by Chief of Police Cloyd McGuire of Wilmette, the advertisment was printed on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday.

The second letter, received on Wednesday and bearing the correct street address, warned that Miss Behr was in danger and suggested that Mr. Behr was being given his "last chance" to talk business. A slight change in the want ad—a shift in the position of the signature—was suggested and this change was made.

Apparently the changed advertisment was seen by the extortioner and on Friday Mr. Behr received the third letter. It contained a specific demand for the $5,000 and directed the manner of the payment.

Announces "Ready to Deal."

Mr. Behr signified his willingness to deal by inserting in the newspaper the message:

"Write to me soon, please.

"J. W. B."

In substance the commands of the extortionist were: "Let a maid from your house stand on the balcony of the Palmer house, facing the elevator bank, from 3 to 4 o'clock Saturday. Let her have a white box tied up with a red ribbon under her arm. In the box have $5,000 in $5, $10, $20, and $50 bills. When a man passes this maid and says 'Ten-Sixty,' let her hand him the box."

Station Woman at Spot.

A woman was stationed at the designated spot and waited there through the appointed period, with policemen and federal agents near to seize the threatener if he should show up. But no one said "ten-sixty" to the boxholder; in fact, no one approached her.

The federal agents, including the chief of the local office, Daniel M. Ladd, were of the opinion that if a kidnaping was actually intended other letters would follow, while the threatener probably would cease writing if he were only a crank.

Mr. Behr was at a loss to account for his being chosen as a victim.

"My circumstances are moderate," he said. "I work for a salary. To say the least I would have great difficulty in raising $5,000. I did not even have a maid to send the box by. My daughter's picture was recently published in THE TRIBUNE and it may be that this caused the writer to believe I had big money.

Would Like to Sock Him.

"Another of my guesses is that the person may have confused me with some other and much wealthier Behr. I only wish that I could catch up with that letter writer and give him a solid sock on the jaw."

Mr. Behr, in addition to his other duties, acts each year as trainer of the Golden Gloves boxing teams and is handy with his fists.

In connection with his surmise that he is a victim of mistaken identity it was pointed out that Miss Edith Behr, daughter of Benjamin Leslie Behr, who is wealthy, was married yesterday to W. Edwin Stanley Jr.

Miss Barbara Ann Behr is being guarded by the Wilmette police and, when she is attending classes at college, by the Lake Forest police.

Abandon Plan for Seizure of Dr. Condon

Trenton, N. J., Jan. 11.—[Special.]—Although Gov. Harold G. Hoffman announced this morning that he intended to have Attorney General David T. Wilentz bring Dr. John F. [Jafsie] Condon back for questioning, he had taken no action tonight looking to that end.

Meanwhile, Dr. Condon and his daughter, Mrs. Ralph Hacker, were aboard a liner bound for Latin-American ports. The ship's first stop will be at Cristobal, C. Z., next Friday, the date fixed for Bruno Richard Hauptmann's execution at the New Jersey state prison here. Dr. Condon and Mrs. Hacker expect to visit friends in Panama.

Fail to Get Order.

Wilentz, Prosecutor Anthony M. Hauck Jr. of Hunterdon county, and Col. H. Norman Schwarzkopf, superintendent of the New Jersey state police, all said tonight that Gov. Hoffman had given them no instructions to order Dr. Condon's arrest either aboard ship or on his arrival at Cristobal.

When he heard of the governor's announcement this morning, just before entering the room in which the Court of Pardons heard Hauptmann's plea for clemency, Wilentz appeared much concerned, and said in a determined tone that he meant to ask the governor for an explanation.

Late this afternoon, leaving the Court of Pardons, Wilentz went to the governor's office and said:

Hoffman is Silent.

After waiting a short time, without being able to see the governor, Wilentz left for his home at Perth Amboy, saying:

"I have not been asked about Dr. Condon, and nothing will be done about Dr. Condon."

"In order to cause Dr. Condon's arrest," said Prosecutor Hauck, "it would be necessary to charge Dr. Condon with perjury or some other crime. Nothing could be done on the basis of the governor's request alone."

At Washington, federal government experts said any request for Dr. Condon's arrest would have to be made by the New Jersey authorities through Attorney General Homer S. Cummings as chief law officer of the United States.

Hoffman's Hands Tied.

It is believed in legal circles here that Hoffman will be unable to do anything about bringing Condon back if Attorney General Wilentz refuses to take action. Gov. Hoffman, a Republican, has no authority of Wilentz, a Democrat, who was appointed by Former Gov. A. Harry Moore, Democrat, now a United States senator. Wilentz was appointed for a five year term which expires in 1939, and can be removed only through impeachment proceedings in the legislature.

Gov. Hoffman had made his announcement on Dr. Condon through his secretary, William Conklin, who said the governor would instruct Wilentz to have Dr. Condon taken into custody at once for questioning about alleged 'discrepancies in his story."

Mr. Conklin said the governor was especially interested in a series of magazine articles by Dr. Condon, the first of which has been published, and the manuscript of all of which have been obtained by the governor.

Says Others Implicated.

Conklin also said Condon asserted in a magazine series that the "John" to whom he paid the $50,000 Lindbergh ransom money, in telephone conversations with him, often talked to other persons who appeared to be beside him [John] at the telephone. Dr. Condon also related, according to Conklin, that "John" often referred to "No. 1 man' 'and "No. 2 man."

"The governor is interested in a purported interview which quotes Jafsie as saying that he was offered $250,000 to change his story. He wants to know who made the offer."

Is there a "BACK-TO-THE-FARM" movement?

YES!—says Bob Becker in his article today in the want ad section. And to prove it he reveals the facts brought to light in an investigation which he has just completed. To find out who these farm-buyers are and why they are buying, read Bob Becker's interesting article in the want ad section today.

PARDONS BOARD DENIES PLEA; TO CHAIR ON JAN. 17

Wife Will Fight On, She Says.

BY WILLARD EDWARDS.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Trenton, N. J., Jan. 11.—[Special.]—With characteristic stolidity, Bruno Richard Hauptmann tonight received in his death cell the news that his last desperate attempt to avoid the electric chair had failed. He will be executed at 8 p. m. next Friday, Jan. 17, for the murder nearly four years ago of the first born son of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh.

After listening for five and one-half hours to the pleas of three attorneys representing Hauptmann, the New Jersey board of pardons refused to commute the German carpenter's sentence to one of life imprisonment. The decision of the board, headed by Gov. Harold G. Hoffman, was said to have been unanimous and any further action by the governor, who had exhibited an unusual interest in Hauptmann's case, was deemed improbable.

Warden Bearer of News.

Col. Mark O. Kimberling, the prison warden, and Attorney C. Lloyd Fisher, one of Hauptmann's lawyers, informed the prisoner of the pardon board's denial of clemency.

Hauptmann was standing in front of his cell, clutching the bars, when he was informed that he had less than a week to live. He displayed no emotion, according to Kimberling, even when Fisher informed him that there was no longer any hope for him, not even for a delay in imposing the sentence.

"Your only chance now is to directly involve someone else in the kidnaping," Fisher told Hauptmann.

"I can't change my story," Hauptmann replied, according to the prison warden. "I have told the truth all along. There's nothing more to tell than I have told. I haven't the least idea where Fisch got that money from."

Insists Fisch Source of Money.

Hauptmann referred to Isador Fisch, German furrier, who died in Bavaria about a year after the kidnaping. The prisoner has steadfastly insisted that the ransom money found in his possession when he was arrested had been left with him by Fisch.

Attorney Fisher and Hauptmann discussed the case at some length, Kimberling said, and the prisoner displayed a coolness which amazed the warden. Only when they were leaving did the cold eyed Hauptmann betray any emotion.

"Tell my wife," he said, "that I'm not worried and she's not to worry, either."

The prisoner's eyes were moist as he issued this injunction, the warden said.

Mrs. Hauptmann Still Hopes.

When Mrs. Hauptmann called at the prison in an unsuccessful effort to see her husband this evening tears were in her eyes as she told reporters:

"I don't know anything about law, but I realize there can't be much left to fight with now. We will go on, anyway, to the end of the road. We still have hope."

Mrs. Hauptmann arrived at the prison in a taxicab about an hour after the Court of Pardons' decision had been announced. She was accompanied by a young woman. To a guard who looked out through the barred gate she asked permission to enter. He replied that it was after visiting hours and that she had better return on Monday, as no visitors are allowed on Sundays.

Announcement Is Brief.

The decision of the pardons board was given in a brief, official statement that "the application for clemency in the case of Bruno Richard Hauptmann, sentenced to death for the murder of Charles A. Lindbergh Jr. at Hopewell, N. J., March 2, 1932, is denied."

Members of the board refused to discuss the ruling and the attorneys were bound to secrecy, being told that they would be in contempt of court if they gave out any information about the hearing. The official statement given out by Gov. Hoffman declared that "under the traditional rules of the board of pardons, the members and others appearing at

Announcement of the decision came amid scenes of wild confusion and was preceded by the same raucous publicity which has featured the remarkable case since the arrest of Hauptmann in the fall of 1934.

A. B. Herman, clerk of the board, emerged from the hearing room, flanked by two state policemen. Followed by a huge crowd of newspaper men, camera men, and the curious, he raced a short half block to the executive mansion. In the governor's office Herman stood upon a chair and read the brief announcement in a loud voice.

Attorneys Are Silent.

When Attorney General David T. Wilentz and the Hauptmann attorneys, led by Attorney Egbert Rosecrans, left the hearing room an hour previously, all refused to talk.

The report that the ruling was unanimous and that Gov. Hoffman agreed with the decision was something of a surprise. Only last night the governor had asserted a belief that Hauptmann was not the "sole perpetrator" of the crime and this morning he issued a blanket request to "all law enforcing bodies" to arrest Dr. John F. "Jafsie" Condon, chief witness against Hauptmann, and hold him for questioning. But the eccentric Dr. Condon is now safely on the high seas en route to Panama.

Reprieve Power Debated.

There was some dispute among lawyers as to the governor's power to act alone in the matter of a reprieve. The state law says plainly that the governor may reprieve a sentenced man only if he acts within 90 days of the date when sentence was imposed by the lower court. New Jersey governors in the past have disregarded this law without protest from any one, but the state is expected to dispute such action in Hauptmann's case if Gov. Hoffman should desire to commute the death sentence.

The law provides that the governor must vote with the majority in the case of a commutation. But when a majority decide against clemency, his opposition cannot stop the members from ruling against any lightening of sentence.

Stake All on Commutation.

The hearing was conducted in the strictest secrecy but it was known that Hauptmann's attorneys staked all on a petition for commutation to a life sentence, although they continue to protest the prisoner's innocence.

The state board of pardons which made the decision is composed of eight members, five of them judges of the state court of errors and appeals, who had already turned down Hauptmann's petition for a reversal of the verdict of guilty reached a year ago by eight men and four women citizens of New Jersey at Flemington, N. J. Two other judges and the governor complete the total.

Besiege Hearing Room.

A big crowd besieged the hearing room as the board members met behind doors guarded by state policemen at 10:30 o'clock this morning. They remained hidden until 5 p. m., when the decision was read.

As predicted, the prisoner's request to present his appeal for mercy in person was refused. The stolid carpenter remained in his death cell in the state prison nearby. The warden reported that Hauptmann's demeanor was unchanged. He remained hopeful that he would be extended a commutation of the sentence.

The famed "kidnap ladder" was taken into the hearing room, however, and the members of the board were reported to have examined it carefully. The Hauptmann lawyers contend that they can prove that the ladder was not used to gain entry to the nursery of the Lindbergh home in the Sourland mountains. The state traced the lumber used in construction of the ladder through the testimony of Arthur Koehler, government wood expert, to the attic of Hauptmann's home in the Bronx, New York City.

The attorneys based their petition for commutation on four major issues. These were:

2. A contention that the child found dead in the woods near the Lindbergh estate in the Sourland mountains was not proved to be the Lindberghs' missing son.

3. The unexplained deposit by "J. J. Faulkner" of $2,980 in the federal sub-treasury soon after gold and gold certificates had been recalled in May, 1933. This money was found to be ransom money and the defense will argue that the man who deposited the money was not Hauptmann and that therefore the crime is as yet not solved.

New Evidence Claimed.

4. New evidence, probably produced as a result of Gov. Hoffman's new investigation of the case and said to involve John Curtis, Norfolk ship builder, who for a time claimed to be in touch with the Lindbergh kidnapers but later admitted he had hoaxed Col. Lindbergh, and Gaston B. Means, former federal agent now serving a term in the federal penitentiary at Leavenworth for extorting $103,000 from Mrs. Evelyn Walsh McLean in Washington on the promise that he would "buy back" the Lindbergh baby.

An assertion made by Hauptmann's mother, in a written plea to save him, that Gov. Hoffman had the supreme power of pardon and clemency was disputed by Assistant Attorney General Joseph A. Lanigan. Admitting that in the past New Jersey governors have pardoned criminals without waiting for a board of pardons hearing, Lanigan indicated that the exercise of such a power in Hauptmann's case would undoubtedly be fought by the state.

Lanigan displayed a New Jersey Supreme court decision which declared:

"The constitution bestows upon the executive department the power to reprieve, but limits the exercise of that power to a period of 90 days after conviction, which means 90 days after sentence in the court below. As an incident to this granted power the executive department may direct the execution to be proceeded with within the 90 days, and, in that event the execution takes place, not by force of executive warant but in virtue of the judgment of the court.

"After the lapse of the ninety days the power of the executive department in this respect ceases."

COPY OF DECISION IN HAUPTMANN CASE CONTAINS ONE ERROR

Trenton, N. J., Jan. 11.—(AP)—The formal announcement of the decision of New Jersey's Court of Pardons on Bruno Richard Hauptmann's plea for clemency contained one error.

Albert B. Hermann, court clerk, handed out a revised mimeographed announcement which said the Lindbergh baby kidnaping occurred March 2, 1932.

Mother Pleads for Hauptmann

Trenton, N. J., Jan. 11.—[U. P.]—The text of a letter written by the mother of Bruno Richard Hauptmann in which she pleaded with Gov. Harold G. Hoffman for clemency for her son follows:

"The undersigned, being the grief-stricken mother of Bruno Hauptmann, condemned to death by the courts of your state and disallowed retrial by the Supreme court of the United States, implores your excellency to stay that terrible sentence by commuting it into imprisonment.

"Ever since my son was charged with the heinous crime of having assassinated the infant son of Col. Charles Lindbergh, I have unalteringly expressed the firm conviction that, notwithstanding the suspicion prevailing against him, the court of Flemington would ultimately absolve him from that atrocious charge. Unfortunately Bruno has not succeeded in proving his innecence, a minor transgression committed by him in Germany during the famine following the world war, having been used to brand him as a fundamentally criminal character.

Feels Son Is Innocent.

"However, as the mother of the condemned man who bore and raised him in a God-fearing family, I may be forgiven if nevertheless I cannot believe in Bruno's guilt. Although certain outward appearances may be irrefutably against him, I feel distinctly that Bruno who always was a model son to me and is himself a loving father of a little boy, could not be and is not the real perpetrator of the dastardly crime.

"Moreover, I feel that that crime which so deeply shocked every mother in Germany as well as in your country, could not possibly be atoned by the execution of a man who, from first to last, has loudly proclaimed his innocence. I am firmly convinced that, no matter in which mysterious way my poor boy may have been involved in the sequels of that crime, he was not himself the really guilty party.

Young Father Himself.

"For if he were, being a young father himself, he would assuredly have broken down long ago in that prolonged and awful trial and would openly have confessed his guilt in order to expiate as soon as possible before God and men.

"However, up to the last of the many letters which Bruno has written me from his prison cell, he has again and again firmly stated his innocence. Moreover, thousands of people personally unknown to me who followed all the details of his trial, have spontaneously written me that the prosecution merely insisted on having him pay the penalty of death because, otherwise, the blame for not having cleared up the mystery of the murder would permanently rest upon them.

Appeals for Clemency.

"Therefore, without impugning in the least the honest effort at justice on the part of the jury which weighed the evidence against my son, nor the impartiality of the judges who pronounced sentence against him, I wish to raise my voice to the end that justice be superseded by clemency.

"Almighty God in his infinite wisdom has invested your excellency with the supreme prerogatives of pardon and clemency. I beseech you to exercise them for the benefit of Bruno Hauptmann, my beloved son, whose ignominious death in the electric chair would break my heart. I implore you, Mr. Governor to use the dignity of your high office for not permitting that a man undergo the one penalty that is irreparable on merely circumstantial evidence."

Minister Deems Him Truthful.

Another appeal by letter in behalf of Hauptmann was made by the Rev. J. Matthiesen, pastor of the Trinity Lutheran church in Trenton and who has been the prisoner's spiritual advisor for several months. The letter, presented to the members of the board of pardons, read:

"I have had 15 very intimate and soul-searching interviews with Bruno Richard Hauptmann and am convinced that he tells the truth. If Hauptmann would have had a reliable defense lawyer at the outstart, and if he would have asked for an interpreter during the trial, the very evidence used against him should have spoken in his favor. Hauptmann felt no need for them until it was too late. After careful study of this case I have come to that conclusion.

"First know Hauptman as he really is, and his wife Anna, and then study the evidence; and you will arrive at the same conclusion. Hauptmann does not fit into the framework of circumstantial evidence.

"I would ask for the supreme penalty if Hauptmann were guilty. My creed has no objection to that."

REILLY, HAUPTMANN DEFENDER, YIELDS TO WIFE IN SEPARATION

New York, Jan. 11.—[Special.]—At the same time that New Jersey Court of Pardons was reviewing the case of Bruno Richard Hauptmann, Edward J. Reilly, chief trial counsel to the convicted murderer, was engaged in settling a dispute with his wife in North Tarrytown.

Reilly notified his wife's attorney today that Mrs. Reilly might keep an automobile and a dachshund which were involved in a separation suit.

When the Hauptmann defense counsel went to his Phillipse manor home to collect personal belongings under a court order, Mrs. Reilly insisted that the dog and car were her own property. Reilly went to court again, decision was reserved and Reilly decided today not to press his claim.

WOMAN TELLS OF SEEING LINDY BABY ALIVE, WELL

MONTHAL, Que., Jan. 11.—[U. P.]—Mrs. John Lynch of New Haven, Conn., told Montreal newspaper men today that she saw Charles A. Lindbergh Jr. "alive and well" in an Atlantic City hotel two days after the kidnaping.

Mrs. Lynch claimed a gang of men, among whom was Bruno Richard Hauptmann, convicted slayer of the child, carried the baby into the hotel. She was certain of the identity of the child and immediately notified police, she said.

Hauptmann was questioned at the time by police, she said, but was released. The other gangsters had left the hotel with the Lindbergh baby before police arrived, she contended.

SLAIN DOCTOR'S WIDOW CLINGS TO ROBBERY THEORY

No Other Tangible Clews, Mrs. Peacock Says.

Eight days after the mysterious murder of her husband, Dr. Silber C. Peacock, specialist in children's diseases, Mrs. Ruth Peacock yesterday held to her original theory that he was slain by robbers who lured him to his death with a fake mercy call.

Mrs. Peacock was reached at the home of her mother in Bowen, Ill., where she and her daughter, Betty Lou, 7 years old, plan to live. She went there last Monday for the funeral of her husband.

"I am still certain that robbery was the motive for my husband's murder," Mrs. Peacock declared. "Most of the facts in the case point this way. I realize, of course, as the investigators have continually pointed out to me, that there are some mysterious factors in the case.

No Clew to Any Other Motives.

"But I insist that most of the facts, as known, indicate he was slain by robbers. From my intimate knowledge of the doctor's practice and his private life I know of nothing which would furnish a clew to another motive."

Further support of the robbery-murder theory came from friends and professional associates of the slain pediatrician. Contrary to earlier reports, they insisted that Dr. Peacock would have little hesitation in responding to a night call, even from a new patient.

The police who have considered every possibility and investigated a number of motives for the slaying have been unable to make any definite progress. Invariably they have been forced to return to the robbery theory as the start of a new line of investigation. Yesterday they admittedly had reached an impasse.

Death Summons Is Key.

Dr. Peacock's personal life was found to be blameless. There has been no suggestion uncovered that any one bore him a mortal hate or desired his death for revenge.

One point only continued to be the focus in the investigation. This was the telephone call which took Dr. Peacock from his home in the Edgewater Beach apartments, 5555 Sheridan road, shortly after 10 o'clock Thursday night, Jan. 2. The caller was a man who gave the name of "G. Smale, 6438 North Whipple street."

Dr. Peacock answered this summons "to attend a sick child." Twenty-one hours later, last Friday night, police found his body, with a bullet wound in the head, in his automobile parked in the 6300 block on North Francisco avenue, which is only a few blocks from the Whipple street address. The lights of the car still were burning.

Strange Tangle of Numbers.

There is no Smale living in the Whipple street building, but sixteen miles away lives George W. Smale, at 6438 South Washtenaw avenue. This George Smale has no connection with the murder, police are convinced, although they have been unable to find an explanation for the strange coincidence of names and digits in the address.

Capt. Daniel Gilbert, chief of the state's attorney's police, said yesterday he was told that about five or six years ago a man named Smale did live at the Whipple street address.

The fatal telephone call, some of the investigators pointed out last night, could plausibly have been made by robbers who, after luring the doctor away from his home, killed him when he offered resistance in the holdup.

When Dr. Peacock fought off a bandit a year ago he declared he would do the same again if necessary. His wallet, containing at least $20, was missing when his body was discovered.

HAUPTMANN'S COMMUTATION PLEA DENIED; DOOMED TO DIE FRIDAY

PHONES HOFFMAN CHICAGO CLEW ON LINDBERGH CASH

Bernard M. Finnigan, an attorney with offices at 9226 Commercial avenue, revealed yesterday he had been in communication by long distance telephone with Gov. Harold G. Hoffman of New Jersey concerning a man now serving a sentence in the Bridewell who professed to have important information relative to the Hauptmann case.

Mr. Finnigan, who refused to divulge his client's identity lest it embarrass a possible investigation, said the man claimed he could lead investigators to three men who possessed $22,000 of the Lindbergh ransom money, one of whom had been in contact with the kidnaper.

The informant said the three men took him to the hiding place of the money and offered to sell it to him at 40 cents on the dollar. He said one of the three men entered this country illegally from Germany at the same time as Hauptmann.

SEE 4 CHANCES, ALL SLIM ONES, FOR HAUPTMANN

Trenton, N. J., Jan. 11.—[Special.]—Bruno Richard Hauptmann now has only four slim hopes to avoid execution in the electric chair in the New Jersey State prison here at 8 o'clock next Friday night. They are:

An appeal to Supreme Court Justice Thomas W. Trenchard, who presided at the trial in Flemington last year, for a new trial based on newly discovered evidence.

A new request for a review of the proceedings to the United States Supreme court which already has denied one such request.

Chances were regarded as very slim in the first three instances, and Gov. Hoffman has announced that he doubts his legal right to grant a reprieve. Court decisions have held that the governor individually has no right to grant a reprieve after 90 days have passed after conviction, which in this case was on Feb. 13, 1935.

It has been reported that the governor might assume the right to grant a reprieve, and let his action be tested in the courts. It has also been reported that the legislature, which meets on Tuesday, might be asked to pass legislation clarifying the governor's powers. Gov. Hoffman refused tonight to reveal his plans.

Ex-Gov. Lowden Confined to His Home with a Cold

Frank O. Lowden, former governor of Illinois, was reported confined to his room at Sinissippi farm, near Oregon in Ogle county, yesterday with a cold. Members of the family said that the former governor, who is 74 years old, was not seriously ill.

BOY STARTS FLAT BUILDING FIRE TO 'SEE THE ENGINES'

James Fulton, 13 years old, 4405 Wellington street, wanted to see "the fire engines come," so he broke into the basement of a large apartment building at 2936 North Kolmar avenue Friday night, and set fire to a pile of papers. The fire engines arrived and the blaze was extinguished with little damage, after frightening the 55 families who live in the building. James was arrested yesterday, confessed the plot, and was turned over to juvenile authorities.

CONDUCTOR ROBBED IN CAR.

Two gunmen boarded a Halsted street car at West 43d street early yesterday and took $12 from the changer of the conductor. James O'Malley, 1511 Olive street.

WALLACE OFFERS NEW AAA; GETS O. K. OF FRIENDS

Process Taxes Kept; To Face Court Fight.

physical nature of the agricultural production which does not lend itself to factors of adjustment employed by industry or labor, legislative aid of an effective character is necessary so that the farmers shall enjoy economic equality. Such equality was held to be vital to the general welfare of the country.

"The future of all America rests primarily on the preservation of soil fertility," the resolution continued. "The welfare of business and all classes is dependent upon policies that will prevent a recurrence of those agricultural depressions and maladjustments that have brought the panics of 1873, 1893, 1921, and 1932. We now appeal to business to join us in building up the most effective possible machinery to carry on its objectives and give farmers and manufacturers alike the continued enormous benefits of increased farm purchasing power."

Boosts 7 Point Plan.

The resolution then asserted that legislation should be based on the 7 points. In advocating subsidies for acreage turned over to conservation it was suggested rentals should be based on a given percentage of the total tillable acreage or an adjustment by quota on the volume of products or on a basis involving both acreage and volume.

With regard to the levying of taxes on the processing of live stock and dairy products to pay for the program, the resolution states that whenever an adequate number of producers approved such funds they could be used for the purpose of expanding foreign and domestic outlets in a manner beneficial to the domestic market and to the producers. In this connection a strengthening of the portions of the AAA not killed by the decision was urged.

Holds Stormy Session.

The resolution was set before the farm meeting after a stormy session of the committee of thirteen appointed to consider the administration program. In the committee advocates of a cost of production program, which would guarantee farmers a minimum price, headed by E. E. Kennedy of the Farmers' union, vigorously advanced their plan, only to be swamped by the Wallace contingent carefully selected by him in the summons to the conference.

As the resolution was adopted, several leaders grumbled that they were called to advise the administration on a way out of the demolition of the AAA, but found a plan thrust upon them. It was rumored that the plan was devised by Wallace and AAA Administrator Davis weeks ago in anticipation of an adverse court decision.

Fails to Get Its Bill.

The provision for creation of farm commodity coöperatives was secured by C. E. Hoff of the Farmers National Grain corporation, that has unsuccessfully attempted to force a coöperative bill through several sessions of congress. Hoff, who was formerly with the farmers' union, was a member of the committee of thirteen.

It is expected that as details of the plans are drafted into a bill the proposal will create a new alphabetical unit to be known, probably, as the FSCC—Federal Soil Conservation corporation. Such a corporation would distribute the farm subsidies at the rate of the AAA—about 500 million dollars a year.

Await Refund Ruling.

Administration officials are anxiously awaiting the action of the Supreme court, expected Monday, on the question of whether the billion dollars of AAA processing taxes shall be refunded or kept by the government. The decision may have a vital bearing on the proposal to continue such taxes for the soil conservation plan sponsored by President Roosevelt.

As the farm leaders went through the motions of approving the administration plan, definite evidence was given that the New Deal already had decided on the measure. It was revealed Wallace last night summoned Howard R. Tolley, former assistant AAA administrator from the west coast, to meet with department officials. Tolley was described as the "foremost agricultural economist in the United States."

FARMERS' GROUP ASSAILS PARLEY AT WASHINGTON

A telegram protesting against being "barred" from the conference of farm leaders at Washington was sent last night to President Roosevelt by the Farmers' Independence Council of America over the signature of Dan D. Casement of Manhattan, Kas., president. The telegram was sent from the council's Chicago headquarters.

The communication assailed the American Farm Bureau federation as an "entrenched minority" and blamed this group with Chester Davis, administrator of the agricultural adjustment act, for preventing the Independence council from being represented at the meeting.

"The Farmers' Independence council," the telegram said in part, "which gives voice to the sincere sentiments of the millions of American farmers seeking return of their freedom, has consistently opposed the unsound and illegal AAA. In retaliation the entrenched minority, fattening on the political spoils of agriculture, denied admittance to our organization.

RUSH MILLIONS TO KEEP RELIEF WORKERS ON DAM

PEDESTRIAN HIT BY AUTOMOBILE DIES OF INJURY

Otto Keller, 48 years old, 4716 North Lincoln street, was fatally injured last night when he was struck by a northbound automobile while he was crossing Ashland avenue between Otto and School streets. Keller died as he was being taken to John B. Murphy hospital. The driver of the car which struck him was Elmer J. Mahoney, 5412 Ferdinand street.

Fred Weber, 70 years old, 1156 North La Salle street, was fatally injured early today when he was struck at La Salle and Division streets by a Checker cab driven by John Waller, 2307 Iowa street. He died soon afterward at the Henrotin hospital.

Jack Smith, 13 years old, 7726 South Marshfield avenue, was seriously injured yesterday when the sled he had attached to the rear of an automobile slid into the path of a second car, which struck him.

The accident occurred at the corner of 76th street and Hermitage avenue. Neither William Koeppen, 1151 West 79th street, the driver of the car which struck the boy, nor Gene O'Brien, 7718 South Winchester avenue, driver of the other car, were held by the Gresham police.

Up to 4 p. m. yesterday 37 persons had been killed by automobiles in Cook county since Jan. 1, according to figures from the coroner's office. In the same period 31 had been killed and 433 injured within the Chicago city limits.

TWO KILLED, ONE HURT IN CRASH OF AUTOMOBILES

Huntington, Ind., Jan. 11.—[Special.]—Chester Shively, 50 years old, and Carl Hoke, 38, both of Huntington, were killed tonight in a crash of automobiles in Route 9, three miles north of Huntington. Edward Rudig, 50 years old, who was a passenger in the same car occupied by Shively and Hoke, was injured seriously.

Shively is plant manager of the Caswell-Runyan company, manufacturers of cedar chests here. The other men are employed by the same firm.

Woman Hospital Patient Killed in 4 Story Fall

Mrs. Hattie Bowman, 52 years old, 1744 North Laramie avenue, was killed yesterday when she fell from a fourth floor window at the Frances Willard hospital. A nurse who had left Mrs. Bowman's room only a few moments earlier found the window open when she returned. Mrs. Bowman is survived by her husband, Wilhelm F., a musical instrument salesman, and three children.

SUE TO KEEP AAA ALIVE UNTIL VOTE FIXES ITS STATUS

Charge Supreme Court Is Not Final Arbiter.

Philadelphia, Pa., Jan. 11.—[Special.]—Suit to restrain government executives from interfering with the operation of the AAA until its constitutional status has been determined by referendum was filed in federal district court here today.

The bill of complaint was directed against President Roosevelt, Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau, Chester C. Davis, who administered the AAA, and their agents. It was filed by Attorneys Arthur C. Hirst and Thomas J. Mullaney of Philadelphia in behalf of P. T. Vincent, whom they identified as a real estate dealer.

Court's Power Assailed.

The bill sets forth that the Supreme court, by an unbalanced decision, declared the AAA unconstitutional, and that the President "in accordance with precedent set forth by custom alone, either personally or through an agent, issued an order nullifying and causing the immediate breakdown of the Agricultural Adjustment act machinery."

Any decision of the Supreme court, the complaint alleges, "is not ipso facto the whole and compelling force that automatically converts a statute, thereinbefore enacted by congress, into an unconstitutional wreck devoid of continuing existence."

A decision of the court is at most a judicial guidance for citizens to express by ballot whether or not such a statute governs with desire and will, "and whether such statute should be eradicated from the statute books or its existence be maintained," the bill declares.

Cites Constitution Is Mute.

There is not a "scintilla of holdable evidence" in the constitution, the complaint further states, "whereby the Supreme court is the last, ultimate and final resort completely determining the existence of any law by branding it with the mark of its judicial decision of unconstitutionality."

According to the bill, the President is wholly devoid of the power to void such law until he gets a clear, unequivocal mandate from the people.

Meanwhile, in Washington, senators and executives conferred with farm leaders in an attempt to frame broad policies to guide a new farm program that will take the place of AAA.

SENTENCED ON THREE CHARGES.

Municipal Judge J. William Brooks yesterday sentenced William Killion, 54 years old, 2856 East 91st street, to a year in the Bridewell on each of three charges of mistreating children. The sentences were made to run consecutively.

HENRY CABOT LODGE'S GRANDSON ATTACKS ROOSEVELT'S SPEECH

New York, Jan. 11.—[Special.]—President Roosevelt's recent address to congress was one of strife, Henry Cabot Lodge Jr., grandson of the late senator from Massachusetts of that name, declared today.

Lodge, a member of the Massachusetts house of representatives and a candidate for the Republican nomination for United States senator, spoke today at the National Republican club.

"It is now glaringly clear that the message, while it talks of peace abroad, urges quarrel at home," Lodge said, "and that therefore practical progress must give way to partisan politics.

"We say, therefore, with earnestness and with profound conviction: Let us have peace, not only abroad but here at home; then and only then can our great experiment in constitutional democracy advance."

Lodge asserted the AAA processing taxes, just declared invalid by the United States Supreme court, set up machinery to deprive the masses in the thickly populated sections of the country of the fruits of their own labor for the benefit of a small preferred list in other sections.

OLDFIELD URGES CAREFUL DRIVING, OPPOSES SPEED

Los Angeles, Cal., Jan. 11.—(AP)—Trafic accidents do not happen, they are caused, said Barney Oldfield, veteeran racer, as he signed a pledge presented by a newspaper to practice safety in driving.

"Leave speed to the race tracks, be thoughtful and practice courtesy, and accidents will decrease," Oldfield added.

"I've driven over a million miles in automobiles, and I've only struck one pedestrian. At the time of the accident I was eating popcorn and my mind was not on my driving."

TOWN PLANS SUIT AGAINST U. S. FOR SOILING ITS NAME

Hubbardston, Mass., Jan. 11.—[Special.]—Suit against the federal government, which in 1934 besmirched the name of Hubbardston by declaring it to be sorely in need of rehabilitation and then for a year publicized great reconstructive plans for this little community that never were carried out, is contemplated by a group of townsmen, it became known today.

That it was as unconstitutional as the AAA for the New Deal to put this town of 1,000 inhabitants through such an indignity, and on top of that not take a single step in the end to prove Hubbardston ever had needed rehabilitation, is the case of the group, and naturally the opinion of the whole town.

Whether Hubbardston has suffered to the extent of having enough grounds to obtain even a moral victory in court is now being determined by several of the leaders in the movement to institute action. They have the names of about two dozen farmers who actually spent small sums of money in preparation of the great agricultural boom the government's rural rehabilitation project in Hubbardston was going to bring.

UNION OFFICIALS FACE NEW QUIZ IN WIFE SLAYING

Seize Henneman, Dungan on Woman's Story.

A theory that Mrs. Elsie Henneman, wife of George Henneman, union official, was the deliberate target of a gunman instead of the accidental victim of shots fired at her husband on Jan. 3 was advanced yesterday by Assistant State's Attorney Mal Coghlan, who with police is investigating her death.

In an effort either to strengthen or to explode the theory police were holding Henneman, who is secretary-treasurer of the Painters' union, local 191, and James Dungan, business agent, for questioning along the new lines.

Woman Makes Admission.

They were ordered into custody after Miss Gertrude Jenen, 39 years old, 425 Englewood avenue, a beauty operator for a south side undertaker, admitted she and Henneman had been intimate friends for eighteen months. When first questioned several days ago she asserted she knew him only casually.

The new admission came early yesterday morning after Coghlan and police had questioned Miss Jenen more than three hours. She was released after the statement had been recorded.

In it she is reported to have admitted taking an auto ride with Henneman the night before the murder of his wife, and also on the night following. The two always had the company of a brother of hers on these rides, she stated.

The brother, Joseph Jenen, 30 years old, 4716 Wentworth avenue, was questioned concerning his sister's statement. According to investigators he knew nothing of his sister's relationship with Henneman.

Car Is Examined Again.

Questioning of Henneman was interrupted during the afternoon to permit Coghlan and a number of investigators to examine the automobile in which Mrs. Henneman was killed. At Navy pier where the car has been impounded Sergt. Frank Ballou, ballistics expert for the police department, charted the marks and perforations made by the shots.

Henneman's previous story was that he crouched to the floor of the car under the dashboard when the gunmen flashed a spotlight on the car. His wife, sitting upright in the front seat beside him, was struck by the full force of the shotgun slugs. There were no witnesses to the shooting, which was reported to the police by Henneman.

Coghlan announced that police were making a check on insurance carried by the dead woman. She is reported to have taken out one policy for a nominal sum at the suggestion of her husband. Henneman has denied that she carried any insurance.

A third person in custody in connection with the shooting is William Schaaf, with whom Henneman has had trouble over union affairs. Twenty-four hours after the murder Henneman named Schaaf as one of those participating in the shooting. Authorities have expressed dissatisfaction in Henneman's identification of his labor rival.

HELD UP; BUYS GUN; SHOT DEAD IN 2D ROBBERY

The robbery two months ago of William M. McCormick, 31 years old, 2507 West 60th place, collector for an insurance company, was responsible, police believe, for his murder last night. McCormick was shot to death resisting two colored bandits.

Emerging from a flat building at 6348 Langley avenue, where he had just made a collection, McCormick was confronted by the robbers. Instead of obeying their command to raise his hands, McCormick drew a revolver he had carried since the other robbery.

He fired two shots before one bullet from a bandit's revolver struck him in the head, mortally wounding him. Police believe he wounded one of the men, who fled through a passageway, where Lieut. Wallace Monroe found a trail of blood and the handle of a revolver dropped in flight.

McCormick lived with his mother and two brothers. He was employed by the National Life and Accident Insurance company at the branch office, 841 East 63d street. He was carrying a small sum of money.

JAIL BREAKER CAPTURED BUT HE IS PLEASED

Milwaukee, Wis., Jan. 11.—[Special.]—Walter [Dandy] Ross, 53 years old, former Oconomowoc brewer who escaped from the Milwaukee county jail on July 4, 1930, while awaiting trial on a charge of violating the federal prohibition law, was in detention again today but not feeling very badly about it.

Ross walked out of the jail while the guards and other prisoners were on the roof looking at fireworks. He went to Minneapolis, where he took a job as janitor. After saving $140 he started a restaurant which prospered.

On Friday Ross returned to his Oconomowoc home. So many friends went to call on him that the authorities heard of the celebration and arrested him. However, it was discovered that the indictment against him had been dismissed in 1932. The only charge pending is one of breaking jail.

"I want to face that, pay the penalty and get rid of worrying about being a fugitive," said Ross. "It's been terrible dodging the law, even if I did make a success of that restaurant."

TAVERN KEEPER PUT UNDER BOND AFTER ATTACK ON EDITOR

Johnston City, Ill., Jan. 11.—[Special.]—Charles Farris, tavern owner, who yesterday attacked and beat Harris W. Jones, editor of the Johnston City Progress, today was placed under $1,000 bond by County Judge E. W. Bowen to await hearing on peace bond Jan. 12. "Farris threatened further attacks every time his name appeared in my paper and every time he or his tavern make news his name will be there," Jones said. Farris pleaded guilty to assault charges.

TERRIBLE TOMMY TO BE FREED ON BAIL TOMORROW

Saloon Owner Underwrites $50,000 Bond.

"Terrible Tommy" Touhy, now ill and palsied, is to be released tomorrow under $50,000 federal bond pending his appearance in St. Paul for trial on charges of participating in a $78,000 mail robbery there on Jan. 3, 1933. An order to remove Touhy to St. Paul at once, issued yesterday by United States Commissioner Walker, was stayed when Michael J. Norris, 104 South Central avenue, a tavern keeper, scheduled three different properties valued at $145,000 as bond for Touhy's release.

After Commissioner Walker ordered Touhy removed to St. Paul he was taken before Federal Judge Walter C. Lindley, where his attorney, Joseph Roach, pleaded for a reduction of the bond to $25,000. This request was denied and Roach produced Norris. Judge Lindley then continued the hearing to tomorrow to permit the district attorney's office to examine the schedules. Touhy was remanded to the custody of the sherif. He is being held at the County hospital.

Touhy Appears Weaker.

Yesterday Touhy appeared even weaker than on Friday, when he was pointed out by a former pal, Leon Emphier, now a federal prisoner, as a participant in the mail robbery. The former leader of the Touhy gang was unable to remove his hat himself, and he entered practically carried by two deputies. Emphier was taken to St. Paul yesterday.

"If Touhy is returned to jail he will not live to appear at St. Paul," Attorney Roach said. "It's evident that this man can't escape. The government has no right to sentence him to death by refusing to permit him to make bond."

U. S. Fights Bail.

Raymond Drymalski, assistant United States attorney, fought the bond reduction move. "If this man is freed on bond I don't think he would ever appear again," he said. "He has everything to lose [if he stands trial] and nothing to gain."

Drymalski then observed that the warden at the County hospital reported that Touhy is now in better condition than when he entered the hospital.

This roused Touhy. "The warden never seen me," he said indignantly.

Mrs. Jessie Touhy, faded blonde wife of Touhy, sat near him as the hearing progressed. As the prisoner was returned to the custody of the sherif a young woman exclaimed, "It will kill my daddy!" She was Mrs. Marie Ryan, Touhy's daughter by a former marriage.

270,000 CITY AUTO STICKERS SOLD; MAYOR PLEASED

Mayor Kelly expressed satisfaction yesterday over the sale of 1936 city vehicle tax licenses after Peter J. Brady, city clerk, reported the issuance of 270,582 automobile stickers totaling $2,540,234. During all 1935 the city issued 484,000 city automobile licenses. Robert Upham, city controler, said he would not ask the police department to arrest motorists driving without 1936 licenses until he receives a complete report from the secretary of state on the sale of state licenses. It was announced yesterday that for the convenience of motorists who have not yet obtained their state license plates the local branch office at 120 South Ashland boulevard will be open today from 9 a. m. to 5 p. m.

FORTUNE GONE; HELD IN THREAT TO ROOSEVELT

Seize Retired Engineer as Writer of Notes.

New York, Jan. 11.—[Special.]—Austin Phelps Palmer, a retired mechanical engineer and sportsman, was arrested by secret service agents today in his Park avenue apartment on a warant charging him with threatening President Roosevelt with bodily harm.

Palmer, according to the federal agents, admitted after his arrest that he had written to the President a series of threatening and defamatory letters whose source the government had been seeking for about two months.

Although the contents of the letters were not disclosed, it was said that Palmer blamed him for the loss of his fortune of more than $1,000,000.

Described as Mild Mannered.

Palmer is 52 years old, gray haired and soft spoken. His neighbors in the big apartment building at the Park avenue address described him as a mild mannered man, quiet and not given to indulgence in heated arguments on politics or other subjects. He seemed stunned when the secret service agents entered his apartment, but readily agreed to accompany them.

With his man servant, Karl Nillsen, he was taken before United States Commissioner Garrett W. Cotter. Arraigned this afternoon, Palmer, who was not represented by counsel, asked for an adjournment until Jan. 24 and his request was granted. He was held in $2,000 bail. Friends supplied bond and Palmer hurriedly left.

The first threatening letter to the President, the federal agents said, was sent to the White House. The second, typed on a telegraph blank, was sent to Warm Springs, Ga., where the President was spending the holidays.

Piece Clews Together.

The first letter, however, bore a return address of 1085 Park avenue, which had been ineffectively erased, giving the secret service agents their clew. The agents first went through the files of the renting agent for the Park avenue property and after painstaking search found the clew—a defective typewriter key—which led them to Palmer's apartment.

Palmer had written two complaints to the renting agent and it was by comparing the threats with these, the agents said, that he was identified as the writer of the letters to the President. He is described as a graduate of Columbia university, class of 1906, and is said to be a member of the New York Athletic club, the Crescent, the Anglers, and the Westchester-Biltmore clubs.

BILL WOULD PERMIT BAY STATE HUSBANDS TO COLLECT ALIMONY

Boston, Mass., Jan. 11.—(AP)—The husband, often portrayed as the one who "pays and pays," could collect alimony from his wife if he sought divorce on any one of several grounds named in a bill filed today in the state house of representatives.

Should the grounds be impotence, adultery, desertion, or gross and confirmed intoxication, among others, the bill provides, the husband seeking a divorce could be granted alimony.

John Malcolm MacCauley, investigator in the public welfare department of the city of Revere, was sponsor of the bill.

SEE BRITISH PLAN TO PASS BUCK TO U.S. IN NAVAL ROW

Tell Scheme to Let America Balk Jap Program.

BY DAVID DARRAH.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Jan. 11.—With tension between Tokio and London reported to be growing higher as a result of the situation in China, various stories were going the rounds in French and Italian circles today to the effect that the Americans are being artfully used by the British in the latter's struggle with the Japanese.

According to the views held by the Italians and French, the British are growing more and more fearful of Japanese moves southward in China and especially of Japanese commercial competition in Asia and India. The British are unable to meet this because of inability to modernize their industry.

Schemes for Naval Parity.

Japan, according to this theory, has been trying unsuccessfully to sow discord between Great Britain and the United States, hoping to gain recognition of naval equality from this situation.

[The London naval conference is scheduled to hold its last sessions this week and is expected to break up over the Japanese equality demand.]

According to the Italians the British sought skilfully to keep in the shadows and let the American delegates and the Japanese do the fighting over the parity demands.

But, according to the continental delegates here, Tokio has been aware all along that it was not Washington, but London, which was blocking the parity claims. The United States, according to this view, has other means to defend its interests in Asia than by sending its Atlantic fleet to the Pacific.

The boycotting of Japanese products and refusal to sell the Japanese raw materials would quickly bring the Japanese to time in the case of America, it is held.

But Britain, in confrontation to Japan, is practically disarmed.

Fleets at Three Points.

The British fleet would have to be concentrated at three points vital to the empire, in the English territorial waters to defend the British Isles proper, in the Mediterranean to defend the route to India, and at Singapore to close the passage of any fleet seeking to attack India.

According to some reports tonight, the Japanese Admiral Nagano went further than he intended in his insistence upon parity this last week. The diplomats of the foreign office are now trying to repair their position which the militarists have damaged, it is said. That explains why Monday's meeting of the conference may be postponed so as to allow Tokio to devise a new tactical position.

Phillips to Report on Parley.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 11.—(AP)—A first hand report on the London naval conference will be brought to Washington within the next fortnight by William Phillips, undersecretary of state and one of the American delegates. This was announced today by Secretary Hull.

Secretary Hull said at his press conference that Phillips' departure from the London deliberations had no connection with a threatened collapse of the parley due to Japanese insistence on naval parity with the United States and Great Britain.

Japan Hedges.

TOKIO, Jan. 12.—[Sunday.]—(AP)—Japan decided today to try conciliation before walking out of the London conference and dooming continuation of naval limitation.

High officials of the navy and foreign offices decided to instruct the delegation to avoid a direct vote on the common upper limit principle and to continue talks with other delegations.

These instructions are subject to cabinet approval before they are dispatched to London. A special session of the cabinet was called for 1 p. m. today to act on them.

Rear Admiral Walter N. Vernou of the United States naval base at San Diego, Cal., stopped briefly in Chicago yesterday on his way to Washington on a United Air Lines plane. At the capital, with eight other admirals, he will confer on the selection of captains and commanders from the list of lieutenant commanders.

LEADERS READY TO SPEED BONUS THROUGH SENATE

Favor Small Bonds as Payment Method.

joy by the administration, whose spending record will be under attack in the campaign this fall. For this reason President Roosevelt is expected to veto any bill sent to him and let congress, where the bonus is a nonpartisan issue, shoulder the responsibility.

Aside from providing a method of payment, the proposed bond bill would not differ materially from the house bill, which also provides for 3 per cent interest on certificates not cashed before April 6, 1937. For this reason it is believed the house would accept it readily.

The bond scheme also is acceptable to supporters of the Byrnes-Steiwer bill in the senate. Their measure pushes back the date of issue from 1925 to Nov. 11, 1918, so that the certificates would mature on Nov. 11, 1938. The matured value would be payable any time, so that their present value would be approximately 98 per cent.

Will Take 4 Months to Pay.

Senator Steiwer explained that any kind of bonus bill would require at least four months for payment and that, for this reason, his bill would provide approximately the same cash value as the others under consideration.

It is estimated that the services of 2,000 employés of the veterans' bureau will be required for four months making the calculations on interest and loans that will be required before actual payment of the bonus. The number of certificates now in force, as of Nov. 30, was 3,522,709, having a face or 1945 maturity value of $3,470,410,160. From this, however, the principal, but not the interest on loans outstanding, will be deducted.

The adjusted service certificate fund, started in 1924 as a sinking fund for retirement of the certificates in 1945, has been badly depleted, amounting at the last report to only $256,000,000.

1,600 ITALIANS FALL INTO TRAP; 800 ARE SLAIN

Fascists Flee Ethiopian Ambush in Terror.

DESSYE, Ethiopia, Jan. 11.—[U.P.]—Four Italian prisoners, captured in the battle of Endoshek, near the Takkaze river on Dec. 14, today said Italian losses in the fight had approximated 800 men.

The prisoners said an Italian column of 1,600 men had been ambushed and "apparently half of them fell." They also reported that 10 tanks had been captured from the Italians.

The prisoners were two engineers and two tank men. They were weary of the war and dressed in shabby uniforms, with holes in their shoes.

"The advance column of 1,600 was ambushed and radioed an appeal for the tanks to come and lead the attack," they said. "We started with two camions, one officer, 16 men and 10 tanks.

"Sudden Ethiopian firing opened on all sides. The officer was killed and the men leaped from the camions and ran. Some were killed and others escaped in the bushes, where they later were captured. The drivers of the leading tank were shot and as the tank then blocked the way of the other nine, they, too, were forced to halt.

Italian Soldiers Terrified.

"Two of us were in the last tank. We saw men climb out of the tanks and shot in short order. We remained inside and when the Ethiopians came they opened the door, which we had forgotten to lock. We called out, 'Friends' and they captured us. We were not injured.

"Meanwhile, the column of 1,600 realized it was surrounded and was ordered to retire rather than risk a brisk fire from the unseen foes. The Italians were terrified and panicky and apparently half of them fell. One was found dead, untouched. Apparently he had died from fear, holding the picture of his fiancée."

Ethiopians Menace Makale.

[Copyright: 1936: By the New York Times.]

ADDIS ABABA, Jan. 11.—While the northern battlefront is being soaked by torrential rains, an unconfirmed report received here today said Emperor Haile Selassie's troops had entered the outskirts of Makale.

This city, capital of the Tembien district, has been in Italian hands for the last two months. It was the furthest limit of the Italian advance at the outset of the war. For more than a week the Ethiopians have been threatening the city from three sides. Its recapture was claimed in Ethiopian quarters to be imminent, although the town was known to be strongly fortified by the Italians.

So many tanks have been captured from the Italians that Emperor Haile Selassie is contemplating the formation of an Ethiopian tank corps. The total Ethiopian tank strength is now twenty-four.

Rome Reports Fierce Fight.

ROME, Jan. 11.—(AP)—The government announced today that Ethiopian forces had suffered heavily in a fierce fight in which Italian infantry, artillery, and aviation combined.

Three Italian officers, and three native soldiers were killed, while five natives were wounded, an official communique said.

The engagement, it was announced, occurred yesterday when Italian troops attacked Ethiopian forces around the confluence of the Gabat and Gheva rivers.

Another official announcement said 521 native troops were killed in the Ethiopian campaign between Oct. 3 and Dec. 31. This number included 477 Askaris [Eritrean native troops] and 44 Dubats [native troops from Italian Somaliland].

Italy Charges Jugo-Slavs Help Soldiers to Desert

BELGRADE, Jugo-Slavia, Jan. 11.—(AP)—Newspapers reported today that many Jugo-Slavs had been arrested in and about the Italian city of Trieste. The arrests, the reports said, were believed based on an Italian charge that the Jugo-Slavs had aided Italian soldiers in deserting to Jugo-Slavia.

New Plan to Split Up Ethiopia and "Rescue Italy" Reported

BY EDMOND TAYLOR.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, Jan. 11.—The problem of how to save Italy from the consequences of its Ethiopian adventure is getting down to cases, according to information from various well informed sources tonight.

The question is what sort of plan can be evolved and held in reserve pending a great Italian offensive, which apparently is due to start in February, and for which Marshal Pietro Badoglio, Italian commander in chief in Africa, has asked and received 80,000 fresh troops.

Since the failure of the Hoare-Laval peace plan France has been unable and unwilling to take the initiative again, and a smaller country had to be sought to serve as mediator.

Belgium Picked for Rôle.

According to Paris newspapers as well as Rome dispatches, the favorite for this rôle is Belgium. King Leopold III. of the Belgians already has paid two visits to Great Britain, one of which was a prelude to the Hoare-Laval undertaking.

Also current is a report that since the death of his queen, Astrid, King Leopold has been extremely depressed and has sought consolation in the religion in which he was raised. It is rumored that the Roman Catholic church is helping in the effort to find a satisfactory compromise solution for the Italo-Ethiopian differences.

New Plan Outlined.

According to Genevieve Tabouis, writing in the daily newspaper Oeuvre, the plan now under consideration would consist, first, of sending a committee of inquiry to Ethiopia. This inquiry would be followed by action by the league of nations committee of thirteen, which was set up some weeks ago to seek peace.

This action might take the form of a league mandate, to be offered first to Great Britain and France, and with which Italy would later be associated. The final result might be expected to be the division of Ethiopia into zones of influence, one of which would be given to Italy as proof that Il Duce's campaign had not been entirely in vain.

Such a plan, it is contended, would be less out of harmony with the league of nations covenant than the Hoare-Laval scheme, which proposed to give Italy two-thirds of Ethiopia, and it is possible it could be approved by the committee of thirteen after discussion.

Doubt Ethiopia Would Accept.

Doubt remains as to whether this would satisfy Emperor Haile Selassie of Ethiopia. Moreover, news from Geneva tonight to the Paris newspaper Temps said league circles do not consider it feasible to send a committee to Ethiopia, thus casting the first cold water on the new plan.

Meanwhile, it was confirmed that contemporaneously with the league council meeting at Geneva on Jan. 20, both the committee of thirteen and the committee of eighteen will be called. The former may consider the new peace plan, if any actually is made, and the latter will almost surely be forced to consider the question of an oil embargo against Italy.

Duce Puts Action Up to League.

ROME, Jan. 11.—(AP)—Premier Mussolini put the next move in the diplomatic impasse surrounding the Ethiopian war up to the league of nations today by postponing a meeting of his Fascist grand council from Jan. 18 until Feb. 1.

By that time the league council, which will meet on Jan. 20, presumably will have decided whether to apply an oil embargo against Italy. Il duce then can act with his council on any developments.

Italy, through authoritative sources, scoffed at suggestions that an oil embargo would halt the war, but warned that the proposal should not be revived. The army, it was said, "has enough oil for a substantial time" and the embargo would hit "only the civilian population."

Despite this, these sources said, Italy's attitude, formerly interpreted by the phrase "an oil embargo means war," is unaltered. An embargo would be regarded as a "very serious thing," it was declared.

ESCAPED CONVICT SEIZED HERE; ON JOB AS ENGINEER

William Houston, 28 years old, who escaped from the honor farm of the Wisconsin state penitentiary at Waupun on Dec. 3, was arrested here yesterday by Sergts. Edward Dooley and Donald Coakley. They traced him through information forwarded by the warden at Waupun.

Houston was seized in the boiler room of an apartment building at 5604 Drexel avenue, where he was working as an engineer. Police learned he got the job through James Evans, 7156 Euclid avenue, whom he met in prison.

Evans was held for investigation. He is the son of Joseph P. Evans, city prosecutor of Prairie du Chien, Wis. He was freed from the penitentiary in November, after serving a term for burglary.

Evans admitted getting work for Houston, but denied knowing of his escape. Police also took into custody John L. Crawford, 39 years old, who was with Houston in the building.

SHERIF PROBES RAIL BLAST; FAST FREIGHT IS SAVED

Sherif Lawrence A. Doolittle of Lake county and railroad detectives last night were investigating a dynamite blast early yesterday which tore up a switch and a section of track on the Elgin, Joliet and Eastern railroad, a mile and a half south of Mundelein.

A fast freight train, bound for Waukegan, was saved from being wrecked by the quick work of the crew of a southbound freight which was on a siding three-quarters of a mile away. Engineer James McBride and Fireman Stephen Bayce heard the explosion, which was felt in Mundelein, and ran back along the tracks. They set out flares which stopped the fast freight, which was carrying valuable merchandise.

A short distance from the scene of the blast the tracks are elevated over highway 54. Sherif Doolittle and Chief Charles Meyers of the railroad police said thieves may have planned to derail the train, steal part of its cargo, and place the merchandise in trucks waiting on the highway. Possibility of communist vandalism was also being considered.

SEAS FREEDOM BLOC DELAYING NEUTRALITY LAW

Senators Balk at Changing U. S. Policies.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 11.—(AP)—A freedom-of-the-seas bloc within the senate foreign relations committee was reported holding out tonight against any abandonment of traditional American trading rights under the pending neutrality legislation.

The committee was affected by the insistence of a group numbering Senators Borah [Rep., Idaho] among its members. That bloc was described as contending the legislation in no way should surrender the traditional right of a neutral to do business in time of war and carry cargoes on the high seas.

Changes President's Authority.

The latest change made in the bill by the committee struck out authority for the President to restrict exports of war materials upon a finding that "by refraining he would contribute to a prolongation of the war." The committee substituted therefor authority for the President to do so when such action would preserve neutrality or "protect the lives and commerce" of its citizens.

Chairman Gerald P. Nye [Rep., N. D.] of the munitions committee predicted another week of questioning of J. P. Morgan and his associates would produce a growing record of modifications in world war neutrality policy, coinciding with crises in the business of supplying war materials to the allies. The two senate committees will be working simultaneously.

To Hear Other Bankers.

In addition to Morgan and his partners, Thomas W. Lamont and George Whitney, the munitions committee has called representatives of the National City bank and the Guaranty Trust company, both of New York.

Nye today saw the record of the Morgan investigation to date, which has dealt with changes in Woodrow Wilson's neutrality policy at such times as they became necessary to the financial community, as bearing out the need for the most scrupulously guarded neutrality.

"There has been a demonstration," Nye said, "of the utter fallacy and folly of anticipating that anything short of a hard and fast neutrality policy has even a slim chance of saving us from an easy repetition of what happened in 1917. It is a demonstration of the part commerce and banking played in violating and altering our neutrality policy."

Show Favor for Allies.

The previous testimony has shown the Morgans and the National City bank from the start favored the allied cause.

Senator Bennett Champ Clark [Dem., Mo.] has baldly charged the Morgans with precipitating foreign exchange crisis to put "leverage" on the Wilson administration for removal of the ban on loans. This the Morgans heatedly denied with J. P. himself asserting such an action was never contemplated.

Morgan Friendly with Cameraman

ADVISES TESTS FOR AIRSHIP LINE IN NO. ATLANTIC

[Copyright: 1936: By the New York Times.]

FRIEDRICHSHAFEN, Germany, Jan. 11.—Dr. Hugo Eckener, in an article published here today, admits that the possibility of maintaining a Zeppelin service on regular schedule over the North Atlantic must first be tested. He is, however, optimistic.

Dr. Eckener states that in the first place large areas of depression would force a Zeppelin to make considerable detours, which would have to be taken into consideration in making up a trans-Atlantic schedule. Secondly, he points out, there are often many minor storm centers in the North Atlantic that a Zeppelin would have to dodge, although he declares they would in themselves constitute no serious threat to the ship's security.

The veteran airship commander asserts that the new German LZ-129 is a decidedly stronger ship than those that crashed in America. He explains the chief difference is to be found in the construction of the rings forming the ship's main body. He states that the safety factor in communication is mechanically complete.

$4,600 IN NOTES HELD BY EX-WIFE TIED UP BY WRIT

Circuit Judge George Fred Rush yesterday granted a temporary injunction restraining Mrs. Ella Kolb, 42 years old, 2507 Catalpa avenue, from disposing of or collecting $4,600 in notes given by Norbert U. Kolb, 42 years old, 6149 North Talman avenue, before their divorce on Jan. 26, 1934. Kolb told the court his former wife received $19,000 under a property arrangement in 1932 and that he later signed notes for $6,500 which she "exacted prior to getting the divorce." Kolb contends this was an illegal consideration. He said $1,900 has been paid on the notes.

INDICT OFFICIALS AT DECATUR, ILL., IN VICE CRUSADE

Mayor, Police Chief, and Prosecutor Named.

Decatur, Ill., Jan. 11.—[Special.]—Mayor Harry E. Barber, Chief of Police Jack Cooper, and Arthur Frazier, state's attorney of Macon county, were named today in seven indictments returned here by a special grand jury which for the last six weeks has been investigating vice conditions in Decatur. Malfeasance in office, bribery, and embezzlement were among the counts contained in the indictments.

The indictments were returned before Circuit Judge C. Y. Miller by a grand jury which heard the details of an investigation conducted under the supervision of Attorney Charles S. Evans, appointed by the court as special attorney.

Mayor Has 3 Years to Serve.

Mayor Barber, elected to office for a 4 year term in the spring of 1935, was charged specifically with malfeasance in office, with failure to file a sworn statement of his campaign contributions, and with embezzlement of public funds while he was chairman of the board of township supervisors prior to his election as mayor.

$1,000 Bribe Is Charged.

State's Attorney Frazier, elected in 1934, was charged with accepting a bribe of $1,000 from Roy Hunter, now serving a penitentiary term as a parole violator, with malfeasance in office and with the embezzlement of $5,306 in county funds. The funds were alleged to be fines and fees which he purportedly failed to turn over to the proper authorities.

The Rev. Homer E. Sala, pastor of the First Christian church, was foreman of the special grand jury which began to investigate the vice conditions and the alleged alliance of crime and politics in Decatur during the early part of December. Seven persons, all tavern keepers, also were named in indictments returned today by the jury.

Free Under $1,000 Bond.

Warants for the arrest of the mayor and the chief of police were served upon them tonight. They remained at liberty under bond of $1,000. Their arraignment was set for Tuesday morning.

State's Attorney Frazier was in the Edward Hines Jr. Memorial hospital at Maywood, a Chicago suburb, undergoing treatment for an ailment which had its origin in the war. He left Decatur last Thursday night.

FLEXIBLE GLASS PUT ON EXHIBIT IN SCIENCE MUSEUM

A piece of flexible glass which is seven times as hard to break as ordinary plate glass is on exhibit at the Rosenwald Museum of Science and Industry. It is the special attraction for January of the museum's new monthly program of exhibits of newest development in research.

The new type of glass, which is displayed as a slab bent like a springboard under a weight at one end, is used for port holes on the liner Normandie. John A. Maloney, assistant to O. T. Kreusser, director of the museum, explained it is not practical for automobiles because when it does break it shatters into thousands of pieces.

Next month's special exhibit will be the most powerful magnet ever developed. Artificial rubber will be shown in March. Other scientific novelties to come include a pipeless organ and a device for measuring color so that exact shades may be ordered by number.

50 PLANES PLAN TO JOIN FLEET FOR EXERCISES

Jacksonville, Fla., Jan. 11.—(AP)—Twenty marine corps planes will leave here tomorrow for Miami to prepare for the flight of fifty craft to San Juan, Porto Rico, to join in winter maneuvers of the United States fleet.

The combined group will be divided into three units for the over-water jumps, the first will leave Miami for Moron, Cuba, tomorrow.

Maj. A. C. Larken, executive officer for aircraft 1, of which the squadron is composed, said the thirteen bombing planes will be the first to depart. They will be followed on Monday by thirteen observation planes. On Tuesday the remaining 24 craft—pursuit, transport and liaison planes—will take off.

The squadron will remain in groups until Port au Prince, Haiti, is reached. There they will combine into a unit again. Lieut. Col. Roy S. Geiger is in command of the flight.

Hawaiian Food and Music Liven Union League Dance

Members of the Union League club and their guests dined on Hawaiian food and danced to Hawaiian music at the league's annual dinner-dance last night in the club, Jackson boulevard and Federal streets. DEMOCRATS BUSY ON CANDIDATE TO REPLACE HORNER

Announcement of Ticket Head Likely Tonight.

Selection of a candidate to head the Democratic state ticket in place of Gov. Henry Horner was started yesterday at an informal conference of Cook county and downstate leaders of the party in the bungalow on the roof of the Morrison hotel.

Some thirty Democrats, holders of public office and members of the Cook county and state central committees, attended the meeting. Secrecy surrounded their discussions except for an occasional burst of applause—one of which followed a speech by Mayor Kelly—but no candidates were mentioned, according to P. A. Nash, Cook county chairman and national committeeman.

Committees Report Tonight.

The only action taken, Mr. Nash insisted, was the appointment of two committees of eight members each, one for Cook county and one for downstate. As a result of the meetings last night and this afternoon these committees are to arrive at their respective recommendations for a gubernatorial candidate, and perhaps for an entire state slate and report to the full group tonight.

Predictions were made by several conferees on leaving the session that the name of the candidate to be supported by the organization would be announced at tonight's meeting. That the announcement would dispell any lingering hope that Gov. Horner might have that the organization wouldn't reject his candidacy was conceded by the nature of the proceedings and the comments of the leaders.

The Cook county committee was appointed by Chairman Nash. Its members are Appellate Judge John J. Sullivan; Ald. Jacob M. Arvey [24th]; Joseph L. Gill, county treasurer; Sherif John Toman; Frank Zintak, clerk of the Superior court; Clayton F. Smith, president of the county board; Edward J. Kaindl, county recorder; and Ning Eley, representing country towns in Cook county.

The Downstate Committee.

On the downstate committee are John P. Devine, Dixon, speaker of the Illinois house; Howard L. Doyle, Decatur, United States district attorney; Walter Williams, Benton, Works Progress administrator in the Harrisburg district; William Ryan, Danville; Chester Thompson, Rock Island, member of congress; E. V. Champion, state's attorney of Peoria county; Leonard Condon, Rockford; and James O. Monroe, Collinsville, state senator.

No comment would be made by the leaders on whether there was any significance in the fact that Bruce Campbell, Belleville, state chairman, and John Stelle, McLeansboro, state treasurer, were not members of the downstate committee. Both were at the meeting, however, and both have been on the list of governorship candidates.

Announcement was made by the Roosevelt Democratic League of Illinois, room 311, Sherman hotel, that it is soliciting individual indorsements of Julius F. Smietanka, former internal revenue collector and school board trustee, for the Democratic nomination for governor.

BREKKE MOVES TO LIMIT CHOICE ON G. O. P. TICKET

Committee Leaders Fight Proposal.

Eden T. Brekke, Republican committeeman of the 36th ward, was sending out a request yesterday to the 61 members of the Cook county Republican central committee for a meeting of the committee to be held tomorrow at Henrici's restaurant.

Brekke is calling the meeting to seek the adoption of a resolution that would pledge the committeemen to support only candidates who receive 80 per cent of the total vote represented by the committeemen for the Republican nomination to city, county and state offices. His proposal was immediately attacked by officers of the committee.

Against Spirit of Law.

In a strongly worded statement William H. Weber and Edward F. Moore, chairman and secretary respectively of the county committee, denounced the proposal as giving to 21 per cent of the voting representation the power to defeat the wishes of a majority.

"We are opposed to the adoption of this resolution," read the Weber-Moore statement, "because it is contrary to the spirit and purport of the primary laws of our state. To entrust a small minority of 21 per cent of the voting representation with the right to defeat the will of the great majority is repugnant to that great system.

"There is also a grave danger under this resolution if adopted, through a small subservient group of committeemen, to enable our Democratic opposition to impose its will upon our electorate, thereby defeating our two party system. Let the rule of the majority prevail."

Deny Favoring Resolution.

There were reports that Brekke had told committeemen that the Illinois Republican Citizens' organization favored the resolution. Weber and Moore immediately wrote to the organization asking whether this representation of its position was correct. The answer was an emphatic no.

"The Illinois Republican Citizens' organization never has and would not presume to urge or sponsor the adoption of this or any resolution whatsoever by the Cook county Republican central committee," the reply read.

Burtt, wife of the assistant commandant of Fort Leavenworth, tonight offered $1,000 for the return "dead or alive" of her wire haired terrier, Bobby, missing since Jan. 2. Col. and Mrs. Burtt, she explained, are childless and the dog held more than the usual affection extended a pet.

100 Girls Enter

The federal government's $5,000 "winter resident school for girls," just opened by the National Youth administration at 5123 South Park way, was the scene of a gay "open house" last night.

A hundred girls, brought from all over Illinois at taxpayers' expense for a three month course in what officials term "community leadership" gathered in the reception hall for their first merry get-together.

Led by Miss Effey Stewart, musical instructor, they opened the evening with "America the Beautiful," followed it with "It Isn't Any Trouble Just to S-M-I-L-E, Smile" and ended with one of the new folk dances which they will learn to take back to the folks at home, a skipping dance entitled "Here We Go Loop the Loop on a Saturday Night."

William J. Campbell, state director for the National Youth administration, welcomed the girls, who, he says, are being schooled at a cost of $16 a month for each girl.

ADMITS HOOVER MIGHT BE RIGHT ON ICKES BLAST

Washington, D. C., Jan. 11.—[Special.]—An admission that former President Herbert Hoover "might be right" in declaring that the Supreme court never had found unconstitutional any act of congress in his administration was made here today by Robert H. Jackson, assistant general counsel to the treasury department.

Jackson repeated on two occasions a remark attributed by Hoover to Harold L. Ickes, secretary of the interior, that some acts approved by Hoover were unconstitutional.

Jackson insisted that the courts had upset three bills signed by Hoover, but he was quite ready to accept the explanation of William D. Mitchell, attorney general in the Hoover administration, that the bills were passed in the terms of Hoover's predecessors.

"There Is No Answer."

ST. THOMAS, Virgin Islands, Jan. 11.—(AP)—Harold Ickes, secretary of the interior, asked for comment on former President Hoover's request for an apology for a statement which Hoover attributed to Ickes, said today.

"There is no answer."

W.C.T.U. Plan Advertising Campaign Against Liquor

The Women's Christian Temperance union will use posters, billboards, and newspaper advertising in its 1936 campaign against alcoholic liquors, it was announced at the headquarters of the organization in Evanston yesterday. Some newspaper advertising has already appeared in New York, and a series of small signboards has been erected on highways between New York, Albany, and Buffalo. Visual education, exhibits, and the radio will also be used in the drive.

'SEA MONSTER' IS REPORTED IN HIGHLAND LAKE

A report that there is a sea monster in Highland lake, two miles east of the village of Round Lake, in Lake county, was made yesterday by Hayden Stuhley, 24 years old, a Kewanee boxer, who was fishing in the lake Thursday. Stuhley said the creature almost pulled him in as he was fishing through the ice. Joseph Amann of Round Lake, declared he had had experience with such a creature. It has a horselike head, the body of a snake, and a large golden mane, he said.

SHERIF CALLS 100 POLICE TO EVICT 1 WOMAN

First Ouster in Sunnyside Mortgage "Strike."

New York, Jan. 11.—[Special.]—The prospect that the embattled mortgage strikers in Sunnyside gardens would resist the dispossession of one of their number, scheduled for Monday, loomed as efforts of Sherif William F. Brunner and leaders in the Queens housing development failed to stay the proceedings.

Sherif Brunner announced that he could legally wait no longer to evict Mrs. Corinne Thal and her husband from their home under the terms of an order of assistance obtained from the Supreme court by the Merchants' Indemnity company, which foreclosed a first mortgage on the Thal home and bought the property on Dec. 5.

100 Police to Help Sherif.

Realizing the temper of the mortgage strikers, Sherif Brunner made arrangements with the borough police commander to obtain 100 policemen to assist him in carrying out his duty.

Mrs. Thal, who was named defendant in the foreclosure proceedings, is the first of the mortgage strikers to face eviction, although ten other homes have been foreclosed and about 285 foreclosure actions are awaiting trial. The strike began a year ago in an effort to force the cancellation of all indebtedness underlying the first mortgage and a reduction of interest rates on the first lien.

Peter J. McGarry, Brunner's predecessor as sherif, tried to evict Mrs. Thal on Dec. 30 but met such resistance from her sympathizers he turned over the order of assistance to Brunner. The same tactics used on McGarry are expected to be used against Brunner.

"Passive Resistance" Wins.

When McGarry and his assistants arrived to move the occupants and their furniture into the street they found the place crowded with men and women. All the chairs and tables were occupied and two 200 pound women were lying on the beds. McGarry and his men cajoled and threatened, but Mrs. Thal's friends would not move, and he finally gave it up.

That was within his discretion, as the writ was effective for fourteen more days.

Sherif Brunner's decision to go ahead with the eviction was announced today at a conference with Walter Fairchild, who represented Mrs. Thal and other owners of foreclosed property in the recent suits; Charles L. Weis, chairman of the home owners' mortgage committee; Thomas Herenden, a member of the committee, and Stephen J. Kelly, president of the Sunnyside Gardens Civic association.

Governor Keeps "Hands Off."

Brunner and Kelly had just returned from a conference with Gov. Lehman in Albany.

The governor told Brunner that he was very familiar with the situation, but would not interfere.

President and Mrs. Roosevelt and the President's mother, Mrs. James Roosevelt, are financially interested in the development as security holders in the promoting corporation.

JACKSON DINNERS EXPECTED TO PAY DEMOCRAT DEBT

Washington, D. C., Jan. 11.—(AP)—Democratic national committee officials estimated today that the Jackson day dinner receipts and the Philadelphia convention check would pay the party debt.

Although no exact figures are available, committee officials estimated proceeds from the dinners throughout the country would net upward of $300,000.

Philadelphia handed Chairman James A. Farley a certified check for $200,000 at the national committee's meeting Thursday as the Quaker city's successful bid for the 1936 convention.

The last committee report to congress showed unpaid obligations of $401,000.

CONTRACTOR ROBBED IN ALLEY.

THOUSANDS RAPT AT REMBRANDT ART IN INSTITUTE

BY JAMES O'DONNELL BENNETT.

How happily, how graciously the Art Institute's Rembrandt show transmutes a lesson book into an adventure toward far horizons!

By the witchery of scores of the epochal associations and charming coincidences of history the past is touched to life and radiance. Years gone these three centuries and more roll back upon us again, intimate and tender, again beautiful and real.

Delightful reunion!

For in these serene and stately galleries that whisper with the soft footfall of eager thousands our kinship with an illustrious past is established through the medium of beauty. Again we tread the pathway of days we thought were lost to us but now we find the sunlight resting upon them as of old. We see and talk and listen with folk that long since were dust, but now within this quiet gray stone palace of pictures have come alive again.

"Girl Sewing" Draws Praise.

Behold yonder "Girl Sewing" [No. 23] on the west wall of the first of the current Rembrandt galleries. Is she of the year 1655? Nay; for in her demure intentness over her work, in her gentle complacency, she is of this morning in your home. She is shyly pleased with herself and with her work, and instantly we are pleased that she is pleased.

No night intervenes between her and us. So still, yet so expressive, she comes to us across the ages like a whisper, like a smile; long, long ago death called her, but could not take her away, for young Nicolas Maes, twenty-three years old and at the opening of his best period, had stepped between and had touched the dear personality and given it immortal youth with the magic of light and color he had learned in Rembrandt's studio. "That light, that light," exclaimed Daniel Catton Rich, the institute's learned associate curator of painting—"it is both lyric and intimate!"

Visitors Bewitched.

"Bewitching!" . . . "Simply charming!" visitors murmur as they stand before the sewing girl, and it is pleasant to watch how their faces instantly mirror her smile. Note that she sits on a low platform, a household expedient against drafts that was then employed in Holland as it was in Italy. Those objects on a pillow placed on a chair to her left are an unfinished piece of lace and the implements for making it.

And so it goes throughout this exhibition, the like of which has never before been held in either Europe or America. It is a revelation of endearing intimacies and it is ingratiating history because it touches times and customs and costumes and household ways with poetry. Looking upon the superb "Young Lady with a Fan" [No. 3], east wall, gallery G 52, by the Rembrandt who was still in his twenties, we know that women of the first third of the seventeenth century knew that they looked charming in white lace collars and cuffs, even as women of today know it.

The Master 12 Years Later.

"Now look quickly across the gallery," said Mr. Rich, "at the 'Young Girl at an Open Half-Door' [No. 4] on that north wall, and see how much more subtle and subdued is the light of which Rembrandt was master twelve years later. Here the Italian influence on him is pronounced and we catch a hint of Leonardo's enigmatical smile on the face of the girl who possibly—even probably—was faithful little Hendrickje Stoffels, a good housemate and housekeeper to disconsolate widower Rembrandt and mother of two of his children."

The domestic tasks, the devotions, and the cultural enjoyments of a great, stalwart people fairly talk out to us as we pace this gallery of paintings and yonder galleries of drawings and etchings by Rembrandt and a dozen of his seventy gifted pupils—here a girl plucking a fowl, now an old woman reading, then an aged geographer looking out at us with tired eyes, his spectacles straddling the first two fingers of his bony left hand; and yonder an old woman at prayer, her countenance rapt and reconciled, ineffably sweet.

Depict Life as It Was.

All the way there moves with us the quiet, searching sense that this life long gone once was lived, that it was veracious and solid—a protesting and protestant fact which all the armies of Austria and Spain and the best generalship of Wallenstein and Tilly could not gainsay.

What did these people enjoy? We know that well, because in this spacious exhibition we stand before the very pictures they loved to have Rembrandt and his pupils paint for them—themes out of the Old Testament, the Apocrypha and the Gospels—themes out of Rome's legendary annals, a theme out of Aesop's fables—gusty themes fraught with drama and sometimes with humor.

As to Rembrandt especially, a fascinating biographical and autobiographical charm pervades the memorable exhibition. Here [No. 6] is the master painted by himself when he was fifty-three, and it is one of the greatest of the self-portraits by a man who painted about half a hundred portraits of himself—loved, indeed, to do that, even more than Whistler did. The face in No. 6 is old and sad.

Shows Self in Evil Times.

Evil times had closed in upon the painter. He had been declared a bankrupt and his house had been sold over his head. Two stoves and some screens were all that the law permitted him to remove from the once opulent abode. But there is no sign of falling artistic power in this portrait, and ten years of great work, including the "Syndics of the Guild of Clothmakers," remained to him.

In No. 10 on the north wall is more biographical interest. Here the wife of Rembrandt's youth, Saskia van Uylenburch, looks commandingly from an open window. You would not think death stands just behind her but so it is, for in 1642, the year of this portrait by Ferdinand Bol, one of her husband's best pupils, she died. It had been a love match—a rich girl marrying a painter whose position was not yet supreme. It was her dowry—and the success of the "Anatomy Lesson"—that made him a great figure in the world.

The Miller of the Rhine.

And now—most engaging autobiographical touch of all—No. 1, wherein Rembrandt, catching up some armor, jewelry and other studio properties, claps a fine plumed hat on his father the miller of the Rhine—hence the painter's name, Rembrandt van Rijn or Rhyn—and paints that lean visaged old man as a grand seigneur.

"Come close to the picture," urges Mr. Rich, our kind cicerone whose profound learning always combines exhilaration with instruction, "and mark how Rembrandt must have worked a good while over those tiny pinpoints of light in the medallion hanging from the chain, for they are built up into relief and are not mere dabs of paint. Throughout this picture Rembrandt is painting with extreme care. Note the beard and the chain and the texture of the skin. But mark this, too: Here the light rests upon the picture. Now turn again to the self portrait [No. 6] of thirty years later: Here the light sinks definitly in, with the result that it emanates instead of being imposed—seems to come out from the canvas toward you. You don't look for the source of the light. It is there!"

Portrait Sells for Song.

The portrait of father was found in London in 1910, badly gummed with paint and varnish, and it was sold for a few guineas. Soon its value was ascertained. Finally the W. W. Kimballs of Chicago acquired it and gave it to the Art Institute.

The self portrait of which we were speaking was bought by Andrew Mellon from the estate of the seventh Duke of Buccleuch. The tremendous British death duties make such purchases possible.

But we must push on, for literally millions upon millions of dollars worth of treasures await us in this breathtaking show.

Look well at Rembrandt's "Portrait of a Young Man" [No. 7]. Now—1662—he is, despite anxieties and with death only seven years distant, painting in a broader and handsomer style than perhaps ever before, and in the manner, Mr. Rich suggests, of the "Syndics" of the year before.

"So much elegance," the curator adds, "almost suggests an influence from Van Dyck, court painter to Charles I., although Van Dyck had been dead twenty years."

Masterpiece Brought In.

At this point in my visit, and as if by way of a dramatic bit of contrast to our lingering over the languid young man of fashion, the belatedly arriving chef d' oeuvre of the exhibition was borne into gallery G52 and reverently hung on the east wall.

And so we stood before Rembrandt's "Les Pelerins d' Emmaus," as the Louvre, whose brief loan to Chicago it is, labels this masterpiece among religious paintings. Whether "The Pilgrims at Emmaus" or "The Supper at Emmaus" is the more suitable title matters not. In technical radiance and in emotional poignancy the picture is equally remarkable. As to its heartsearching appeal to Christian devotees, the words of Mrs. Jameson suffice:

. . . Here we have before us a countenance pale and tender, meek and lowly of heart, adorned only with holiness and a glorified life.

Theme in New Testament.

The theme is set forth with lovely simplicity in the twenty-fourth—the last—chapter of the gospel according to St. Luke, the thirteenth to the thirty-fifth verses. There is no more beautiful piece of narrative writing in the New Testament.

Touching briefly upon technical aspects of the work, Mr. Rich said:

"Here the golden light is incomparable! It is most subtly and graciously diffused instead of spotted—nowhere a hint of bump-bump of light. To the picture's proof of Rembrandt's power of intense spiritual expression no words of mine can add anything. But I might say that there is a suggestion of Leonardo's 'Last Supper' in the attitude of Jesus and in the table lines."

History of the Painting.

I like to dwell upon the date of this "Christ at Emmaus," as Mr. Rich lists it in the very valuable catalog which he has prepared for visitors. That date is 1648—the year when the Peace of Westphalia closed the thirty years' war and brought rest to a continent that had been racked for a generation. One likes to think that the "Emmaus" was Rembrandt's thank offering on the altar of peace. He painted three pictures on this theme, did a number of drawings, and one etching, and made many studies of it.

A pathetic interest attaches to the "Emmaus" which the Louvre, far from a cheerful lender, has sent to us for a few days. It once belonged to Louis XVI., who purchased it for 10,500 francs seven years after his marriage to Marie Antoinette. After his execution the revolutionists confiscated it and it has ever since been the property of the French government.

Notable Work by Pupil.

The exhibition is so opulent that further comment must be brief. But because the picture will so interest you, there must be a paragraph on "The Adultress Before Christ" [No. 12], by Barent Fabritius, one of the master's notable pupils. Long considered a genuine Rembrandt, this picture was bought as such for $90,000 in 1912 by T. B. Walker of Minneapolis. The great Bode had declared it genuine. Bredius, another recognized authority of our time, expressed doubts as far back as 1898, and those doubts, finally justified, long clouded his reputation. At last the Rembrandt signature on the painting was pronounced spurious and it was removed. Critics now concede that Rembrandt may have retouched the forehead, eyes, nose, and left hand of the central figure—the bearded Pharisee. The hand is obviously retouched, and, apparently, very impatiently—as though Rembrandt had said to Fabritius, "Carry light down into your picture by repeating on that left hand the light in the beard!"—and had then himself dashed a brushful of paint into the hollow of the outstretched hand. "Rembrandt," said Mr. Rich, "wanted to put light into that gesture, and we can almost hear him saying, 'Why, here's your most important gesture!' and thereupon dashing in light with a broad brush."

Purchaser Walker had no redress. "Those who sold the picture," said Mr. Rich, "could have brought as many experts into court to swear to its genuineness as the other side could have brought for their contention."

THE TRIBUNE is far from wishing to vulgarize this glorious exhibition—the premier art treat of the year—by estimating it in terms of money. Such data, however, have their news value and serve a proper purpose as a lure. The figures are dazzling. The "Emmaus" alone is valued at $750,000 and the total value of the 113 paintings, drawings, and etchings by Rembrandt and his circle is estimated by Director Harshe of the institute as between eight and ten million dollars. The governments of France and The Netherlands, great American galleries, and eminent individual collectors have loaned from their choicest treasures. Chicago should be very grateful.

Art Treat in Etchings.

Neglect not the etchings!

Among them you will behold Rembrandt's amazing—yes, breathtaking—"Christ Crucified Between the Two Thieves" [No. 96], a work which measures only 15¼x17⅞ inches but which is as exciting and seems as spacious as an altar piece in a cathedral.

One of the supremely famous etchings—famous among collectors in the 17th, 18th, and 19th centuries as an almost priceless Rembrandt example is "Christ, with the Sick Around Him, Receiving Little Children" [No. 85]. That etching was long known as "The Hundred Guilder Print," from an early price paid for a very fine impression from the plate in its second state. The brilliant impression which you will see at the institute is, says Mr. Rich, valued at from $20,000 to $30,000.

A Marvel in Drawing.

Don't miss—among the drawings, which have a gallery to themselves—Rembrandt's "Road Through the Dunes with View of a Wide Plain" [No. 32]. It measures 5⅝x7⅝ inches, but you look and look for miles and miles. The thing is incredible but not tricky.

"How did he do it?" I asked.

"By the creation of differences in tone," Mr. Rich replied, "by perfect adjustment of the scale, by the placing of large spots and broad lines in the foreground and small spots in the background, and by—well, the rest is his secret, the secret of his heaven-sent genius."

Ah, treasures of the old world and of the long gone century unfolded before the thankful eyes of this new city of a new world!

TWO ALASKAN CITIES AND U. S. PIONEERS ARE QUARANTINED

ANCHORAGE, Alaska, Jan. 11.—(AP)—Five cases of scarlet fever here and two of smallpox at Palmer caused authorities to clamp strict quarantines on the little cities and bottle up the American colonists in the Matamuska valley settlement today.

Dr. Carl E. O. Albrecht, colony physician, issued four rules to the colonists. There are about 500 children in the colony.

He ordered all colonists to remain in their homes, closed the schools, including the home-to-home teaching, until further notice prohibited all public gatherings, and ordered no one to leave the valley unless vaccinated. He started vaccinating all the colony's employés.

A scarlet fever outbreak two weeks ago at Fairbanks was put under control this week, after 16 cases had been reported. Serum was flown from Juneau by pilot Joe Crosson.

GOMEZ CLINGS TO SLIGHT LEAD IN CUBAN ELECTION

HAVANA, Cuba, Jan. 11.—(AP)—Cuba returned to normal today after one of its most tranquil presidential elections but who was chosen remained uncertain.

Miguel Mariano Gomez, 45 year old coalition candidate and former mayor of Havana, continued to maintain a small lead over Gen. Mario G. Menocal, former president, and candidate of the Menocalista party. He held this lead in every province—which his followers said insured his election.

Two Claim Election as Mayor.

The third candidate, former Provisional President Carlos Manuel de Cespedes, who did not campaign, was out of the running.

Another important race, that for mayor of Havana, saw Antonio Beruff Mendieta, Marianista candidate, gain a thin margin over Pelayo Cuervo, Menocalista. Both claimed election.

The possibility of official protests was seen in some quarters. In Camaguey province Menocalistas claimed the army intimidated voters in favor of Gomez.

Women Vote First Time.

Observers pointed out that even if Menocal is not elected, he still will be a political power because his party is certain to gain a large number of seats in the house of representatives.

Newspapers all commented on the tranquility of the election, which brought comparatively few disorders. They said a good influence was lent the balloting by women, who participated in an election for the first time and took full advantage of the privilege.

The latest figures showed Gomez was leading by slight margins in every province: Havana, 15,020 to 11,623; Camaguey, 6,547 to 5,758; Santa Clara, 5,859 to 4,636; Matanzas, 3,820 to 3,301; Pinar del Rio, 4,084 to 3,377; Oriente, 6,988 to 6,189.

Secretary of the Interior Maximiliano Smith, in charge of the returns, said "at the present time it can be predicted that the coalition triumphed in at least five provinces, which means Gomez is the presidential victor."

URGES $2,700,000 FOR PEORIA AND LA GRANGE DAMS

Washington, D. C., Jan. 11.—(AP)—Expenditure of $2,700,000 on locks and dams in the Illinois river at Peoria and La Grange during the fiscal year of 1937 has been recommended by Maj. Gen. E. M. Markham, chief of army engineers.

The recommendations are contained in his annual report for the fiscal year which ended June 30.

Expenditure of $150,000 for completion of the lock at Peoria is recommended as well as $750,000 for construction of a dam at the same place. He also recommended expenditure of $1,810,000 on the proposed La Grange lock.

Other sums for expenditure on the Illinois water way recommended by him were: Dredging, $4,300,000; $18,000 for construction of permanent control house at the Dresden Island lock; $460,500 for dredging in Lake Calumet and $474,000 for maintenance.

SLAYS PROWLER

An unidentified man, about 30 years old, was shot and killed last night when Frank Zadny, 39 years old, surprised him attempting to break into living quarters on the second floor above his bakery at 4062 West 26th street.

Zadny was awakened from sleep when he heard the prowler trying to raise a bedroom window while standing on the roof of a one story building next door. The baker took his shotgun from the bakery, loaded it, and returned.

The burglar had succeeded in entering a glass enclosed rear porch, and was turning a flashlight about the enclosure. Zadny fired through a bedroom window. The burglar fell out of the rear door onto the adjoining roof, dead. He had red hair and was shabbily dressed except for a new pair of pigskin gloves. The baker has been held up twice by gunmen.

BRAZIL FINDS NEW RED PLOT LINKS AGAINST U. S. PAIR

[Copyright: 1936: By the New York Times.]

RIO DE JANEIRO, Jan. 11.—Two alleged American agents of the third internationale, who are said to have aided in the financing of the November revolt in Brazil, are reported today to have become further involved when police raided the homes of their friends.

The couple, who gave their names as Mr. and Mrs. Harry F. Berger, was arrested two weeks ago. Berger has refused to speak, but police contend that by seizing his papers and by raiding homes of friends a plot has been revealed in which the two were central figures.

It is said that the Bergers will not be deported, but will be tried under the new national security act. Both are liable to twenty years' imprisonment.

SWEDEN TO SPEND $5,100,000 TO CARE FOR 40,000 IDLE

STOCKHOLM, Jan. 11.—(AP)—Only 20,000,000 kroner [about $5,100,000] will be needed to combat unemployment in Sweden in 1936, the government announced at the opening of parliament today. In 1935 40,000,000 kroner was spent for this purpose, and in 1934 160,000,000.

Special state loans for unemployment relief have been completely paid off, it was announced. Public works assistance to Sweden's 40,000 unemployed, less than one per cent of the population, will be continued.

King Gustav, addressing parliament, declared Sweden would continue to support the league of nations in its attempts to settle the Italo-Ethiopian war.

$7,500 VERDICT IN RAIL SUIT.

Plymouth, Ind., Jan. 11.—[Special.]—A Circuit court jury today awarded $7,500 to Mrs. Winifred Kuhn of Michigan City in her $50,000 damage suit against the New York Central railroad. Mrs. Kuhn was injured when her auto struck a flasher signal in a Michigan City street center.

IERC TO ALLOT CASH IT HOPES WILL BE VOTED

Relief Stops Wednesday if Legislature Delays.

Funds to carry on relief in the 102 counties of Illinois through the latter half of January will be allocated on an "if and when received" basis at a special meeting of the Illinois Emergency Relief commission tomorrow, according to Executive Secretary Leo M. Lyons.

Relief authorities felt certain that the general assembly would provide the funds from the state treasury early this week. Alternative measures before the legislature propose the appropriation of $2,500,000, which would carry the IERC up to Feb. 1, or the appropriation of $10,000,000 to solve the IERC's financial problems for the first four months of 1936.

Mayor and Governor Disagree.

Gov. Horner, who called the relief special session of the general assembly only after pressure was exerted by the IERC, has indicated that he will approve a $2,500,000 appropriation, while Mayor Kelly is urging that the larger amount be made available for relief to avoid recurring relief crises in the immediate future.

To play safe, the IERC is expected to allocate only $2,500,000 at its meeting. Estimated requirements for January are $5,784,625, but the IERC was able to give its county units only $2,700,000 to last through the first 15 days. This left the IERC with about $84,000 in its till—a drop in the bucket as relief expenditures go.

"The meeting was called for Monday," Mr. Lyons said, "in order to prepare the IERC machinery to continue relief without any delay after Wednesday, if fresh funds become available.

Declares Speed Essential.

"There is no time to lose. Despite the allocations, we must close the relief stations Wednesday night if the money does not come through to back them up."

Lyons announced that the planned "purge" of relief rolls to weed out persons eligible for Works Progress administration jobs will begin Thursday. He intends to complete it within a week. A state-wide survey is to be made to determine, first, what relief clients eligible for WPA employment have not been certified as such, and secondly, what persons certified for the jobs have failed to take them, and why.

"We are determined to get the utmost in benefits out of the WPA program," Lyons asserted. "We are making this intensive verification of details on our side of the fence to make sure that we do get them."

SENTINELS OF REPUBLIC PLAN MOTOR TOUR TO UPHOLD CONSTITUTION

Philadelphia, Pa., Jan. 11.—(AP)—The Sentinels of the Republic will send to Florida next week an exhibit to be used in its campaign for preservation and support of the federal constitution.

Starting from Independence hall next Tuesday the exhibit will be taken south in a motorized unit drawing a trailer with sound equipment.

There will be a brief ceremony at the historic hall, and addresses will be made by Mayor S. Davis Wilson, Henry Breckinridge, New York, and Raymond Pitcairn, Philadelphia, national chairman of the Sentinels of the Republic.

The Sentinels of the Republic is described as having been organized to maintain the fundamental principles of the constitution, to fight communism, and to prevent the concentration of power in Washington through multiplicity of administrative bureaus.

PLAN AN INQUIRY ON THE QUALITY OF RELIEF COAL

Report Some Dealers Are Cheating on Grades.

Coal yards of the thirteen dealers who deliver fuel to Chicago relief families are to be watched to determine whether the dealers are receiving shipments from "grade A" mines in accordance with the terms of their contracts with the Illinois Emergency Relief commission. This was announced yesterday by Edwin R. Peterson, head of the fuel division of the Chicago Better Business bureau.

"I am going to send investigators to the yards to watch coal cars arrive, and to follow up to see just what coal is being given to relief clients," said Mr. Peterson. "There is a price differential of from 15 to 50 cents a ton between 'A' and 'B' coal."

Bills of Lading Examined.

R. J. Chesbro, procurement director of the IERC, said he was having his staf examine the bills of lading which accompany coal invoices to the IERC, to check on the sources of the relief fuel. Chesbro warned the dealers at a special meeting on Friday that he had information some of them were supplying grade B coal in place of grade A.

"We are going right on through with this," said Chesbro yesterday. "We meant what we told the dealers on Friday.

Short Weighting Also Charged.

"If that warning does not suffice, we will go to any amount of trouble and expense to prove who are the contract violators, and then proceed against their bonding companies to obtain refunds to the IERC."

The dealers were also told on Friday that widespread short weighting was depriving relief families of part of their one-half ton coal orders. With or without their knowledge, the dealers were told, several of the independent truckers hired by some of them have been retaining from 400 to 1,400 pounds of coal out of every five ton load.

TWO HELD AS SHOPLIFTERS.

Mrs. Mary Wilson, 33 years old, 965 West 18th street, and Mrs. Vivian Martin, 40, of 953 West 18th street, were held at the detective bureau yesterday as shoplifters.

MISS EDITH BEHR IS MARRIED TO W. E. STANLEY JR.

Fashionable Wedding Is Held at St. Chrysostom's.

BY JUDITH CASS.

Fashionable St. Chrysostom's church and the Casino club were crowded yesterday afternoon for the wedding ceremony and reception of Miss Edith Behr and W. Edwin Stanley Jr., who said their marriage vows at one of the largest and most beautiful weddings of the winter season. The church was decorated all in white with calla lilies, narcissus and candles.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, Benjamin Leslie Behr, wore a handsome gown of white satin and lace that had been a part of her mother's wedding gown. The lace was set in the bodice and formed the long tight sleeves. More of it trimmed the gown's long full train. She wore a white satin bandeau in her dark curls to hold a long tulle veil to her head, and she carried a bouquet of white freesias, her favorite flowers, and lilies of the valley.

Bridesmaids in Yellow.

The eight bridesmaids wore yellow accordion plaited chiffon dresses made with little capes over their shoulders, and small half-hats of stitched fuchsia silk which were worn tilted forward over their eyes. They carried bouquets of yellow freesia. The maid of honor, Miss Barbara Stanley, the bridegroom's sister, wore a similar dress in fuchsia chiffon with a matching hat and she carried a bouquet of fuchsia colored flowers.

The bridesmaids included the bridegroom's other sister, Mrs. Victor Elting Jr.; Mrs. Edgar Marston II. of New York, the former Florence Carr of Chicago; Mrs. John P. Porter, Mrs. Prentice Porter, Miss Janet Ayer, Miss Eleanor McNally, Mrs. Prindiville Biddle, and Miss Jane Brooks.

Philip B. Hosmer Jr. served Mr. Stanley as best man, and ushering were Mr. Elting, Mr. Marston, John Porter, Cyrus H. Adams III., John Borland, John E. Baker Jr., Charles S. Dewey Jr., and Robert Gray of Gardiner, Me.

Reception at Casino.

At the head of the receiving line in the Fountain room of the Casino club, formed against a background of ferns flanked by tall standards of calla lilies, the bride's mother looked stunning in a gown of brown silk, worn with a sable scarf, brown hat, and green orchids. Mrs. Stanley was in black, with a contrasting color note struck by a red camelia corsage that matched the crown of her hat. The buffet tables, decorated with vases of white roses, were placed in center of the ball oom. A stringed orchestra played continuously.

Among the guests were an uncle and aunt of the bride, Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Barstow of St. Louis.

Peek-Edwards Wedding.

Moline, Ill., Jan. 11.—[Special.]—Eloise Anita Peek, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Burton F. Peek of this city, and Richard Edwards III., Chicago broker and the son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Elbert Edwards of Peru, Ind., were married today in Christ Episcopal church here. The bride's uncle, George N. Peek, former AAA administrator and foreign trade adviser to President Roosevelt, attended the ceremony.

Miss Peek attended Rosemary hall and Vassar college and spent a winter at the Center for International Study in Florence. Mr. Edwards graduated from Harvard in the class of 1931.

New Building Code Covers Safety of Refrigerators

Chicago's revised building code, scheduled to be discussed at public hearings within the next few weeks, will contain provisions to safeguard flat dwellers from gas escaping from faulty refrigerator plants, said Frederick J. Thielbar, chairman of the code commission, yesterday. Mr. Thielbar's statement was in reply to the recommendation for such action made by a coroner's jury investigating the death of Gerald Reynick, 5438 Kimbark avenue, who was killed by refrigeration gas on Dec. 10.

DR. FERNEL SUES MEDICAL SOCIETY, ASKING $1,000,000

Dr. Jean Paul Fernel, 677 North Michigan avenue, a plastic surgeon, filed suit yesterday in the Superior court against the American Medical association, asking $1,000,000 damages for publication of an alleged libelous article in the association's official journal. Dr. Morris Fishbein is editor of the magazine, which is published in Chicago.

The bill, filed by Attorney Sam Hoffman, says an article the journal published stated that Dr. Fernel forfeited a $500 bond after he was arrested in Detroit in 1919, and accused him of unethical conduct.

The state department of registration and education revoked Dr. Fernel's license to practice in 1926 and again in 1927, but both times the license was restored by court order. He has been frequently sued by patients dissatisfied with plastic surgery operations he had performed. Last June he was ordered held to the grand jury on a charge of murder by abortion, by a corner's jury investigating the death of Mrs. Virginia Donley, 21 years old, 4036 North Mozart street. The grand jury subsequently voted a no bill, clearing the surgeon.

BEHIND $150,000 IN HIS ALIMONY; DENIED RELEASE

New York, Jan. 11.—(AP)—Charles J. Werner, who owes his former wife, Leonor Werner, $150,000 in alimony arrears, today was denied release from the alimony jail.

Supreme Court Justice Charles B. McLaughlin, in denying Werner's application for freedom, censured him severely for living in apparent luxury "while evading the payment of alimony for nearly ten years."

The matter of Werner's alimony—he is supposed to pay $1,000 a month—was ordered referred to a referee. The referee will determine whether the monthly sum is too high.

Justice McLaughlin declared that Werner owes his mother $8,000, but had been living in "rooms costing $15 or $20 a day" and "used the highest priced foreign automobiles."

WITNESS LIST KEPT SECRET IN LIGGETT MURDER

Minneapolis, Minn., Jan. 11.—[Special.]—Subpenas were issued today for witnesses against Isadore [Kid Cann] Blumenfeld, to face trial Jan. 20 as the killer of Walter W. Liggett. The witnesses' names were kept secret. There are to be about 20 witnesses.

Blumenfeld, a liquor salesman, has been identified by Liggett's widow and another eye-witness as the killer. He has been in jail since the night Liggett was killed by machine gun fire. Blumenfeld's attorney is Thomas W. McMeekin. That lawyer is assisted by W. C. Dannenberg, a Chicago private detective, said today to be in that city working on the case.

Another development today was a report received by the Minneapolis police that Leo V. Brothers, convicted slayer of Jake Lingle, CHICAGO TRIBUNE reporter, has information regarding the murder of Liggett. Brothers name entered the Liggett case through a letter written to Police Chief Frank Forestal by Mrs. Rose Jessen of Webster Grove, Mo., Leo's mother.

Mrs. Liggett today discredited the notion that Brothers knew anything whatever about the Liggett tragedy.

4 STOCK LOSERS ON STAND IN U. S. FRAUD HEARING

Leonard Rollnick of New York and two business associates yesterday heard four witnesses tell a jury in the federal court of Judge Walter C. Lindley how they were fleeced in stock transactions. Rollnick and his associates are on trial for operating a mail fraud in connection with four alleged bucket shops they manipulated here. They are said to have taken $1,000,000 from the middlewest investors.

Dr. Martin Donelson of Jackson, Miss., told of giving Rollnick and the others valuable securities and cash in return for stock in concerns which eventually went out of business. The other witnesses who testified and the amounts they lost were: Maj. Tate B. Collins of Jackson, Tenn., a retired army officer, $3,000; Peter McIntosh of Watertown, S. D., $1,700, and William Stephenson of Murphysboro, Ill., a locomotive engineer, $4,600.

SAVE INVALID AND MOTHER, 82.

1,500,000 POLES ACCUSE HITLER OF PERSECUTION

Protest Treatment; Plead for Redress.

[Copyright: 1936: By the New York Times.]

BERLIN, Jan. 11.—A public protest charging violation by the German authorities of the national cultural and religious rights of the Polish minority in Germany was issued today by the League of Poles in Germany, an organization which claims to represent the interests of 1,500,000 Poles living in Germany. The protest was made in the shape of a resolution adopted by the league's supreme council, which at the same time announced steps to appeal to Reichsfuehrer Hitler personally for redress.

The resolution which has already been published in the Polish press is remarkable for its outspoken language. It also marks the first public opposition movement of a national minority in Germany against the coordination and imposition of national socialist ideology.

Germans by Citizenship.

It is all the more remarkable because it comes from a body whose members are Poles by descent but Germans by citizenship, and therefore subject to the new German law that knows no right of individuals but only reasons of state.

In German official quarters it was said there were not 1,500,000 Poles in Germany in the first place and neither this resolution nor previous complaints from the league had any justification, but rather proceeded from erroneous presuppositions and misapprehensions of fact. At the Polish embassy it was said the Polish government had nothing to do with the manner inasmuch as the complainants were German citizens.

Whether this resolution has any significance for Polish-German relations remains to be seen. These relations have been at least very friendly ever since Hitler concluded the ten year nonaggression treaty with the late Marshal Pilsudski and not even the dispute over the treatment of Polish Jews in Germany was able to disturb them. Nevertheless since the death of Pilsudski some observers have discerned a reorientation of the Polish policy toward France, and the present resolution passed in the interests of the Poles themselves does break the Polish-German propaganda truce concluded as a part of the general political agreement.

Expect Poland to Act.

[Copyright: 1936: By the New York Times.]

WARSAW, Jan. 11.—The complaint of the Union of Poles in Germany against persecution of the Polish national minority in the reich and the decision to send a delegation to Reichsfuehrer Hitler with a request to respect the cultural and religious economic rights of the Polish speaking citizens of Germany reminded Warsaw of the existence of 1,500,000 Poles under Nazi rule facing the danger of extermination.

It was the semi-official Gazetapolska that alone published this news. This is taken as an indication the Polish government has decided to act on behalf of the Poles in Germany. The independent press has long been drawing public attention to the situation of the Polish minority in Germany compared with the treatment of the German minority in Poland.

ALL TIME RECORD SET IN FURNITURE MARKET CROWDS

All previous Chicago furniture markets have been surpassed in registrations for the first week of the current winter market, according to figures announced last night. Both the American Furniture Mart and the Merchandise Mart reported attendance at near 6,000. Attendance at the record market of last summer ran slightly over 7,000 at each mart for the entire two weeks.

A fresh influx of retailers and buyers is anticipated tomorrow as the shows reopen for the second and final week. Manufacturers stated they expect the increased buying at this show to continue at a progressive rate through the entire year, partly because the greater stress on style and efficiency of furniture has outmoded most of that now in use.

Milton C. Levy, president of the Lamp and Shade Manufacturers' Association of America, predicted that industry will do $35,000,000 worth of business in 1936, a 25 per cent gain over 1935. A similar increase for curtains and draperies was forecast by E. F. Mansure, president of the Chicago Curtain and Drapery association.

CROSSING TO BE SIMPLIFIED

SPAIN SHAKES UP ITS MILITARY COMMAND TO BOLSTER REGIME

MADRID, Jan. 11.—(AP)—The government shook up its military command today, handing key posts to officers known to be favorable to the government. The move was generally conceded an effort to fortify the government's position for the national elections, scheduled for Feb. 16.

Gen. Manuel Goded, close friend of José Maria Gil Robles, Catholic leader and former minister of war, was ousted from his position as director general of aviation, and Gen. Miguel Nunez de Prado replaced him.

In another move apparently directed at Gil Robles, who has held no ministerial post since Premier Manuel Portela Valladares took office early in December, Gen. Lopez Ochoa was made inspector-general. Gen. Lopez Ochoa directed the suppression of the revolt in Asturias in 1934, but later was assigned to an unimportant command by Gil Robles, who then held the war portfolio.

Other changes involved commanders of divisions. The cabinet agreed to submit to a congressional commission a proposal to increase the pay of all lieutenants and subofficials.

BEGIN REBUILDING OF SOUTH PARK AT 51ST TOMORROW

Workmen are to start tomorrow the 30 day task of reconstructing and simplifying the complex intersection of South Park way, 51st street, and the northwest drive of Washington park, according to George T. Donoghue, general superintendent of the Chicago park district.

The Washington monument and an island of greensward rise in the middle of South Park way, forcing automobiles to make sharp curves and causing trafic lanes to cross inconveniently. According to Otto Jelinek, park trafic engineer, the new layout will make South Park way into an unobstructed seven lane street.

The grassy island will be extended northward to surround the monument and to cut off the west service drive of South Park way entirely from the central way in that block. The way south of 51st will be straightened to run directly into the main thoroughfare north of 51st. The map shows the new arrangement with resultant simple trafic control system.

The construction work will force detours upon motorists crossing the intersection—except those driving only on 51st street.

POLAND NIPS RED PLOT IN ARMY; 6 SOLDIERS JAILED

Documents Link Moscow with Propaganda.

BY DONALD DAY.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

WARSAW, Poland, Jan. 11.—Six soldiers, members of the 36th infantry regiment, received sentences of from eight to ten years' imprisonment today after trial by a general court martial, which found them guilty of spreading communist propaganda among recruits.

The discovery of Red activities in the Warsaw garrison created a sensation, since the morale of the army is one of Poland's most sensitive points. The intelligence department of the 1st army corps is coöperating with political police, who have arrested many communists in Warsaw and other cities.

Government authorities reported that some of the prisoners admitted attending a special course given at the communist Internationale academy of propaganda in Moscow. Upon graduation, they said, they received falsified passports and funds enabling them to make their headquarters in Warsaw.

Large supplies of communist literature were confiscated. The prisoners refused to reveal the location of their printing plant. The confiscated documents included orders from the Internationale to concentrate revolutionary activities among university students and army recruits.

Political police charge that the Warsaw Reds are linked with three assistant professors and eight students of the university of King Stefan Batory at Vilna, who are now being tried on charges of plotting an uprising in Polish White Russia.

Anti-Semites Lose Appeal.

WARSAW, Jan. 11.—(AP)—The court of Appeals today upheld the sentencing of four anti-Semites to five and a half years' imprisonment each for the murder of a Warsaw Jew during a riot in June, 1934.

The two year sentences of three others of the group of 11 convicted of the murder, all members of the outlawed anti-Semitic national Radical party, were confirmed.

The one and two year sentences of four others were reversed.

Chief Rabbi of Rumania Is Shot by Anti-Semite

BUCHAREST, Jan. 11.—(AP)—Chief Rabbi Jakob Niemirower suffered a slight flesh wound in the arm today from a bullet fired at him from close quarters by one of three youths. Police, who seized one of the trio after a chase, said they were members of an anti-semitic organization, the Iron Guardists. The youths fired five shots at the rabbi, who is also a senator, while he was on his way to a synagogue.

KAISER WILHELM SOCIETY CALLED ENEMY OF HITLER

Nazis Attack and Praise Scientific Body.

BERLIN, Jan. 11.—(AP)—The Kaiser Wilhelm society, one of the most important scientific institutions in the world, celebrated its twenty-fifth anniversary today in a mixed atmosphere of praise and criticism. The commemorative exercises were widely publicized by the press, but editorial comment included sharp criticism.

Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler's own newspaper, Voelkischer Beobachter, while praising the past achievements of the organization, said the institution, which is largely supported by government funds, is a rallying point for anti-government elements.

Society Is Attacked.

"We must ask ourselves to what extent the Kaiser Wilhelm society in its present form still has a place in the national Socialist state," the paper asserted.

The Storm Troop publication Schwarzekorps Stuermer also attacked the society, and more particularly its director general, Prof. Friedrich Blum.

Savants from throughout Germany were here for the exercises. Foreign envoys, including Prof. William E. Dodd, the American ambassador, accepted invitations to attend.

Has 32 Separate Institutes.

The Kaiser Wilhelm society has been instrumental in creating thirty-two separate institutes, with far flung international connections. They include a biological station in lower Austria, an experimental and research station on the Jungfrau in Switzerland, an experimental station for micro-biology at Sao Paulo, Brazil.

It is the society's boast that men and women of every political view and from every walk of life have joined in keeping the society supplied with funds needed for scientific research in every direction.

BEG YOUR PARDON

An item on Friday incorrectly gave the name of Everett Menge, 28 years old, 1508 North Pulaski road, as the name of a man suffering from a bullet wound and charged with house breaking by the Austin police. The error was due to a City News bureau item which confused Menge's name with that of Charles Pritchard, 29 years old, 1658 Maypole avenue, who yesterday was sentenced to 60 days in the House of Correction on the house breaking charge.

TWO IDENTIFIED IN HOLDUP.

Joseph Coughlin, 608 East 89th place, and Thomas Bell, 523 East 89th place, were arrested in an auto without license plates and identified yesterday as the men who robbed George Vonrob, filling station attendant at 8919 South State street, of $7.50 early in the day.

INTERPRETED IN TERMS OF TUGWELL.

The present struggle for power because of its very nature and ingredients would not be seen clearly by any great number of people. For one thing, it is outside of normal American expectations. For another thing, the purposes of the contestants are more frequently disavowed than avowed, and even when they are made plain they sometimes seem too preposterous to be given any belief.

The justices of the Supreme court have been in a favorable position to see the direction and the purposes of the struggle. As scholars in law, intimately informed of the structural growth of the American government and trained to see what the future will make of steps taken in the present, they have in their vision the developments of which the people at large must be quite unaware. Men in the Roosevelt administration also see clearly because they have planned the seizure of power, detail by detail, giving to each period its measure of progress with the full scheme to be fulfilled as opportunity makes it possible.

No one in the Roosevelt revolution has made the general plan clearer than Mr. Tugwell. He has expounded the doctrins of the revolution as explicitly as Hamilton and Jefferson expounded the principles of the American democratic government which was to be so much their work. Tugwell was put in the agricultural department as an adviser to Wallace because it was thought that the first great step could be taken in the collectivizing of farms. The place in which he might more expectedly have been found would have been the NRA, because that was industrial and his planned society comes to its final results in the government management of industry. Tugwell realized that the approach to the last stage would be slow and that if the time were ripe for any immediate collectivism in a great field it was in agriculture, where the farmers were highly organized and easily approached by burocracy. Although an almost tragic attempt was made to seize the industrial structure in the National Recovery act, the agricultural adjustment under the direction of Tugwell was to be the real foundation of the revolution. If the attempt to gain control of the industries failed that approach could be postponed to be renewed. The great attack would be along the line of least resistance.

When the Supreme court came to the AAA it was forced to concede that the revolution already had two tremendous weapons in its hands. They were forged by the inability of the people to do two things. They can find no legal protection against the power of the government to tax and appropriate money out of public funds. It is no defense against a tax to plead that the levy will destroy. The law recognizes that the power to tax is the power to destroy. That was so clearly realized in the making of the constitution that the framers took special precautions to prevent the destruction of slavery by taxes. Now the only protection against destruction by taxation is in the ballot box. The people at any time can vote their own ruin. The courts cannot protect them. Nor can the courts protect them against unwise legislation.

An act of congress might be ruinous, but if it were within the power of congress to enact, the ballot box would be the only defense against it and then it may be too late. It may seem impossible for the American people to vote away their liberty without knowing that they were doing so, without consenting to a change in their constitution, but the Supreme court in its recent decision did the country the inestimable good of making it quite plain that American freedom can be lost by just such a construction of the constitution as was persisted in by the three dissenting justices.

It is the privilege of the American government to regulate, control, or destroy by taxation if the acts it contemplates are not beyond its delegated or implied powers. All hinges upon the interpretation of these powers. Let the general welfare clause mean what Justice Stone said it means and then the consequences are what Justice Roberts said they would be. The power to promote the welfare of the United States as revolutionaries want to promote it, by destructive taxation, could destroy the constitution of the United States without the submission of a single amendment. How clearly and dramatically Justice Roberts stated this in the conclusion of the majority opinion. Let's examine his prophecy.

Industry could be controled by taking money from one branch and paying it to another. The farmer could be taxed to regulate the product of the stockyards. A tax on lether could control the output of shoes, one on metal the output of steel, one on lumber the construction of houses. Taxes could force the decentralization of industries, move factories wherever the government wished them to operate, scatter industrial populations, move people to one place or another, control the prices of all goods, determine the amount of production of everything, dictate the hours and wages of labor, the salaries of employés, the character and profits of investments, and bring the activity of every American citizen under the dictatorship. What more can Stalin do?

Of these and other possibilities Justice Roberts remarked: "It cannot be said that they envisage improbable legislation. The supposed cases are no more improbable than would the present act have been deemed a few years ago." Nor did Justice Roberts fully explore the possibilities of a dictatorship with the power to tax in one hand and a free bill of sovereignty in the welfare clause in the other. Under those two instruments of tyranny the country could soon have been reduced to a condition of enforced labor in no way different from what prevails under despotisms in Europe and nothing in the bill of rights would have been able to stop it.

Mr. Tugwell, who has planned the Roosevelt society for its final triumph in the allocation of capital and the control of all production, was on the very threshold of success when a majority of the Supreme court judges, with their eyes fixed on the future, said that the destructive tax powers of the government could not be turned loose in their fullest violence to promote a revolution's idea of what the general welfare of the country is.

If slavery could have been destroyed by the power to tax, as the framers of the constitution plainly saw it could, then slavery could have been reëstablished by that power. Let the minority opinion so vigorously written by Mr. Justice Stone prevail, and let the people of the United States make one more mistake in a presidential election with consistent returns to congress, and Mr. Tugwell would be master of the scene with Mr. Roosevelt executing his ideas.

THE BOLSHEVIK FRAUD.

A specimen of bolshevik sophistry comes to America from Shanghai by way of the China Weekly Review, which reports an address, by the soviet ambassador to China, on "Democracy and Culture in the U. S. S. R." We like the statement that "in the soviet union there are still some people who are deprived of the right to vote [former kulaks, etc.], the number becoming smaller and smaller every year." Why the number of these "kulaks, etc.," is becoming smaller and smaller might be estimated by the larger and larger number of graves of kulaks, etc., in the U. S. S. R. The machine gun, the concentration camp and jail, forced exile and overwork in arctic forests and mines, sequestration of food and famine, have been reducing the number of those who were not and are not allowed to vote ever since, as the soviet ambassador asserts, "exploitation of man by man" was doomed by Lenin and the bolshevik party.

We like also the ambassador's distinction between "individualism" and "individuality."

"The soviets," he said, "are against individualism—a theory that says that every individual must develop his [or her] capacities, whatever they may be, good or bad, and nothwithstanding that they may be directed against the well-being of the whole society. We are against such individualism. Bct we are for the fullest development of the individual capacities of every one of our people; we believe that, when every member of human society, when every human being is able to develop his individuality to its utmost—then out of the activities of millions of individuals who never before had the opportunity to develop themselves a new rich and beautiful all-human culture will come forth that the earth has not yet seen."

It is this sort of thing, which begs the whole question raised by the soviet tyranny, that an astonishing number of the miscalled intelligentsia of America have been swallowing. Not all the human misery under the bolshevik rule, the cruelty and brazen injustice, the mass murder and persecution of free thought and conscience, the suppression of religion, free press and civil rights, the regimentation of children and the imposition upon them of bolshevik propaganda as a substitute for education have shaken the gullibility of our liberal friends of the Red autocracy. They are products of American education which American educators, those at least who are not of them, ought to view with alarm if not self-reproach.

Editorial of the Day

"SUB CAPITALS" NEXT.

[Danville (Ill.) Commercial News.]

The idea of creating "little Washingtons," "sub capitals" in ten or twelve cities scattered about the country, "to simplify and accelerate the complicated functions of the federal government," is worthy of the genius of Secretary Ickes, Secretary Wallace, Federal Relief Administrator Hopkins, and other members of the New Deal with whom it originated.

Burocracy, under this plan, would be able to spread over from Washington, where it is now cramped for room, into numerous other cities, and the number of employés on the federal pay rolls increased almost indefinitly. The plan also would offer an excuse for a new building orgy, for the agencies in the "sub capitals" would have to be provided with office space.

The amount of red tape necessary to carry on the business of the government would be multiplied many fold. Many matters submitted to the "sub capitals" would have to be referred to Washington for final decisions. Only a person who has had some contact with the government departments can appreciate what this would mean in the way of exchanging letters, and the time that would be consumed.

It never would occur to a New Dealer, of course, that the way to "simplify and accelerate the functions of the federal government" would be to simplify the structure of government itself and reduce its functions in conformity with the plan contemplated in the constitution.

METHODIST REDS

BY REMBERT GILMAN SMITH, D. D.

Gen. Grant is reported to have said that there were three political parties in the United States, the Republican, the Democratic, and the Methodist church. The kind of facts from which he drew his conclusion is still visible, and their volume is, perhaps, greater than when he expressed this conviction.

There is proof, growing almost daily stronger, that a group of prominent and powerful Methodist leaders desires to make their denomination a totalitarian church, controling the social, economic, and international life. They are seeking to do this by aggressive propaganda. They will get as many converts as possible, within and without the church, to accept and to advocate their convictions as to the needed changes in economic and political systems. They will then try to secure the necessary votes for the candidates who promise to enact the laws they desire. They prefer that these changes be made by voting rather than violence, but some of the more radical of these Methodist leaders are not quite sure that ballots will suffice, and are admitting into their minds with tolerance, if not hospitality, the possibility that bullets as well as ballots may be necessary before the existing system is destroyed.

In this, history may repeat itself. Before the war between the states the extreme abolitionists and the extreme defenders of slavery, among the Methodists, did each a guilty part in preventing the ending of slavery by peaceful methods. Some of their descendants now lean to the idea of the Third International, that an interclass war is necessary for the destruction of present day capitalism, which they hate as bitterly as their forbears did slavery.

No laborious research is necessary to find out that there is a group of influential Methodist leaders who have joined "the trek to Moscow," and they are using the influence they have in the church to get others to join them. They are dissatisfied and disgusted with the constitution, openly and caustically critical of President Roosevelt, whom they regard as too conservative. For many months these leaders have been firing a steady and bitter barrage against him, charging that he really cherishes ambition to be a Hitler or a Mussolini, and to set up a Nazist or Fascist dictatorship in the United States.

What these Methodist Reds wish is an approximation of the Russian system. They favor communism with the atheism left out, but there is reason to infer that they wish it, even with the allied atheism, if that is the only way it can be gotten, hoping, perhaps, to destroy the atheism as soon as possible. They are convinced that the system of American capitalism, under the constitution of the fathers, has completely and hopelessly broken down, that we must turn away from Madison to Marx, from Washington to Lenin, from Jefferson to Stalin, for the counsels of economic and political wisdom now needed.

The basic dogma of these Methodist Reds is that the profit motive is not morally valid. They believe that a man who desires a profit is like David when he lusted after Uriah's wife. He is in the gall of bitterness and in the bond of iniquity. If he is a farmer he should desire only a crop large enough exactly to feed his family until the next harvest; if he is a manufacturer he must fix his prices so that his income will not be any greater than the needs of himself and his dependents; if he is a preacher he must be sure that his church pays him only enough to buy the necessities for himself and his family. "Cursed be personal profits!" is the axiomatic anathema of these Methodist Reds. They greet each other daily with it in the market place and in the forum.

One of the most remarkable discoveries in the sphere of the meaning of terms has been made by these Reds. They have found out that "any group" can use the term "Methodist." Republicans, Democrats, New Dealers, anti-New Dealers, Socialists, communists, Fascists, Nazists, utopians, left wingers, centrists, right wingers, pacifists, militarists, prohibitionists, anti-prohibitionists, pro-Italians, pro-Ethiopians, pro-Japanese, pro-Chinese—are, one and all, as such, entitled to use the term "Methodist." Not since Aristotle discovered logic has there been such an illimitable inflation of the doctrin as to the meaning of terms as is this.

As a matter of stern inquiry, is it right thus to take an honorable name and to sign it to declarations such as some of those being made in bulletins and in the Crisis leaflets of the so-called Methodist Federation for Social Service? Is this not a trespass on the rights of every real Methodist in the world who prizes and reveres the name "Methodist"? At the beginning it was a term of reproach in the mouths of the worldly and the wicked. If these present day Reds persist in using it it will become soon a term of well founded reproach with those who prize political order, social stability, and peace between the rich and the poor. Why should these Russian Reds be allowed to "filch" from real "Methodists" their good name and leave them poor indeed?

These Marxist Methodists have already run a line of division through the church. Instead of drawing back and seeking to heal the breach, they call upon their disciples to follow them in their determination to make the breach a battle, the division a war. It is to be noted also that they claim the quality of "religious" for themselves. They are not, in this, following their European comrades, who scorn religion and who are boastfully secularist, charging that religion is always only the opiate of the people. In claiming that their attack on capitalism, on the profit motive, and their advocacy of communism make them "religious forces" they part company with their Russian and Mexican allies, who are ardently atheistic.

As a matter of fact, of present day importance, a man can be a Christian and at the same time a capitalist, a Socialist, or a communist in the broad meaning of these terms. Stanley Jones in his book, "Christ or Communism," is discussing a form of communism, allied with materialism, but the alliance between materialism and communism is not a necessary alliance.

The church has come down the ages, during which it has witnessed the rising and falling of many systems, and it should continue its pilgrimage, undismayed and unexcited by similar changes. In the present confusion voices are to be heard, some insisting that if capitalism is modified the church will be mangled, some warning that unless socialism or communism soon substitutes capitalism, that the church will stagnate and die out.

It is practically certain that, in the near future, capitalistic Methodists will be called irreligious by socialistic Methodists, and the compliment will, doubtless, be returned; but neither group will lose their religion because of capitalism or socialism, though each will be in danger of such loss in the temptation to judge others with uncharitableness.

Edmund Burke said it is unjust to indict a whole nation, even the then backward nation of India, but these Methodist Reds undertake to indict this nation as a whole, charging the people with cruelty, stupidity, and superstition. The New York east conference of the Methodist Episcopal church at its session in 1935 thus denounced this nation [italic this writer's]:

"The tenderness with which the sacred cow of private profits has been protected, while suffering has been indescribably inhumane, indicated both the intelligence and character of our nation."

That there are cruel, stupid, and even superstitious persons in the United States is true, and the church should seek to evangelize and educate them, but it is nothing other than gross libel to write that the nation as a whole has degenerated to so low an estate. If these Methodist Reds really believe this, why do they not get passports, emigrate to Russia where they can prostrate themselves daily before the sacred mummy of Lenin and submit themselves to the commands of Joseph Stalin?

THE LOWLY BUNION.

When our primitive ancestors walked on the soft, yielding earth they required no foot covering of any sort. When later they lived in mountainous areas rude sandals, still used in some parts of the world, protected the feet from injury.

It is related that even in ancient Egypt the sandal maker—like the shoe manufacturer of today—catered to fashion, and the north African aristocracy some thousands of years before Christ wore sandals which turned up at the toe.

As a result of natural walking the muscles of the feet were developed to a high degree. Tribes would travel great distances using beasts of burden for transporting luggage only. Civilization has served to obliterate the gentle art of walking. We now insist upon hardwood floors and cement sidewalks and streets.

With certain styles of modern foot covering there is a tendency to crowd the great toe toward the smaller toes. This produces actually a partial dislocation of the first joint, bringing on what is known as hallux valgus or bending of the great toe. As a rule the displacement occurs more frequently in women.

The cause of the deformity is primarily faulty weight bearing on the foot and follows long continued strain on the front arch [metatarsal arch]. Some types of shoes contribute greatly to the difficulty. Shoes that cramp the toes, because they are too short or too narrow, are important factors. As a result, the first joint of the great toe becomes more prominent on the inner side of the foot. It is pressed upon, injured, and insulted; and in order to protect the parts nature forms a bursa [a cushion]—commonly known as a bunion. Occasionally the second toe is likewise affected.

As we can readily understand, bunions may be the cause of great pain and sometimes inflammation is followed by an abscess. In other cases a true arthritis of the joint develops. After a time the toe loses much of its power to function as muscles waste away.

Fundamentally, bunions may be said to be shoe deformities. It is not always the fault of the shoe designer, as good shoes with plenty of room for the toes are always available. But we must be in style, hence we will suffer crowding of the toes incident to wearing a shoe that is actually too small.

There are only two methods of treatment. The first is to use a shoe which is wide enough and which has a straight inside edge so that no pressure will be exerted on the bunion. The shoe should be raised on the inner side so as to tip the foot slightly outward, thus avoiding too much weight bearing on the great toe.

The second is surgical removal of the joint or bursa. If operative procedure becomes necessary care should be taken to the end that active inflammation has entirely subsided before the bursa or the head of the metatarsal bone is removed.

In mild cases the weight of the body when standing or walking may be taken off the joint by placing a narrow bar across the sole of the shoe just behind the heads of the metatarsal bones. The pressure is thus shifted backward, relieving the great toe joint.

The habit of sparing the inner border of the foot by walking on its outer edge, if persisted in, will only substitute one deformity for another. The patient must bear his weight largely on the inner border of the foot if he is to prevent an even more distressing state of affairs, namely, the development of painful joints in the ball of the foot.

SENSITIVE TO COLD.

Mrs. G. H. W. writes: As soon as cold weather begins my misery begins, too. Even temperatures around 40 to 45 give me much discomfort. The face and nose are very sensitive to cold air, which causes congestion, with much headache, pain in the eyes and jaws. I have used many cold remedies which have not helped at all. I think my system is very acid. What will help this? I have had headaches nearly all my life and am now 60.

REPLY.

Sensitivity to cold may be overcome by building up body resistance, with special attention to a nutritious diet, house temperature [not too warm and with proper humidity], and clothing [keep warm but do not "bundle up"].

Unless a physician tells you that your system is too acid there is no reason for your thinking so. "Acidity" is a popular fad.

Headache and other aches may be caused by a number of things. Have you had a thorough physical examination?

BEZOARS.

Mrs. N. B. writes: I noticed your article on bezoars in the stomach caused by eating persimmons. I eat about 15 prunes a day. Are prunes sufficiently fibrous to cause bezoars?

REPLY.

In the case of the persimmon, although the fiber content is relatively low, yet the juices and pulp contain 14 per cent of gum and pectin. This latter substance is the material that leads to jelling of fruit juices.

Proper mastication, adequately mixing the fruit with saliva, or mixing the fruit with other foods, will prevent persimmon bezoar formation. Thoroughly cooked prunes will not cause bezoars.

FROM ACROSS THE SEA

BY HENRY BUCKLEY.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MADRID.—Spain's most famous club has just celebrated its centenary. This is the Madrid Athenæum club, known as "El Ateneo," which for 100 years has been the center of cultural and political life in Spain.

Back in 1854 it was closed for the first time by police and again under the Primo de Rivera dictatorship its doors were temporarily closed and its committee was imprisoned.

Count Romanones, Canalejas, and most of the famous political figures of the last fifty years have presided over the famous club. Former Premier Manuel Azaña was its secretary for many years and ran it in martinet fashion which was disliked by members several years overdue with subscriptions.

"El Ateneo" is as unlike an American or British club as could well be imagined. Its salons are always thronged by a mixed crowd of politicians, literary figures, professors, students. There is no gymnasium or swimming pool; no restaurant. But there is a huge library, reading rooms, classrooms where lectures and courses on all kinds of subjects are given and, above all, the ample salons where all Madrid foregathers to discuss Unamuno's latest "bon mot"; Ortega Gasset's latest book; the political situation.

Speakers of every shade of opinion and on a great variety of subjects take the platform at the Athenæum. It is one of the rare impartial forums in the peninsula, where politics especially are kept in watertight compartments. Political meetings in Spain are usually only intended for those already convinced. The left go to hear their own speakers and the right theirs. The "Ateneo," therefore, forms a valuable center where, despite the liberal tendency always evident there, opinions of every kind and variety can be freely aired.

What is known as the "Generation of '98," meaning the writers and poets whose works expressed rebellion against the old order of things which ended in the final loss of Cuba in '98, grew up in the shade of "El Ateneo." Unamuno, Ortega Gasset, Perez de Ayala—now republican ambassador in London—Pio Baroja and half a dozen lesser known writers form this famous group.

First president of the club, back in 1835, was the duke of Rivas, a famous writer in addition to being a grandee. Today a socialist professor, Fernando de los Rios, former minister of education, holds the rank, and an internationally known journalist, Alvarez del Vayo, former correspondent in Madrid of La Nacion of Buenos Aires and the Manchester Guardian, is secretary.

TRUSTEESHIP.

Chicago, Jan. 1.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—I am trustee for my son, age 12, who was left a share in an estate of a deceased aunt. I was recently forwarded a check for $1,000 as his share in the division of the estate. 1. What are the restrictions in regard to depositing this money in trust for my son? 2. Is it necessary to deposit this money in a bank or am I permitted to invest it as I see fit? 3. I have in mind depositing it in a credit union association in trust for my son. 4. Would this be legal? 5. May I cash this check if it is made out to me, as guardian for my son? 6. If so, what indorsement is necessary?
A. O. C.

1. You can deposit with any bank.

2. The statute authorizes investment in "the bonds of the United States, or in the bonds of the Home Owners Loan corporation, Federal Farm Mortgage corporation, or Federal Land bank, or in the bonds of any of the states of the United States, or in bonds or other obligations of national mortgage associations by and under the authority of the national housing act, or in bonds or notes secured by mortgage or trust deed insured by the federal housing administrator, or debenture issued by him, or in first mortgages upon real estate in any state, or in the bonds of any county, city, or municipality in any state, or in the first mortgage bonds of any corporation of any state upon which no default in payment of interest shall have occurred for a period of five years, and the first mortgage bonds of any corporation of any state qualifying under the terms of the federal securities act of 1933 and the securities law of the state of Illinois, issued in whole or in part to refund any first mortgage bonds of such corporation eligible for investment hereunder at the time of refunding, but no trustee shall be authorized by this act to invest trust funds in any bonds in which cautious and intelligent persons do not invest their own money."

3 and 4. We advise you not to do it without court authority.

5. Yes, if you are guardian.

6. The same wording under which it is payable.
TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

GRATUITOUS SERVICES.

Peoria, Ill., Jan. 2.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—Five years ago I was called home to take care of my mother, which I did. She has since passed away and I put in a claim for $208. 1. Do I stand any chance of getting anything? 2. Could the administrator and the attorney for the estate allow this bill without submitting it to the court?
E. H.

1. Depends on your understanding with her during her lifetime. It is presumed in absence of other testimony that such personal services between relatives are gratuitous.

2. Conceivably it might be questioned.

TO ENFORCE JUDGMENT.

Chicago, Jan. 4.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—1. What assistance can one receive in Illinois from the judges and courts to enforce [2] the collection of an automobile judgment against a man's wife, [3] her property being owned in joint tenancy with her husband? 4. After the accident she transferred her one-half interest in the property to her husband and her husband transferred both interests to another party, who is now title holder. The wife has kept out of Illinois, but her husband remains here.
M. A. W.

1. The judge would not personally take the initiative, if that is what you mean to ask.

2. We assume that you mean that the wife is the judgment debtor.

3. Her one-half could be subject to payment of the judgment.

4. It seems probable that by a creditor's bill you could set these transactions aside as a fraud on creditors. It seems probable that you employed an attorney in the proceeding leading to the judgment. If so, he is in a better position to advise you than we are.
TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

MORTGAGE EXTENSION.

Chicago, Jan. 4.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—1. Should the mortgagor or the mortgagee pay for the recording of a mortgage extension? 2. Who is protected by the recording of the extension?
A. G. K.

1. It can be agreed upon either way. Ordinarily the creditor is in a position to dictate terms and he insists that the debtor stand the expenses.

2. Heretofore the most important protection has been the preventing of foreclosure, which is in favor of the debtor. Under new legislation the extension will have additional importance for the creditor, since recording is required in order to keep the lien alive.

AFTER THE AAA DECISION.

Bluffs, Ill., Jan. 8.—THE TRIBUNE seems to be well pleased that part of the Supreme court has declared the AAA unconstitutional, but to many it is a great disappointment that this course seemed to them to be necessary. To many this decision is considered destructive to national progress and prosperity. One would expect THE TRIBUNE, a paper in the midst of the farm belt, to be sympathetic to farm and national advancement. Much of the best in American life and personages have come from American farms, and it is now no time nor laudable ambition to destroy, pauperize or even seriously weaken the farm life of this great nation.

It is fundamental [1] that for a national prosperity there must be a production control of farm products in keeping with the domestic and foreign demand which can be created; and that this generation has no moral right to withdraw and waste the fertility of the soil, the most valuable asset of the people of the nation; [2] that the most desirable setup for intelligent national control of production must be that provided by the federal government.

That there can be no farm prosperity and thus no lasting national prosperity without production control was well recognized by the members of congress when the act was passed without serious opposition from either Democrats or Republicans, and the plan was endorsed almost unanimously by the able farm leaders of the country. Perhaps in peace times few acts of congress have had such unanimous support and it has been functioning splendidly and contributing not only to national recovery but to that of the world.

If all special privileges, subsidies, tarif protection, etc., are taken from other groups the farmers could take their chance and surely succeed. Do papers like THE TRIBUNE enjoy rates less than the cost to the postoffice department for handling that part of their publications which go through the mails, and if so what does it amount to per year to a large publication? [THE TRIBUNE has repeatedly recommended a revision of second class rates provided a disinterested accounting shows that the existing rates are less than the cost of the service.—Ed.]

We appreciate the ability and value of the three dissenting justices, but now the country must look to Wallace, Roosevelt, and the other great leaders who have so ably measured the need and provided the effective remedy which is now so unfortunately thrown out. We hope that these great men may find the way to lead us away from another Valley Forge that now seems so certain to come to us in the not distant future unless something constructive is done to prevent it. May we expect the constructive coöperation of the great CHICAGO TRIBUNE to help avert this calamity that is so definitly ahead unless a proper farm program is provided? The long time good of the nation is what must be considered, and partisan politics and personal dislikes must be disregarded.
ROYAL OAKES,
Oakes Farm.

NO LAMENTATIONS.

Salem, O., Jan. 8.—Just to keep the record reasonably accurate and for fear that our city friends may have gotten a false impression of his importance as a spokesman for American agriculture, I want to say that in my opinion Edward A. O'Neal, president of the American Farm Bureau federation, speaks for considerably less than 10 per cent of our farmers—probably for not much more than 5 per cent.

Inasmuch as Mr. O'Neal is the only farm leader who appears to be very much disturbed over the wiping out of the AAA by the Supreme court, may not his vocal hand-wringing be due to a feeling of frustration? Having committed his organization to 100 per cent endorsement of the entire New Deal farm program—the only one so committed, by the way—it is hardly surprising to well informed farm people that he rushes into print and onto the air to attack the court's decision.

Some of us may not have been very happy over the high court's five to four verdict supporting the gold clause abrogation, but we seem to have been sports enough to "take it." Though we may have preferred the reasoning in the dissenting opinion in that case, it is not recorded that any of us "enemies of the republic" advocated the overthrow of constitutional government or hanged the Supreme court in effigy.

May I suggest as a veteran who has long observed the farm game both from the inside and outside that the real farm relief most needed in this fair land right now is relief from the horde of political farm relievers who farm the farmer? Granted that, and lower taxes, and the American farmer will go places in 1936.
R. B. THOMPSON,
Editor, Agricultural Digest.

THE ROLE OF THE COURT.

Waukegan, Ill., Jan. 8.—If the people want the AAA, the NRA, or any other law which the Supreme court has declared unconstitutional, they may get it in the same manner as overwhelming popular demand secured liquor—by an amendment to the constitution which will give the federal government the power not now possessed. That procedure will permit debate and will permit the will of the people to be registered on the specific laws desired.

There will be some who will speak contemptuously of the Supreme court. Let them remember that only in the existence of that very court are they assured the right of criticism. The American way is not to abuse the court, not to attempt to pack it with friendly judges, not to pass laws to curb its power or usefulness, but to so amend the constitution as to bring favored laws clearly within its provisions. Only the Supreme court stands between government by dictatorship and government by law; destroy it and the republic is doomed.
E. R. PARNASS.

THE AAA DECISION.

Harvard, Ill., Jan. 6.—The decision of the Supreme court leads me to believe there is yet a balm in Gilead to safeguard our liberties and constitutional rights. I believe the reaction to this decision will determine the November national election.
E. L. BOST,

AT EMMAUS.

Chicago, Jan. 7.—In your news article on the Rembrandt painting, "Christ at Emmaus," a controversy as to who was the third person with Christ and Cleophas is mentioned. According to a very old Polish Easter hymn, the third person was Lucas. This same fact is mentioned in the Gospels, and also in Catherine Emmerich's inspired book. Had the gentlemen gone to the trouble of calling up any Catholic priest in Chicago they would have had the question settled at once.
ALBERT J. DANISCH.

NO.

Chicago, Jan. 4.—Don't you think it is beneath the dignity of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE to reiterate the term "hot dog" in connection with Prof. Frankfurter, who is one of the world's eminent legal scholars? Shame on THE TRIBUNE!
YALE LEVIN.

CAUTION.

Cleveland, O., Dec. 29.—If the Townsend plan calls 60 years of age the limit for workers it would be advisable for the country to elect a President and congress considerably under that age and not run the risk of having so many vacancies.
ALICE PAYLER.

A FRIENDLY SOUL.

Chicago, Jan. 1.—In your platform for 1936 may I suggest the second plank?

G. A. R. DISCIPLINE STILL IS STRICT AT INSTALLATION

G. H. Thomas Post Has 17 Members; Once 1,275

BY MARCIA WINN.

A lone drum rumbled out in Memorial hall of the public library at 2 p. m. yesterday and eleven white haired men jerked at their worn coats of blue and stood up.

They were there for the annual installation of officers of the George H. Thomas post of the Grand Army of the Republic, a post which once boasted 1,275 paid-up members and now has seventeen. Only eleven of the seventeen were able to attend the meeting, and of the eleven, seven installed as officers.

Every Man Must Carry On!

"I can't play that there drum today," quavered James Crugom, 85 years old, before the meeting. "My elbows ain't so limber now as they were 70 years ago." Crugom, the "baby" of the post, went to war as a drummer at the age of 11.

"What?" snapped Milton H. Myers, 94 years old, the commander, his snowy goatee quivering. "You can't play it? Why, you must!"

So Drummer Crugom played, and played with a hearty, merry touch, as he led the little group in single file into the assembly room, where a portrait of Abraham Lincoln hangs over the rostrum, and the legends, "Wilderness Campaign," "March to the Sea," "Five Forks," "Mobile Bay," and "Appomattox," words well engraved in the memories of the veterans, are painted on the wood.

Again the Boys Are Marching.

They paused before a flag draped altar. A strong, vibrant voice then rang out. It was Charles W. Beam, chaplain, 92 years old, who prayed fervently.

"We thank thee for our lives, and thy mercy which has kept us until this hour," he intoned . . . "and for the preservation of our national integrity and unity."

"Amen," joined in the comrades.

The Ceremony Proceeds.

The post saluted.

"Officer of the day," went on Myers, "you will proceed."

Officer of the Day Arthur Dawson then escorted the new officers, Commander Myers among them, out of the room for reëntrance in the installation ceremony. Installing Officer Julius H. Reed took the chair. The remaining veterans sank wearily into red cushioned chairs, and the piano struck up "The Battle Cry of Freedom" as the installation began.

The officers are Commander Myers; Thomas Ambrose, senior vice commander; James Crugom, junior vice commander; James C. Thomas, adjutant quartermaster; Charles W. Beam, chaplain; Arthur Dawson, officer of the guard, and Julius H. Reed, patriotic instructor. John A. Hood was elected chaplain, and Dennis Finley was chosen guard, but neither was present yesterday.

TWO APPRENTICE THUGS GET $1,600 AS FAGAN BOSSES

Two young men, nervously fingering revolvers and supervised by an older robber at the wheel of their automobile, took a $1,615 pay roll yesterday from William A. Rose, 544 Sheridan road, Evanston, assistant treasurer of the Rose Packing company, Inc., 851 Fulton street. The robber car curbed Rose's machine at Roosevelt road and Peoria street as he was returning from the Halsted Exchange National bank, 1929 South Halsted street. Rose told the Maxwell street police that the youths were about 18 years old, and the man cautioned them to "take it easy" when they appeared to be nervous.

EMPLOYES PAY TRIBUTE TO ROTHSCHILD

EMPLOYES FETE M. L. ROTHSCHILD ON ANNIVERSARY

50 Years in Business; Janitor as Boy, 13.

Maurice L. Rothschild, founder of clothing stores bearing his name in Chicago, Minneapolis, and St. Paul, was guest of more than 700 employés of his firm in the Standard club last night. The party, given by the Maurice L. Rothschild Employés' Benefit association, celebrated the 50th anniversary of Mr. Rothschild's entrance into the clothing business.

An electrically recorded program, written and spoken by employés, dramatized Mr. Rothschild's life. He was born in Nord Stetten, Germany, in 1864 and when 13 years old he came to America. Mr. Rothschild's first job was sweeping floors in a Chicago wholesale clothing house. Later he went to Springfield, Ill., where for a short time he worked for a clothing merchant.

First Store in Kansas.

Mr. Rothschild conceived the plan of selling goods to workers on railroads then being extended westward, so he bought a covered wagon and followed the laborers from camp to camp. When 21 years old, Mr. Rothschild had saved enough money to open a permanent clothing store in Seneca, Kan.

The day he opened his store the weather was chilly. As an advertising stunt Mr. Rothschild gave some overcoats away and the results, he said, were profitable. A few years later he opened a branch clothing store in Sabetha, Kas.

In 1891, Mr. Rothschild expanded his business and opened the Maurice L. Rothschild Clothing store in Minneapolis. Seven years later he went over to St. Paul and opened another store. He realized the ambition of his early career in 1906 when he opened his clothing store at State and Jackson streets in Chicago.

Forty Employés Give Show.

A replica of the 12 story building on State street formed part of the decorations in the banquet room last night, while nearby displays showed the rise of Mr. Rothschild's business.

Ben Rimskie, president of the Employés Benefit association, presided. The program included a show with 40 employés in the cast directed by Miss Charlotte Wolff.

In a brief address, Mr. Rothschild said: "We will do our part in coöperating to meet all 1936 perplexities, be they political or commercial. If there are any worries, let me worry about them."

ANTARCTIC ICE BLOCKS VESSEL ON HUNT FOR MISSING ELLSWORTH

LONDON, Jan. 11.—(AP)—The steamship Discovery II. reported today it was lying in the South Polar sea, awaiting an opening in the ice in order to sail into the Bay of Whales in search of Lincoln Ellsworth, missing American explorer.

The ship's master, in a message to the London committee sponsoring the voyage, placed the Discovery's position at latitude 71 degrees 37 minutes south; longitude, 177 degrees 42 minutes, west. The master reported: "The ice is heavier, and leads are less open. We are lying to."

Ellsworth and his pilot, Herbert Hollick-Kenyon, have not been heard from since they took off on Nov. 23 on an attempted flight across the antarctic continent from Dundee Island, 600 miles south of Cape Horn, to the Ross sea, south of New Zealand.

ESCAPED TAXI WRECKS STORES, HALTS AT BAR

Dixon, Ill., Jan. 11.—[Special.]—A local tavern was wrecked and two other business establishments damaged here early today. With brakes released a taxicab made a wild backward drive down Galena avenue hill, the principal Dixon business thoroughfare.

The cab broke three front windows of the A. L. Geisenheimer dry goods store, hit the front of the Plowman grocery, narrowly missed Policeman Gilbert Glessner, who was walking his beat, and came to stop wedged against the bar of the Lex-Wilson tavern on the opposite side of the street. The entrance of the tavern was demolished.

Ike Seelover, driver, told police that he had set the brakes when he parked the cab in front of a local restaurant. The motor of the cab was running when police reached the damaged tavern.

WINS $410 VERDICT AGAINST SYNOD IN FUMIGATION CASE

A jury in the Circuit court of Judge Daniel P. Trude yesterday returned a verdict of $410 in favor of the Dr. Hartnack Exterminating Service corporation, 608 South Dearborn street, against the Evangelical Lutheran Augustana synod, on an unpaid bill for fumigation of the Augustana Home for the Aged, 7532 Stony Island avenue. The defense of the synod against payment of the bill rested on the charge that the fumigation caused the death of two aged occupants of the home because the company was allegedly lax in not making known the deadly nature of the gas used, and because the two deaths resulted in a burial expense of $500.

REPORT ROMANCE BETWEEN GRETA AND NOEL COWARD

LONDON, Jan. 12.—[Sunday.]—(AP)—The Sunday Chronicle reported from Stockholm today that the Swedish capital is hearing rumors of a blossoming romance involving Greta Garbo, the Hollywood actress, and Noel Coward, London playwright. The newspaper dispatch said the couple met at a party given by Count and Countess Wachtmeister, close friends of the actress.

Coward, it was reported, then abandoned plans for a quiet, restful holiday and daily frequented restaurants, theaters, and parties where the Hollywood star was sometimes seen.

The pair later danced a tango at a reception given by a noted Swedish actor, the report said. Friends of the pair were quoted as saying "this is a perfect couple" and as commenting that Miss Garbo seems much happier. Before departing for London Coward was discovered to have sent a basket of orchids to the home of the actress' brother.

MEXICO BIDDING AGAIN FOR QUICK DIVORCE TRADE

Pamphlets Fail to Call Decrees Invalid.

Attractive pamphlets setting forth the advantages of Mexico as a winter playground, and, incidentally, as a place where any one wishing a divorce may get it quickly and secretly, are again being mailed to Chicago lawyers, it was learned yesterday. These circulars are intended as an aid to lawyers with clients confronted by knotty divorce problems.

As on former occasions, it is pointed out, these pamphlets neglect to state that such divorces are not recognized by the courts of the United States. A search of court records in Cook county shows that whenever the legality of such divorces has been attacked they have been set aside.

Like Decrees from Reno.

What is true of Mexican divorces is likewise true of Reno divorces or those obtained in other states, Attorney Nicholas Socrates of the firm of Socrates, Davis & Cohen, an authority on the subject, declared yesterday.

"A resident of Illinois is subject to the divorce laws of this state which cannot be evaded by applying to the courts of another state or a foreign country. Our courts have consistently held this," Socrates declared.

Cook county courts have occasion to rule on the validity of such divorces several times a year, records show. The most recent ruling involved an Arkansas divorce granted to E. Ray Allen from his wife, Margaret, 1400 Lake Shore drive.

Judge Upholds Wife's Plea.

In this case, decided last May, Circuit Judge Walter J. LaBuy granted separate maintenance to Mrs. Allen and knocked out the Arkansas decree. An appeal to the Illinois Supreme court was later taken but was dismissed when the case was settled by Mrs. Allen's taking a divorce.

The last time an appeals court passed on the validity of outside divorces was three years ago. At that time the Illinois Appellate court ruled that a Reno divorce granted to H. Fred Janssen, a Springfield merchant, was not valid. An attempt by Janssen to prove Nevada residence by citing payment of a poll tax and a transfer of a church membership from Springfield to Reno was dismissed by the court.

The state Supreme court, the records show, refused to review the Janssen case, ruling in effect that the Appellate court had considered all the legal aspects in arriving at its decision.

How Highest Court Ruled.

A United States Supreme court case decided in 1905 upholds the consistent stand of the Illinois courts, Mr. Socrates pointed out. In the case of Haddock vs. Haddock, a majority opinion of the Supreme court said:

"Under the rule contended for it would follow that the states whose laws were the most lax as to length of residence require for domicile, as to causes for divorce and to speed of procedure concerning divorce, would in effect dominate all the other states.

"In other words, any person who was married in one state and who wished to violate the marital obligations, would be able, by following the lines of least resistance, to go into the state whose laws were the most lax, and there avail of them for the purpose of the severance of the marriage tie and the destruction of the rights of the other party to the marriage contract, to the overthrow of the laws and the public policy of the other states."

Charlotte, N. C., Jan. 11.—[Special.]—F. Brandon Smith Jr., former son-in-law of Joseph F. Cannon, Concord textile manufacturer and capitalist, today for the second time won a suit against Cannon, who he charged broke up his marriage with Anne Cannon Reynolds. A jury in Superior court awarded Smith $12,600.

In the first suit Smith was awarded $125,000 in his suit which asked for $250,000, but as soon as this verdict was announced by the jury Judge W. F. Harding set it aside as excessive.

The defense, which offered no testimony in the second trial, already had indicated any verdict in favor of Smith would be appealed to the state Supreme court. Counsel for both sides today agreed to proposed defense motion to set aside the verdict and any other motion counsel for the plaintif might make would be argued Monday.

In deciding that Smith had suffered $12,000 actual damage and $600 punitive damage today, the jury deliberated for five and a half hours.

QUAKE VILLAGE NOW A VOLCANO, SURVIVOR AVERS

Story Tragic; Fear 500 Dead in Colombia.

PASTO, Colombia, Jan. 11.—[U.P.]—A volcanic crater, showering the surrounding countryside with burning lava, today had replaced the village of La Chorrera which was swallowed by the earth in yesterday's temblor which rocked this region, according to the hamlet's lone survivor who arrived here in a hysterical state.

The remainder of the village's 200 inhabitants were believed lost when the ground turned inside out. The total deaths from the disaster were expected to reach as high as 500.

All communications were disrupted and roads leading to the stricken zone were blocked by debris or obliterated by landslides.

Mountains Crash in 12 Mile Area.

Authorities estimated the mountain ranges in the quake area had collapsed from the force of the shocks, the heaviest and most damaging ever felt in Colombia, for over 12 miles.

Driven almost crazy by his experience and fears for the safety of his family, the survivor related a story of stark tragedy. He explained his not being buried alive with the rest of the villagers by the fact that he was absent from home.

At the first shocks he hurried to reach his family but the force of the temblors delayed his progress. When he finally reached the site of the village he found it had disappeared. There was no evidence of life anywhere.

Tells of Flight.

Hysterical, he almost ran the six miles to Tuquerres, despite minor injuries and the condition of the roads. The entire mountainside, he declared, was filled with crevices and the landslides also had buried the village of Iguad. Most of the population there escaped at the first rumbles, however, and only six deaths resulted.

Rescue parties which have been able to reach the scene were busy burying bodies recovered from the ruins of the several villages affected. Besides La Chorrera and Iguad, one was known dead at Sapueyes, one at Ospina, and nine each at Imbuad and Pinzon.

Launch Relief Work.

Reports said the villages of Sapueyes and Alban were levelled but with the exception of the single death at the former place, the population escaped.

National and departmental authorities joined in relief expeditions and immediate steps were taken to get doctors, medicines and the minister of industry and labor, Gerardo Martinez Perez, was expected to direct reconstruction activities.

JURY HOLDS OTTO BRANDENBURG'S DEATH A SUICIDE

A coroner's jury yesterday returned a verdict of suicide in the death of Otto Harry Brandenburg, 48 years old, 3445 Elaine place, former wealthy plastering contractor. He died at 3:30 a. m. yesterday on the estate of his brother, Walter H. Brandenburg, three miles north of Fox Lake, of four bullet wounds inflicted 24 hours earlier.

Testimony at the inquest, conducted by Lake County Coroner John L. Taylor at Walter Brandenburg's estate, indicated that Otto had been despondent over financial reverses. He once was president of the plastering company he and his brother conducted at 2924 North Western avenue, but two years ago Walter bought him out and succeeded him as head of the concern.

Otto Brandenburg arrived at his brother's estate about 5 a. m. Friday. After apparently shooting himself four times under the heart as he sat in the car, he staggered toward the servants' residence.

He is survived by his widow, Jamie. Funeral services will be held Tuesday morning at Graceland cemetery chapel. The body will be cremated.

J. D. ROCKEFELLER, ON BEACH, POSES FOR PHOTOGRAPH

Daytona Beach, Fla., Jan. 11.—(AP)—Apparently in the best health he has experienced in months, John D. Rockefeller Sr., took a 45 mile automobile ride today, the second such trip in as many days.

The oil millionaire, who was 96 last July, surprised residents and summer colonists yesterday by voluntarily stopping beside a beach photographer and posing for two photographs.

DELAY DECISION ON PROSECUTION IN HEWITT CASE

Oppose Complaint by Girl Against Mother.

San Francisco, Cal., Jan. 11.—(AP)—Prosecutors today sought a final conference with counsel for Ann Cooper Hewitt before deciding whether to initiate criminal proceedings in the sterilization of the 21 year old heiress.

Russell Tyler, attorney for the girl in a $500,000 damage suit against her mother and two physicians, promptly vetoed a district attorney's proposal that Miss Hewitt sign criminal complaints charging mayhem.

Tyler pointed out Miss Hewitt had not requested or assisted in the police investigation which followed filing of the suit and said it was "most unfair to suggest that she assume the duties and obligations of the police department."

State May Prosecute.

Assistant District Attorney August Fourtner said he wanted to confer with Tyler again before deciding whether his office would proceed alone.

At conclusion of the police investigation Fourtner offered to prosecute the mother, Mrs. Maryon Hewitt McCarter, and the physicians, Dr. Tillman E. Tilton and Dr. Samuel G. Boyd, with Miss Hewitt's coöperation.

Mother Wants Fortune, Girl said.

The little heiress charges the mother duped her into submitting to the operation—on pretense of undergoing an appendectomy—in an attempt to eventually gain control of a large trust fund left by Miss Hewitt's father, Peter Cooper Hewitt, inventor. Tyler estimated the estate at 10 million dollars.

Mrs. McCarter contended her daughter was mentally and physically undeveloped and that the operation was performed "for Ann's sake and for society's sake."

Miss Hewitt charged her mother had kept her a virtual prisoner for years, neglected her education and terrorized her. She contended the sterilization operation was unjustified.

MANUFACTURER IS KILLED.

Toledo, O., Jan. 11.—[Special.]—James Montgomery Acklin, 51, president of the Acklin Stamping company, was fatally injured in an automobile accident near Nicholasville, Ky., late last night, according to word received here today. He was enroute to Florida.

TEXAS ATTRACTS MANY TOURISTS DURING WINTER

Tribune Roadster Will Go to Mexico City.

BY HAL FOUST.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

San Antonio, Tex., Jan. 11.—[Special.]—Chicagoland automobiles may be seen here this winter in unprecedented numbers. They are packed near the Alamo or at 18th Century Missions just outside of town, cruising the semi-tropic parks, or visiting America's largest military post and the army's largest aviation school.

In streets and parking lots a few days ago 698 license plates of states other than Texas were counted and tabulated, showing almost a fourth from Chicagoland states. Illinois numbered 67, Michigan 48, Indiana 24, and Wisconsin 25.

This is a centennial of the Texas war for independence from Mexico, but that alone does not account for the increased volume of travel here this winter. Florida, without any historical significance to the date, is likewise enjoying a tourist boom.

Easy Money Granted.

This is to be a festive year in Texas, the federal government having matched with "easy money" a state appropriation of $3,000,000 for the celebration, but it is the permanent relics of its past rather than any special entertainment that is drawing tourists to San Antonio.

San Antonio was the site of one of the few Spanish colonization efforts. Spain claimed this territory for two centuries without occupying it, confining its efforts to robbing, enslaving and baptizing Indians. When the French colonies began to spread westward from the Mississippi river, priests and soldiers were sent from Mexico to establish outposts in Texas.

Ferdinand III. of Spain issued a city charter for San Antonio in 1731. The same year fifty-six loyal residents of the Canary Islands migrated here under royal supervision. Their descendants are organized into a local society today, although most of the 60,000 Mexicans of modern San Antonio are of more recent immigration from south of the Rio Grande.

Climate Is Pleasant.

It's the antiquity of this city, together with a mild winter climate punctuated only occasionally by cold storms from the north, that makes this a popular tourist center.

A highway to Mexico City under construction since 1925 will be officially opened to automobile trafic on May 15.

The road has been passable at times during the last three years, but it has been dangerous and arduous travel. The Tribune roadster made the trip two years ago, negotiating narrow trails chipped from precipitous cliffs and plowing through muck in jungles. Mexican authorities still advise against attempting the journey.

Roadster on Way.

The Tribune roadster is leaving to drive the highway for a detailed survey of conditions en route and for an independent speculation on what these conditions will be later this year.

The rainy season in Mexico is from May to November. If construction continues as scheduled, the road will be suitable for travel with a moderate degree of safety late this spring, although it probably will be blocked occasionally by landslides in the water soaked mountains. It will be hot in the low country, but pleasant at the higher altitudes. Mexico City is on a plateau 7,524 feet above sea level. It is eternal spring there. Nearby mountains receive their snowfall in the summer, the wet season.

The highway to Mexico City will be far from a completed road this year, but if it is officially announced that it is open for travel there will be a stream of adventurous Americans making the trip.

BOMBER LANDED SAFELY WITHOUT USE OF WHEELS

San Diego, Cal., Jan. 11.—(AP)—An army bomber in distress, with three men aboard and landing gear locked in retractable position, was landed safely at Rockwell field here today.

Skilful piloting by Second Lieutenant Paul Balfour of Coronado, Cal., brought the big plane to earth after one of four men aboard, with permission of Lieut. Balfour, had jumped and parachuted to the ground at March field, Riverside, 100 miles north of here.

Taking off from March field for a short flight, Lieut. Balfour found, as he made preparations to land, that the landing gear could not be lowered. An operating cord had been broken.

PRETTY WIFE, 30, WINS AWARD AS WOMAN PILOT

Boston, Mass., Jan. 11.—(AP)—Teddy Kenyon, a pretty, vivacious 30 year old housewife who found time amid other duties to sandwich in 350 hours of flying, was designated today as New England's outstanding sportswoman pilot for 1935.

She received a silver cup emblematic of that title from Margaret Kimball of Lexington, donor of the trophy, in behalf of the New England division of the "99" club, a woman's aviation organization.

Artificial Leg Believed Stolen from Dead Man

Patrick O'Neil, 89 years old, died yesterday, apparently of a heart attack, in a rooming house at 950 West Madison street. Police said O'Neil's artificial leg, which was missing, may have been stolen after his death.

EXPLOSIVE MAE WEST . . . Newest in the series of Mae West stories has the curvaceous heroine of Paramount's forthcoming "Klondike Lou" blushing. Success crowned doll-maker's efforts... but... came the night... bang went Mae West doll... bang went factory, sad went maker. Creation had exploded.

FORMER MAYOR JOHN F. HYLAN OF NEW YORK DIES

Served 8 Years; Champion of 5 Cent Carfare.

New York, Jan. 12 [Sunday].—[Special.]—Former Mayor John F. Hylan, 67 years old, died of a heart attack early today at his home on Long Island.

With Mr. Hylan when he was stricken were Mrs. Hylan; their daughter, Mrs. Virginia Sinnott, and the latter's husband, John Sinnott, who had been Mr. Hylan's secretary.

Mr. Hylan, who served two terms as mayor from 1918 to 1925, complained last night of not feeling well and went to bed early. Shortly after 1 a. m. Mrs. Hylan awoke and found her husband suffering from the heart attack from which he died a few minutes later.

In recent years Mr. Hylan had served as a justice of the Children's court, but he continued to take an active interest in municipal affairs.

DEFEATED BY WALKER.

During eight years that he was mayor of New York Mr. Hylan became best known perhaps as champion of the 5 cent fare on the city's street railways and subway systems. He used that as an issue in an effort to gain a third term in 1925, but was defeated in the Democratic primaries by James J. Walker, then a state senator, and at the conclusion of his second term resumed the practice of law.

First elected mayor in 1917, Mr. Hylan during his first term—in the stress of war excitement—successfully fought every attempt to increase the carfare. That was one of the principal issues of his second campaign and he was reëlected by a plurality unprecedented in a city election up to that time.

Marked by Controversies.

When he first ran for mayor Mr. Hylan was opposed by the late John Purroy Mitchel, a Democrat, who four years previously had been successful on a fusion ticket and was seeking reëlection. It was one of the bitterest campaigns on record, but Mr. Hylan won. His term was marked by many violent controveries, chiefly due to his stand on the carfare issue.

During his term Mayor Hylan kept the five cent fare issue constantly before the public and in his campaign for reëlection pointed out the possibility of an increased fare in the event of his defeat. The issue became a popular one and the mayor defeated his Republican opponent, Maj. Henry H. Curran, by a plurality of 418,000.

Born on New York Farm.

Mayor Hylan was born on a small farm at Hunter, Green county, N. Y., April 20, 1868. Orphaned when he was a child, he went to New York when a young man and obtained employment on the old elevated railroad, in the days when the engines were operated by steam. In time he achieved one of his early ambitions—to become an engineer.

While employed on the "L" Mayor Hylan married Miss Marion O'Hara, who influenced him to study law. He began reading law at night and was graduated from the New York Law school in 1897. The same year he was admitted to the bar.

PARADE OF TUGS FUNERAL RITE FOR FISHERMAN

San Francisco, Cal., Jan. 11.—(AP)—Three hundred crab fishing boats will chug out through the Golden Gate tomorrow in a belated funeral procession for a fisherman lost at sea.

From the shore Demenico Passasanisi's widow and small son will watch the long line of boats, headed out to drop wreaths at the spot where waves drowned the 38 year old fisherman.

Passasanisi's boat was caught in a sudden surge in Bolinas bay a week ago and rolled over like a piece of driftwood. He vanished in the sea.

"He was one of our members," A. Sancimino, president of the Crab Fishermen's Protective association, said. "That explains the funeral voyage."

2 WOMEN WEEP FOR GILBERT; ONE IS MISS DIETRICH

Film Notables Attend Romeo's Funeral.

Hollywood, Cal., Jan. 11.—(AP)—Of all the women who loved or admired him, only two wept for John Gilbert today at his funeral.

The blonde star was the last of some 40 motion picture people who came to the tiny chapel. She hurried through the drizzle of a gray day into the room where his body lay. Her floral piece, a spectacular star of gardenias, lay at the head of the coffin.

A Woman Weeps.

The other who wept was—just a woman.

She was plainly, even badly dressed. Her thin black coat was slight protection against the damp wind. As she stood in the rain, it hung about her in folds. Her hat drooped.

She carried a bunch of violets in one hand.

"Sorry, Miss, you can't go in 'less you got a card. Got a card?'"

Only 40 famous movie people had cards.

"Maybe later," he said, more gently.

So she stood there for an hour or more, watching the limousines roll smoothly to the curb, and the invited mourners go in. First, came Leatrice Joy, second wife of Gilbert. Miss Joy was in black, and so was her daughter, Claire Joy, 12, born to her during her marriage to him.

Virginia Bruce, with her father and brother, came next. Miss Bruce was divorced from Gilbert two years ago. Aileen Pringle, King Vidor, and John Barrymore appeared. Barrymore was alone.

All this the woman saw.

Episcopal Service.

She could not hear the low sound of the organ nor the words of the Rev. Neal Dodd intoning the psalms for the burial of the dead from the Episcopal book of common prayer.

It was over quickly.

Among the magnificent floral pieces over the gray covered cedar coffin—the blanket of roses and sweet peas, the clusters of lilies of the valley, the gardenias and tuberoses and chrysanthemums—an attendant placed a small bunch of violets.

And on the long list of names of persons who sent flowers, one was added:

"A fan."

The explosion was at first believed to have been caused by the ignition of illuminating gas, but later members of the police bomb squad went to the 106 family apartment house to investigate. Mrs. Sennwald was not at home at the time of the explosion, but arrived there shortly afterward.

The blast blew away the outer walls of the Sennwald apartment, hurtling the débris into an inner courtyard. The inside walls of the apartment were knocked down and the roof sagged in. INMOST ORGANS OF BODY HEATED BY RADIO WAVES

The heating of organs and areas of the body hitherto inaccessible or unresponsive to high frequency electric currents may be accomplished by means of "ultra-short" radio waves, Dr. Albert Bachem, biophysicist of the University of Illinois Medical college, announced yesterday.

The lungs, for instance, which could not be heated by high frequency electric currents because of their position and high resistance, responded readily to the radio waves in recent experiments conducted by Dr. Bachem.

Each wave length, he found, has its special effect on different body tissues, although shorter wave lengths apparently are more successful in destroying bacteria than the longer waves.

DIXMOOR 'JUDGE' TO CLOSE TRAFIC FINE 'HOCK SHOP'

Pledges to Take No More Accordions in Trade.

Police Magistrate Charles Braun of Dixmoor promised yesterday to stop running a "sort of hock shop" in his court where motorists have been leaving automobile tires, wrist watches, and musical instruments, as security for trafic fines.

Calls It Mere Accommodation.

"We have had several complaints about you accepting articles of property as security for fines," Rotchford told Braun. "It seems that you have been running a sort of hock shop. You must stop this at once."

"I only did that to accommodate the motorists," explained Braun, "and in every case the defendant returned, paid the fine, and received back his property." He promised in the future to demand a bond until the fine is paid.

Under the law, Braun explained, the village received the amount of the fine and he got the court costs. Mr. Rotchford was interested in learning if the attitude of the village prosecutor ever influenced Braun in determining the guilt of a trafic violator.

Business Comes First.

"O no," Braun replied. "I always judge a case on its merits. Of course the village board might not approve if every one were found not guilty. I don't like to lose the business, and I remember a few years ago when the board took the cases from one magistrate when he had a majority of not guilty findings."

Braun agreed to return the accordion to Davis and Attorney Flick promised to have the village board vacate the $5 fine which was assessed against a friend with whom Davis was riding on Nov. 29. Braun also agreed to waive the court costs.

He failed, however, to comply with the demand of Mr. Rotchford to produce his court records. This was ordered, the assistant state's attorney said, in order to investigate completely the fine collecting activities of the police magistrate. Braun said he would bring the records in on Thursday.

Regains Accordion

3 BOYS PLUNGE THROUGH ICE IN CREEK; DROWN

Indianapolis, Ind., Jan. 11.—[Special.]—Three boys, all of prominent north side families, were drowned this afternoon when they fell through the ice on Fall creek.

The victims were John Buchanan, 11; his brother, David, 10, sons of Albert Buchanan, and Charles Prange, 10, son of Elmer C. Prange.

The story told by Stephen Buchanan, 8, sent police to the scene with grappling hooks. The bodies were not recovered for several hours.

The four boys left home about 10:30 a. m., telling their parents they were going to take a hike. Hours passed, and shortly before noon, Stephen appeared at his home, drenched to the skin, and sobbing out his story of the drowning.

"We were playing on the ice," he said. "We didn't have any skates or sleds, we were just sliding. Suddenly David and John went through the ice. Then Charlie and I fell through, but we managed to get out.

"Charlie tried to rescue the others, and then he went under, too. I was standing on the creek bank shouting for help, but when no one came I picked up David's jacket and canteen and started home."

PLEA BY FATHER SAVES BOYS IN BURGLARY CASE

Edwin Shaw, 18 years old, 8000 South Carpenter street, a student at the Tilden High school, and Edward Waltz, 20 years old, 7945 South Carpenter street, a pre-medical student at the Lewis institute, were brought before Judge J. M. Braude in Boys' court yesterday for entering a Kresge store at 7826 South Halsted street and stealing merchandise valued at $400.

"Be merciful, your honor," pleaded V. L. Shaw, Edwin's father. "I have an investment of $15,000 in my boy in training and reputation, and I beg you not to send him to jail, where his character would be ruined."

In view of the father's plea and the previous good record of both boys, Judge Braude imposed on each a suspended sentence of six months in the Bridewell and a $300 fine.

OLDEST SISTER OF MERCY HERE TO BE 87 TODAY

Sister Mary Isabel O'Brien, who is believed to be the sole surviving member of the Catholic Order of Sisters of Mercy who went through the Chicago fire of 1871, will celebrate her 87th birthday today at Mercy hospital.

Sister Mary Isabel, who is also the oldest living member of the Chicago group of Mercy sisters, was born in Burlington, Vt., on Jan. 12, 1849, and came to Chicago as a young girl.

At the time of the fire she was an instructor at the old St. Xavier academy, then located at Wabash avenue and Madison street, and fled with other members of the order to a private home at 34th street and Cottage Grove avenue, which escaped the flames. Here she helped in reorganization of the school, with which she was connected until her retirement three years ago.

"She has been active all year," a member of the order said yesterday, "and is just as interested in education now as always."

ASSERTS COSMIC RAYS HOLD KEY TO ENERGY MYSTERY

FAIRBANKS, Alaska, Jan. 11.—(AP)—Discovery of new sources of energy may result from studies of cosmic rays here at the University of Alaska, Dr. Ervin H. Bramhill, physicist, said today. He said the problem of understanding and controling the ray phenomena stands between investigators and their dream of harnessing the mysterious force for mankind.

Although the intensity of energy received by the earth from these rays at any given location is small, the physicist declared:

"We probably could make available new sources of tremendous energy if we could understand and control the processes found in cosmic ray phenomena. The chief interest to the scientist is that the phenomena present an unsolved mystery of the universe, challenging the ingenuity of man."

BY WILFRID SMITH.

Seven Silver Skates champions will be crowned this afternoon at Garfield park in the climax of the nineteenth annual derbies sponsored by THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE. The enrollment this year totaled 4,596, which includes skaters from many Chicagoland cities, as well as from all sections of Chicago.

Yesterday at the same park lagoon all records for Silver Skates preliminaries were broken when 1,438 boys under 16 years of age competed in 187 preliminaries in the boys' midget, boys' juvenile, and boys' junior clasess.

These three divisions were reduced to two semi-finals in each, which will be held this afternoon to qualify for the championships. In addition to completion of these derbies, 2,083 boys and girls are registered for the boys' intermediate, men's senior, girls' junior, and girls' senior derbies.

More than 57 per cent of the entrants, an all time record, reported yesterday for the three division races. If this percentage is maintained today, and there is every reason to believe that it will equal or exceed the figure, the record for participation will be broken.

Course in Fine Shape.

While yesterday's temperature was above freezing, the eight lap track was kept in fine shape by a force of workmen. Today near freezing weather is predicted. This morning a new track will be surveyed, scraped, and prepared for the Derbies. Skating was not permitted on the Garfield park lagoon last night.

Semi-finalists already have been assigned to their races today. All others will be assigned when they report to Garfield park. The hours for registration today are 10:30 a. m. to 12:30 p. m., and the first preliminary will start at 1 o'clock.

All of these skaters must be registered with the Illinois-Western Skating association under whose sanction the Derbies are held.

The Fans Like Races.

More than 10,000 watched the preliminaries yesterday. Today's crowd, with favorable weather, will be several times that number. A loud speaker system will be installed to announce the names of the contestants in the semi-finals and finals. Distances for today's races are as follows:

Boys' midget, final, 220 yards.
Boys' juvenile, final, 440 yards.
Boys' Junior, final, half mile.

Three hundred and sixty-eight boys competed yesterday in the midget class [under 12 years of age]; 480 competed in the boys' juvenile class [12 and 13 years of age], and 590 competed in the boys' junior class [14 and 15 years of age]. One hundred and sixty-five gold medals were awarded to boys winning preliminary races. Following the preliminaries the semi-finals were conducted in the three divisions preparing for the grand semi-finals today.

These Boys Won.

BY ARCH WARD.

The Detroit Lions, champions of the National Professional league, will be the opponents of the 1935 College All-Americans in the third annual All-Star charity football game at Soldiers' field.

G. A. Richards, Detroit radio magnate and owner of the Lions, yesterday accepted an invitation from THE TRIBUNE, sponsor of the contest, to pit his team against the best that can be recruited from the nation's collegiate gridirons.

The date of the game will be Sept. 1. Profits again will be divided equally among the United Charities, Catholic Charities, and Jewish Charities of Chicago. More than $46,000 was donated to these organizations from receipts of the first two games.

Sees Victory by 30 Points.

Mr. Richards predicts the Lions will win by 30 points or more. His letter of acceptance included this:

"You had better warn the college players they will not get off as easily against the Lions as they did against the Bears in 1934 and 1935. Our team reaches midseason form early and, after three weeks' practice, we will be ready to whip the Giants or the Bears, let alone a group of kids fresh from college. If we don't run up a margin of 30 points I'll be keenly disappointed.

"There wasn't enough versatility in the Bears' attack to make the first two All-Star games exciting. We play a more open game. Coach Potsy Clark assures me our boys will throw that ball around from the opening moment of play. Fans who patronize the game will see the greatest running back in football, professional or college, when Dutch Clark steps onto Soldiers' field."

Fans to Pick Players.

The squad which will oppose the Lions will be entirely different from the lineup the Bears encountered, because the college roster will be restricted to players who finished their period of collegiate eligibility last fall. In 120 minutes of play the Bears were unable to score a touchdown against the college standard bearers. The 1934 game resulted in a scoreless tie, and the Bears won last year, 5 to 0, on a place kick and a safety.

The personnel of the college squad and its staf of coaches again will be determined by the vote of the fans. Last year more than 8,000,000 from coast to coast participated in the balloting, which was conducted by 112 newspapers associated with THE TRIBUNE. There will be at least 150 newspapers supporting the enterprise this year. For the first time the poll will include New York City, where the Herald Tribune will solicit expressions from fans of the metropolitan area.

California, Alabama Vote Heavy.

Nearly 12 per cent of the population of northern California sent ballots to the San Francisco Chronicle in the coaches' poll last summer and 14 per cent of the population of Alabama cast votes for Frank Thomas, winner of the contest, through the Birmingham News and Age Herald.

Sectional interest is certain to be greater this year in the selection of the college players, because more important names than ever before will be presented to the voters. Consider these condidates from the Pacific coast:

Moscrip, Topping, Grayson, Hamilton, and Reynolds, Stanford; Lutz and Brittingham, California; Cheshire, U. C. L. A.; Jorgenson and Erdelatz, St. Mary's; Propst, Southern California; Carter, Oregon and Bley, Washington State.

Plenty of Southern Stars.

And these from the south:

Smith, Alabama; Wallace, Rice; Wilson, Orr, and Spain, Southern Methodist; Lester, Texas Christian; Tinsley, Louisiana State.

From the middle west is an array including these:

Berwanger, Chicago; Crayne, Iowa; Dennis and Loebs, Purdue; Antonini, Indiana; Lindberg, Gryboski, and Galbreath, Illinois; Jones, Smith, Karcher, Heekin, and Pincura, Ohio State; Shakespeare, Millner, Pilney, Peters, Fromhart, Layden, and Pojman, Notre Dame; Seidel, Beise, Smith, Oech, LeVoir, Roscoe, and Rennebohm, Minnesota; Renner and Viergiver, Michigan; Cruice, Tangora, Duvall, and Longfellow, Northwestern; Wagner, Michigan State; Scherer, Nebraska; Churchill, Kansas State; Sklar, Kansas, and Lewis, Ohio U.

How About These from East?

The east has several widely known players eligible for the game, including:

Train, Yale; Barabas, Columbia; Weller and Constable, Princeton; Michaels, Villa Nova; Fortman, Irwin, and Wasicek, Colgate; Jontos, Syracuse, and Shuler, Army.

After the game in Chicago a similar contest between the College All-Stars and New York Giants will be presented in New York by the New York Herald Tribune in coöperation with THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE. The date of the New York game is Sept. 9. Profits will be donated to the Herald Tribune's fresh air fund.

Richard Legner, eight years old, finished last in a boys' midget preliminary yesterday, but he is as happy as though he had won. Better luck next year, Dick.

Rhode Island Boy Breaks World Swimming Record

Brunswick, Me., Jan. 11.—(AP)—Johnny Higgins of the Olneyville, R. I., Boys' club swimming team established a new world's record for the 200 meter breast stroke in a meet with the Bowdoin college junior varsity squad here tonight. Higgins was clocked by A. A. U. timers in two minutes 40 3-5 seconds.

BIERMAN TALKS WITH SMITH ON JOB AT TULANE

Bernie Bierman, University of Minnesota football coach, and Dr. Wilbur C. Smith, director of athletics at Tulane university, who is reported to have offered Bierman $15,000 a year to return to the New Orleans institution as coach, conferred for five hours yesterday at the Sherman hotel.

At the conclusion of the session, Dr. Smith announced there was no statement to make. Later he denied that he had made Bierman an offer of any kind.

Earlier in the afternoon, Dr. Smith announced he would have a statement at 6 o'clock. At the appointed hour he told reporters there was nothing to say. He explained his earlier failure to make a denial of reports by saying he had hoped to have an announcement to make after talking with Bierman.

Bierman Makes No Comment.

Bierman, who came from Minneapolis yesterday morning to meet Dr. Smith, did not make any comment, either on the reported negotiations with Tulane, which he coached before going to Minnesota three years ago, or on his trip to Chicago.

It was understood, however, that Dr. Smith had discussed the Tulane coaching position with Bierman during the afternoon, but that Bierman had decided to stay at Minnesota.

The Tulane position was left vacant shortly after the close of the football season by the dismissal of Ted Cox, who succeeded Bierman. New Orleans fans and Tulane alumni are said to have soured on Cox when his teams failed to achieve the success that had been the custom of Bierman coached Tulane elevens. Minnesota's 20 to 0 victory over Tulane at Minneapolis definitly sealed Cox's doom, it was said.

McCormick Visits Brundage.

Bierman was accompanied to Chicago by Frank McCormick, athletic director at Minnesota, who came to confer with Avery Brundage, Olympic committee chairman, over raising funds for the 1936 Olympic team.

Stevens Defeats Berg for British Lightweight Title

JOHANNESBURG, Jan. 11.—(AP)—A record crowd of 14,000 saw Laurie Stevens, South African title holder, outpoint Jack Kid Berg tonight in a 12 round bout for the British empire lightweight championship.

Hoppe Beats Cochran for World Three Cushion Title

BY CHARLES BARTLETT.

This is the Willie whose Pa took him up to Daly's rooms at 31st and Broadway in New York City thirty-five years ago to have a go at several of the big shots of billiards in a handicap balkline tournament. William, wearing knee breeches and a tony tuxedo jacket, wasn't quite tall enough to take a standing stance, so they allowed him to jump up on the table, and he was up there enough during that tournament to win it.

From there the prodigy grew and with him his list of championships, but there was one he never could quite make—the world's three cushion title.

Reaches Goal at Last.

Last night in the Grand ballroom of the Sherman hotel, the same Willie, now wearing long pants, finally won that one crown which had slipped through his gifted fingers all these years. He did it by defeating the title holder, Welker Cochran, of San Francisco, 60 to 38, in 50 innings, in the sixth and final block of their three day challenge match for the championship.

The final block saw Hoppe finish with a cumulative total of 360 points for the entire match against Cochran's 246. The six blocks required a total of 340 innings.

Hoppe's victory not only gave him his first three cushion championship but also established him as the only triple title holder in the history of the game, for he was already champion at both 18.1 balkline and cushion caroms. He does not plan to defend the title until the tournament proper at the end of the year.

Radio Delays Match.

Willie won the right to challenge Cochran for the title by finishing as runner-up to Welker in the big show held here in November. It was his fifth try for the title. He finished second in three of the other four and fourth in the other.

Arrangements had been made with a national broadcasting hookup to relay the last hair raising details of the struggle to millions of eager ears. The time signals on this plan went awry, so that two time outs were required. While these were transpiring, practically each of the 900 customers in the house took a bow, and a few of the neighbors were invited in for charades.

Hoppe made no mistake about getting his little chore done. Entering the afternoon block with a 63 point lead, Willie immediately began to build on that until it ended with him holding a 300 to 208 margin over the champion.

Hoppe Increases Lead.

By the thirty point intermission in the evening he had increased his advantage to an even hundred points, 331 to 231. Willie failed to oblige the clients with any such happy string as the record run of 15 he reeled off in the fourth block on Monday night, but in the twentieth inning of the night block he came through with a shot that probably only he could have made at that particular moment.

He had run four billiards so softly that the three balls might have been armored with cotton. The trio also wound up, practically in a line near the top rail of the table, with the object ball on the left, the cue ball centered, and the spot ball at the right. This, to a Hoppe, could call for only one shot—a full massé.

Makes Spectacular Shot.

Willie stood over the cue ball, stabbing down at the air above it and finally drove the cue home. The cue ball then began a to and fro ride along the head of the table which saw it score five cushions on the three rails while tapping the object and spot balls en route.

Hoppe ran six in the 37th inning for a total of 349, and it then was obviously only a matter of minutes for the remaining 11 points. He was detained in the 48th, where Cochran had a loser's jest by playing a deliberate safety shot, when Willie had a total of 358. He picked up the necessary two in the next three innings, although that precious 360th point almost came a cropper when the wandering object ball nearly collided with his cue ball.

Purdue's basketball team raced to its second Big Ten victory last night, excelling Chicago's Maroons both in speed and passing to pile up a count of 44 to 21. The Boilermakers convinced 3,200 spectators who jammed the Midway fieldhouse that they are likely candidates for the conference title.

Only for a brief spell in the first period did Chicago seem a match for the sharpshooting Lafayette boys. After Purdue had run up a 12 to 0 count on six quick baskets, the Maroons made a spirited rally to cut the Boilermaker advantage to 4 points. Thereafter Purdue dominated, its margin widening rapidly in the last stages of the contest.

Haarlow Held to 4 Points.

Capt. Bill Haarlow, Maroon ace, who was guarded by Red Lambert, was held to four points, two on free throws and one on a circus shot. His arch rival for individual scoring honors, Bob Kessler, Purdue captain, was credited with 9 points on three field goals and as many free throws. Scoring honors for the game, however, went to Bill Lang, Chicago forward, and Jewell Young, Purdue's sophomore forward, each of whom made 10 points. Pat Malaska, fiery little dribbler from Purdue, who was the showiest player on the floor, made four field goals.

Last week the Maroons let Wisconsin roll up 10 points before they scored for themselves. Last night Purdue had an even dozen points before Chicago broke into the scoring.

Purdue led, 24 to 14, at half time after baskets by Downey, Malaska and Elliott. Bill Haarlow was held to a basket and two free throws in the first period.

Purdue Increases Lead.

Purdue ran its advantage up to 34 to 17 in the first minutes of the last period. Kessler, Lambert, Sines, and Malaska counted on short baskets while Fitzgerald was making three points for the Maroons. Only one of the 20 baskets Purdue made during the evening could be called a long shot, an effort by Malaska. The other 19 were scored on fast ball handling close to the basket. The last four minutes of the game found the Maroons dazed by the Purdue attack, Lambert, Malaska, Mangas, and Young scoring in succession.

INDIANA, 27; N. U., 24

Bloomington, Ind. Jan. 11.—[Special.]—Rallying in the second half with a fast breaking offensive, Indiana university's basketball team won its second Big Ten victory in two starts by defeating Northwestern, 27 to 24, here tonight.

The battle kept a crowd of 6,000 in an uproar in the last period, when the score was tied three times. The Wildcats, paced by Fred Trenkle, Bloomington, Ill., sophomore, and Jean Smith, who started in place of the injured Nagode, led 15 to 13, at the intermission. The two Wildcats carried off high point honors, with eight each.

Teams Battle Evenly.

Fred Fechtman, towering center, led the Indiana attack with one field goal and four free throws. Ken Gunning, forward, and Wendel Walker, back guard, were the leaders in Indiana's brilliant rally. Outscored in baskets, 9 to 7, the Hoosiers clinched the game on free throws, sinking 13 to the Wildcats' 6.

Playing an airtight defensive game, Northwestern held the Hoosiers on even terms or better until the closing five minutes. With Indiana trailing, 23 to 22, Walker sank a long shot to give the Crimson a one point margin. Trenkle retaliated for the Wildcats, scoring from close range. After Platt tied the count on a free

MONTREAL, Que., Jan. 11.—(AP)—The Montreal Maroons took the lead in the international division of the National Hocky league tonight by defeating the New York Americans, 3 to 2, in a game that threatened to get beyond the control of the referees.

The victory put the Maroons a point ahead of the Toronto Maple Leafs, who were beaten by the Montreal Canadiens. The Americans retained third place.

Two perfectly executed solo goals by Hooley Smith decided the contest. In the first period and again in the third he raced through the American defense while teammates skated alongside him as decoys. On the winning goal Hooley got off his shot while falling after being checked by Joe Jerwa.

ILLINOIS WINS, 29-27

Madison, Wis., Jan. 11.—[Special.]—Illinois climaxed a wild and rough battle tonight by scoring four free throws in the last three minutes to defeat Wisconsin in the Badgers' first Big Ten home game of the season, 29 to 27. A capacity crowd of 8,800 saw the contest.

With the score tied, 25 to 25, the eighth time the game had been deadlocked, Combes, Vopicka, and Riegel dropped free throws to send the Illini into a 28 to 25 lead. Nick De Mark then gave the Badgers some hope of salvaging victory when he picked up two free throws on Braun's foul. In the last minute Henry sewed up the game with another free throw after missing twice on Stege's fourth personal foul.

Combes Is Big Star for Illini.

Both teams employed fast breaking offenses and moved their defenses far out from the basket. Although each scored ten times from the field, it was the hard driving rebound work of Illinois and the speed of Combes in particular that accounted for the victory.

Combes played a brilliant floor game, and his ball handling in the closing minutes kept the Badgers on the defense. Big Bob Riegel led the winners with five baskets and a free throw. He was a constant threat under the basket and scored three of Illinois' four field goals in the first half.

Although De Mark led the Badgers with eight points, it was the accurate eye of Fritz Wegner which kept Wisconsin in the running in the second half. During the first six minutes of this period Wegner scored all six of his points.

Game Is Just One Long Tie.

The score was tied at 1, 2, 9, 13, 19, 21, 23, and 25 points. The 13 to 13 deadlock prevailed at the half after Riegel and Vopicka had dropped in baskets in the last 10 seconds.

Illinois made good on nine of fifteen chances from the free throw line, and the Badgers scored on seven of twelve.

IOWA, 25; OHIO STATE, 23

Iowa City, Ia., Jan. 11.—[Special.]—Iowa's improving quintet scored its second Big Ten upset in a week by beating Ohio State tonight, 25 to 23. After trailing from the start, the Buckeyes rallied in the closing minutes and tied the score at 23 to 23, with a minute to go. Van Ysseldyk, Iowa's sophomore guard, then dribbled down the floor and scored from near the free throw line to clinch the game for the Hawks with three seconds to play.

Iowa with its superior height and deliberate floor play controled the ball most of the game. The Hawkeyes jumped into a 6 point lead in the first few minutes, and increased it to 12 to 2 late in the half. Ohio State did not score from the field until the last minute of the period, which ended wih Iowa ahead, 12 to 5.

The Hawks pumped in five baskets, two by Rosenthal, as the second half started to take a 22 to 13 lead, but the Buckeyes then rallied to tie the score before Van Ysseldyk's winning shot.

MICHIGAN WINS, 38-28

Ann Arbor, Mich., Jan. 11.—[Special.]—Michigan defeated Minnesota 38 to 28, in a Big Ten basketball game here tonight before 5,500. The Wolverines had considerable difficulty with their smaller opponents and couldn't quite match the aggressiveness the Gophers showed from start to finish.

Only when Capt. Chelso Tamagno was in the game did Michigan look definitly superior. At other times many of its passes went wild or were intercepted.

Michigan led at half time 23 to 12, stretched its lead in the opening minutes of the second half, but then was played even for the rest of the game. Wolverine scoring honors were evenly divided, John Gee and Earl Meyers getting eight points each and George Rudness seven. Ed Jones and Jim Baker were most accurate for the visitors, getting 10 and 9 points, respectively.

Rambler Polo Team Beats Fort Sheridan

Led by Maj. Dick Hunter, who scored 6 goals, the Ramblers polo team won an exciting game last night at the 124th Field Artillery Armory, defeating Fort Sheridan, 11½ to 9½, before a record crowd of 9,000.

A last chukker whirlwind finish told the story, as up to that time Fort Sheridan had protected its lead. In the final period Maj. Hunter tied the count at 8½ all, only to have Fort Sheridan go ahead on Capt. Larry Smith's goal. It was then that the Ramblers put on their prize attack with Maj. Hunter tallying again, Steve Hammond following suit and the latter's pony kicking in the goal that made the game safe for the winners.

Bill Fergus of the Ramblers was a casualty when a wallop from Capt. Smith's mallet knocked him unconscious. However, 15 minutes later he returned to the game.

The Shamrocks scored their third straight victory in the junior division by taking the evening's opener from Olympia Fields, 9 to 6½.

Capt. J. S. McAnulty was high point man for the Shamrocks with 4 goals. For Olympia Fields Hobart D. [Cowboy] Reed also made 4 goals.

Plenty of Parking Space.

Parking will be permitted on all side streets and officials may park in the vicinity of the administration building.

Twenty-one pairs of skates and 14 medals are the major awards which will be won today in the championships. The Northwest Skating club, whose members won four of the seven championships last year, is the defending team champion. Points for the team title will be scored for five places in the seven derbies. The scoring is as follows: First, 50 points; second, 40; third, 30; fourth, 20, and fifth, 10.

Records will be kept of the affiliation of all skaters. On this basis the ownership of the silver trophy for the largest number of competitors from any club, playground, or organization will be decided.

Winners of championships are barred from competing a second time in the same age class. They may compete in the next higher age group. This ruling automatically bars the senior champions each year.

Thank You, Gentlemen.

Credit for the facilities at the disposal of the contestants yesterday must be given to James P. Gallagher, chief of the landscape division of the Chicago Park district. What might have been adverse or impossible conditions because of the temperature, did not prevent the entire schedule of 187 preliminaries being completed at the assigned distances in exactly three hours.

In addition to the list of officials of THE TRIBUNE A. A., who conducted the registration of contestants, assigned them to heats, started, timed, and judged the races, many of the Chicago Park district instructors, municipal playground directors and board of education playground instructors assisted. Nathan Balter is the district supervisor for the Chicago Park district, in whose territory Garfield park is located.

Prep Football Rules Undergo Ten Changes

Ten changes in the high school football rules, which apply in 14 states, were announced by the rules committee of the National Federation of State High School Athletic Associations at the conclusion of a two days' meeting in the Palmer house yesterday. The changes follow:

1. The penalty for communicating instructions by a substitute upon entering play was removed entirely. Substitutes may communicate with other players immediately after reporting to the referee, instead of after the first play, as hitherto.

Jumping Is Banned.

2. If there is a foul by the team not in possession of the ball on the last play in either half, the down will be replayed, unless the penalty is declined.

3. The referee must notify the captain and coach of a team when the team has called its third and final time out.

4. Jumping with both feet or knees foremost was ruled unnecessary roughness. This eliminated the section on hurdling.

5. The ball will remain dead when it is snapped to the wrong player.

No Tackling Out of Bounds.

6. Tackling a runner out of bounds will be considered unnecessary roughness, with such ruling made mandatory upon the referee. Responsibility for knowing that the runner is out of bounds is placed upon the tackler.

7. The rule relative to unnecessary roughness in connection with neck and head tackles will be worded to specifically prohibit twisting and to convey the feeling of the rules committee.

8. The intermissions between quarters were lengthened to two minutes and between halves to fifteen minutes, with the recommendation that the last few minutes of the intermission be used in warming up.

New Safety Zone.

9. A safety zone of five yards along the sidelines is to be established. Benches, water buckets, and rigid markers are prohibited within this zone, except where the physical character of existing fields make this impossible.

10. A subcommittee was named to write in greater detail a tentative draft on what constitutes interference in a forward pass.

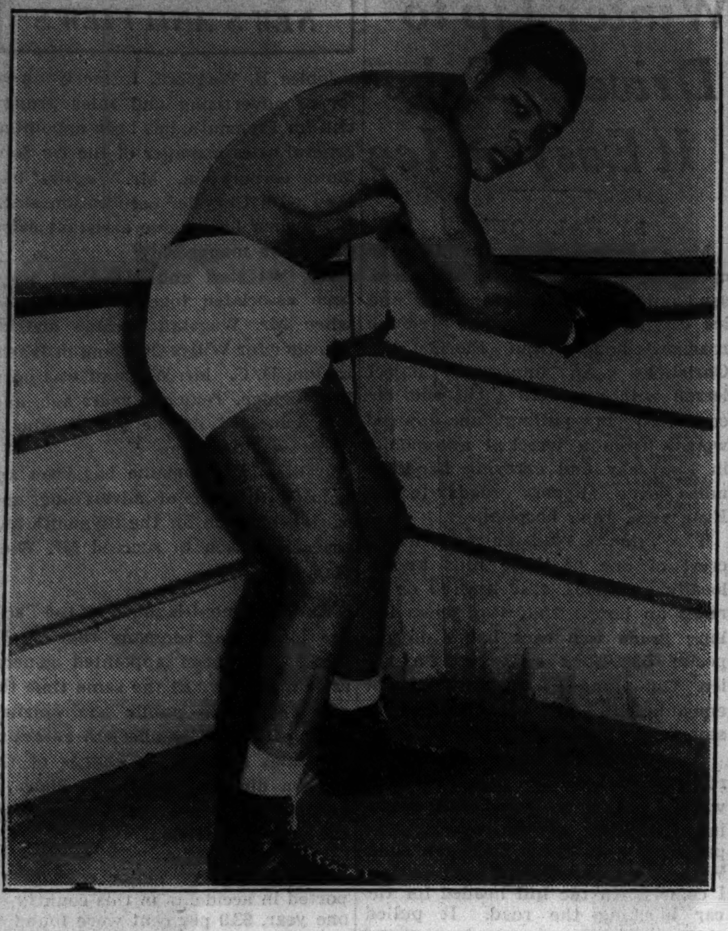
HOW MANY ROUNDS WILL IT GO? MAY BE SURPRISED!



Joe Louis, outstanding heavyweight boxer who won the 1934 Chicago Golden Gloves light heavy title, as he'll be in his corner for fight with Charley Retzlaff at Stadium Friday night.

Charley's Right Is Key to Bout Friday.

Now it's the turn of Charley Retzlaff to meet Joe Louis, the sensational fireball of professional pugilism. The date has been set for Friday night at the Stadium and Chicago folks hope the match lasts longer than the Levinsky scrap last August at Comiskey park. That night the Kingfish was up and down and out in less than one round, which was better than par for the course.

This brings up the only point of interest in connection with the Retzlaff-Louis fight: Will Charley start after the Brown Bomber with the definite purpose of tagging Louis' chin with a right hand punch? Or will he fight defensively, hoping that when disaster overtakes him it will be as painless as possible, and let's collect our money.

Charley's Right Has Snap.

If Retzlaff will fight, the bout may be worth while. Possibly it might become an exciting brawl, for Charley, me lad, can toss a straight right hand with a snap on the end like a giant firecracker. His left hand, while not as crude as the left hand of Max Baer, is an ineffective stiff arm which sags at the elbow, and neither wards off an enemy nor punishes him. But Charley's right has dumped some husky lads when he sighted for the jaw.

The only excuse for Mike Jacobs of New York, who has leased Joe Louis to Chicago again while he readies his own constituency for the Max Schmeling fight in June, to scale the Stadium at an excess of $100,000 is that he expects Retzlaff to fight, but not too much. Advance sale indicates a crowd of 20,000.

But Will Charley Fight?

Will Retzlaff fight? It's been some time since Joe Louis was in a fight. Primo Carnera entered the ring confident. He fought as best he knew how, but he stood there, a giant oak before the woodsman's ax, and as helpless. King Levinsky, whom Max Baer taught the fear of a knockout, was half dragged from his dressing room to meet the Bomber. Levinsky fell palsied from fear as much as from Louis' punches.

And Max Baer, the raging lion of Speculator, N. Y., came forth for a million dollar fight in Yankee stadium like a lamb. He vainly tried to protect his jaw and foolishly attempted to outbox Louis. Paulino Uzcudun had nothing to offer except courage, and while his courage never wavered, it was no great sight to see Louis dispose of an old man dragged from semi-retirement.

Retzlaff can win only if he carries the fight to Louis. That should be his plan of battle. But you'll have to wait until Friday night to see what Retzlaff wants to do. You know now what Joe Louis will try to do and the ayes have it he'll do it.

Commission Watches Boxers.

Chairman Joe Triner, Commissioner Packey McFarland, Secretary Gene Meany, and Inspector Harold Ryan of the Illinois boxing commission yesterday visited the training quarters of Louis and Retzlaff for their impending match.

After they had watched Retzlaff spar two rounds each with Art Sykes and John Brown at Madison Square loop gymnasium they went to Trafton's gymnasium and viewed Joe's workout, a drill which included six rounds of boxing, two each with Otis Thomas, Tom Jones, and Tiger Henderson. The commissioners expressed satisfaction in the physical and mental condition of Retzlaff, but indicated that Louis may be undertrained. Both contentions appeared to coincide with those held by critics and handlers of each fighter.

Louis to Keep Working.

In any event Retzlaff will be given a vacation while the Brown Bomber will be put through another hard session this afternoon. Louis will follow the same routine tomorrow, Tuesday, and Wednesday. On Thursday he will do only loosening up exercises. Retzlaff also is scheduled to work out tomorrow, Tuesday, and Wednesday, but he will be given a second rest on Thursday.

U. S. Olympic Hocky Team Ties French Players, 4-4

PARIS, Jan. 11.—(AP)—The United States Olympic hocky team played a 4 to 4 tie with the French Volants tonight in its first game after arriving in Europe. The Americans showed the effects of their sea voyage, which ended yesterday, in their poor teamwork, but balanced it with good individual play. Outstanding for the Americans were Goalie Tom Moore and Johnny Garrison of Boston and Fred Kammer of New York.

Golf Officials Vote to Keep Stymie Rule

New York, Jan. 11.—(AP)—Two years of agitation for abolition of the stymie regulation ended today when the United States Golf association voted unanimously to accept the executive committee's report favoring its retention.

The matter was contained in the report of the rules of golf committee, which revealed that the executive committee last night decided 8 to 5 against a change in the rule. The presentation of the report was a formality in so far as adoption was concerned, but it produced one dissenter after the vote had been polled.

Charles E. Mason of Boston, president of the Massachusetts State Golf association, said that a widespread poll conducted among amateur golfers in his state revealed that 76 per cent were against the stymie regulation; 20 per cent in favor of it and the remainder were "on the fence." Golf executives and professionals were solidly opposed to the stymie, he said.

St. Andrews Refuses Change.

"For the better part of two years the executive committee and the rules of golf committee," said the report, "have given careful and constant consideration to the proposal that the stymie be abolished as part of match play competitions. Until the meeting of the executive committee held Jan. 10, 1936, the views of the members have been about evenly divided. At that meeting by a vote of 8 to 5 it was decided that no change in the rules be made.

"This action was preceded by conferences with representatives of the Royal and Ancient Golf Club of St. Andrews and corresponds with its rules committee. At a meeting of that committee held last December it likewise decided against the proposed change."

It was reported Prescott S. Bush, who was succeeded today as president by John G. Jackson, was among those strongly opposed to stymie, and that the executive committee last year favored retention by only a 7 to 6 margin.

Rule Against Slow Play.

The meeting also unanimously approved a recommendation by the championship committee that competitors who indulge in slow play in national championships "will not be tolerated in the future and that it will take appropriate steps, including disqualification, if necessary, to insure fair play to competitors who play at the customery speed." Unofficially it was said this action was prompted by the "slow poke" pace traveled by Freddie Haas of New Orleans and Joe Lynch of Boston in the 1935 amateur championship.

The executive committee reported that the club membership in 1935 had decreased to 767 by the loss of 72 members.

Cubs Fire Lindstrom; Stoneham Dies Review of Week in Sports

When contracts were mailed to the Chicago Cubs a year ago, most of the players on the squad found that their salary had sustained a substantial cut as a result of their disappointing showing during the 1934 season. With a sprinkling of new players in the lineup last summer they made a sensational dash in the last month of the season won 21 games in a row, and captured the National league pennant for the first time in three years.

As a reward for that feat, contracts were mailed out Wednesday to the squad members with an announcement by Manager Grimm that every player on the roster had been given an increase in pay for the 1936 season.

One name, however, apparently was missing from that roster, for two days later the Cubs' office announced Freddy Lindstrom, one of the big factors in the team's pennant drive, had been released unconditionally after every other team in the league had rejected him at the waiver price of $7,500. Lindstrom, once regarded as one of the greatest players in the National league, had been with the Cubs only one year. He was acquired from Pittsburgh after the 1934 season in the deal that sent Guy Bush, Jim Weaver, and Babe Herman to the Pirates. The Pirates had bought him in 1932 from New York, where he started his major league career as a third baseman in 1924.

Stoneham of Giants Dies.

Stoneham, a stock broker whose only interest in sports at the time was a connection with a Havana race track, was persuaded by the late John J. McGraw, famous Giant manager, to invest in the club when the heirs of John T. Brush, former owner, offered it for sale. He, McGraw and Francis X. McQuade took over the club, Stoneham paying a reported million and a half dollars for a 65 per cent interest.

He held that controling interest until his death despite frequent squabbles with his associates which culminated in the ousting of McQuade in 1931. Although he was never well known to the baseball fans of New York, he was active in the direction of the club's affairs until his death. In recent years, however, he had been training his son, Horace, to succeed him. In mid-December, suffering from Bright's disease, he had gone to Hot Springs for treatment, but was not regarded as critically ill until three days before his death.

Gottselig, Hawks Revive.

For the last month the Chicago Blackhawks hocky team has been slipping steadily downward in the National league standing, and one of the principal reasons was Johnny Gottselig's worst slump as a scorer since he entered major league hocky. Last Thursday night in Madison Square Garden, Gottselig snapped out of it and carried the Hawks along with him. In the first period he drove home a goal against the Americans, followed it with another in the second period, two more in the third, for all of the points by which the Hawks scored a 4 to 1 victory. The triumph put the Hawks back into the American division race, only half a game out of second place after verging perilously on last place. The week's scores:

SUNDAY.

Montreal Maroons, 3; Blackhawks, 2.
Detroit, 5; Canadiens, 2.
Rangers, 0; Americans, 0.

TUESDAY.

Boston, 2; Blackhawks, 0.
Detroit, 2; Rangers, 1.

THURSDAY.

Blackhawks, 4; Americans, 1.
Maroons, 1; Canadiens, 1.

Jeers for Cheer Leaders.

Seven years ago Dr. Henry S. Pritchett, president emeritus of the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching, startled the sports world with his now famous Bulletin 23 which, among other things, charged wholesale recruiting, subsidization, and overemphasis on athletics in American colleges. Like the feeble report of a popgun compared to that terrific blast of 1929 came Dr. Pritchett's latest attack on college athletics last Thursday. Writing in the Harvard Alumni Bulletin, he fulminated against football as "not a gentlemen's game," advocated the abolition of gate receipts and paid football coaches and devoted a large part of his article to attacking what every one hitherto has regarded as the most inoffensive of all appurtenances of college sports—the cheer leader. He described the activities of cheer leaders as "vulgar," "unsportsmanlike," and urged the discontinuance of organized cheering sections along with their leaders.

Klein Wins at Miami.

Willie Klein, Wheatley Hills, N. Y., won the $2,500 Miami open golf tournament last Sunday with a 72 hole total of 272, eight strokes under par and six strokes under the record for the tournament. Gene Sarazen was second with 277, John Revolta third with 278. The same day, Jimmy Hines of Garden City, Long Island, won the $3,000 Riverside, Cal., open tournament, shooting 276 for the 72 holes. Harold McSpaden's 284 won second place. Byron Nelson and Orville White tied for third with 286.

U. S. Olympic Team Arrives in Hamburg

HAMBURG, Germany, Jan. 11.—(AP)—Twenty-nine members of the American Olympic ski and bobsled teams arrived today in the liner Manhattan. After an automobile tour of the city the athletes boarded the night rail express to Munich whence they will proceed to Garmisch-Partenkirchen in the Bavarian Alps to compete in the 1936 winter Olympic games, Feb. 6 to 16.

The Americans, in their red and dark blue sports costumes, were welcomed by John G. Erhardt, American consul general here, and a representative of the reich sports leader.

They were officially received at the city hall by local authorities. Dr. Joel H. Hildrebhand of the University of California, manager and coach of the skiers, spoke briefly in behalf of the visiting athletes.

All members of the team arrived in good physical condition despite buffeting by a North Sea gale which delayed the arrival of the United States liner.

Hocky Team in France.

New York, Jan. 11.—(AP)—Except for the figure skaters, who will depart next Wednesday, the majority of American participants in the winter Olympic games in Germany sailed from New York in the United States liner Manhattan Jan. 3.

The group of 45 competitors which departed last week included members of the ski, bobsled, speed skating and hocky teams.

The hocky players disembarked at Havre, France, for sixteen exhibition games in England, France, and Switzerland before proceeding to Garmisch-Partenkirchen for the Olympic games. The squad expects to reap sufficient money in guarantees from the exhibitions to cover expenses to Germany.

The speed skaters are scheduled to go to Oslo, Norway, for further training in the European style of skating.

HAWKS SUSPEND GOALIE CHABOT, BUY KENDALL

New Wing Will Report Tonight.

BY EDWARD BURNS.

The Blackhawks, at the completion of yesterday's practice for tonight's game with the Montreal Canadiens, announced the suspension of Goalie Lorne Chabot and the purchase of Bill [Cowboy] Kendall, a right wing.

Kendall, who played with the Hawks last season and the season before, was acquired from the London, Ont., Tecumsehs, to whom he had been sent for seasoning. He will report in time to oppose the Canadiens at the Stadium tonight.

Chabot's suspension without pay followed his refusal to report to the Pittsburgh Pirates of the International league, to whom he had been loaned to get back in shape.

Chabot Hurts Knee.

The veteran goalie who won the Vezina trophy last year, injured a knee in pre-season practice at Champaign, Ill., and was sent home to Canada. The Hawks had continued to pay him a full salary and had arranged to do so while he played with Pittsburgh.

Chabot balked at joining a minor league team, despite the salary arrangement. His suspension followed. Although he was scored upon less than any other goalie in the league last year, no National league team has put in a bid for his services.

Johnny Gottselig, in his eighth season with the Blackhawks, ought to rate a lot of lusty cheers, not to say nine rahs and a tiger, when he takes his turn on the Stadium ice tonight. A skinny gent like Johnny who can make all four goals in a 4 to 1 slump emergence like Johnny did against the Americans Thursday night rates all the hollering that strong lunged hocky nuts can bellow.

Johnny's four goal performance is not, however, an individual high scoring record. The fellow who holds that record will be on Stadium ice tonight. Reference is made to Pit Lepine, veteral center of the Canadiens. In a game against Ottawa on Dec. 14, 1929, a match which the Canadiens won, 6 to 4, Lepine scored 5 goals and one assist.

Rate Gottselig Better.

Hocky statistics sharks will tell you, though, that Gottselig's performance Thursday night is more impressive than Lepine's record performance. Pit's feat was turned in during the brief span when the "wide open forward pass" was legal. This so cheapened goals that it was hastily knocked out, the rule committee returning to the present off side restrictions.

Gottselig's solo harvest, though not an official record, probably stands unparalleled in professional hocky in the matter of contrasts. In 20 games prior to the American encounter he had scored a grand total of one goal; one-fourth as many as he scored in the one game Thursday night. And, as all suffering Hawk addicts know, Johnny's personal losing streak was not the only one that he broke when he beat the Americans.

The Canadiens, after a distressing siege of early season casualties, are reported to be healthy again. Furthermore, they are seeking to regain their old title of "Flying Frenchmen." Recent replacements have been from the ranks of French-Canadian players. These newcomers include Conrad and Jean-Louis Bourcier, Joffre Desilete, Polly Drouin, and Rod Lorrain. There are only five of the Canadiens who are not of French extraction. One of these, Leroy Goldsworthy, former Hawk, is the team's leading scorer. Defenseman Buswell, who formerly played on the Chicago Shamrocks, will be in the starting lineup.

One Way to Look at It.

All the teams in the United States division of the National league will be engaged in battle tonight. The setup offers a mathematical prospect quite cheering to the slumpful Hawks. If the Hawks beat the Canadiens, the Maroons beat the Red Wings, and the Bruins beat the Rangers, the Hawks will be only a half game out of leadership of the United States division.

HINES, PICARD LEAD WITH 137 AT LOS ANGELES

Cooper, McSpaden Trail by One Stroke.

Over rain-soaked fairways, Hines came in with a 68, two under par, today and Pickard, who uncorked a brilliant 66 yesterday, emerged with a 71. Hines was one of only two players to crack par today in contrast with yesterday's 14. Today's other par-breaker was Charlie Lacey of Long Island, N. Y., with 69.

One stroke back of the leaders were Harry Cooper, Chicago veteran, and Harold McSpaden, from Kansas City, Kas.

Four Tie at 140.

Four golfers finished with 140—Olin Dutra, Los Angeles, national open king two years ago; Jimmy Thomson, Ridgewood, N. J., runner-up in the open last year; Marshall Becker, Topeka, Kas., and Byron Nelson, also of Ridgewood. Trailing a stroke behind was Horton Smith, Chicago.

Fifty players who finished today's play with 149 qualified for the final 36 holes tomorrow.

It was a cold, dreary day. A drizzle set in before noon and let up only after the last player came in. Greens were sloppy, the fairways heavy, and many players donned slicker suits.

Picard, playing the last four holes in the wet, clipped a stroke off par going out but went two over coming in.

Ghezzi Shoots 78.

McSpaden took a 71 and Cooper a 72, and with Vic Ghezzi, Deal, N. J., played the last round in the rain. Ghezzi, winner of the event last year, went to pieces after finishing in the lead yesterday with a 66. Losing control of his tee shot, he dropped six penalty strokes on the first nine, two when he landed in a tree, and needed 78 to get around.

He wasn't alone in the wilderness, however. Don Erickson, Los Angeles amateur, after a 67 yesterday, shot an 81 today. Ted Naismith, Australian pro, and Nick Petropolo, Culver City, Cal. amateur, shot 68 yesterday. Naismith took an 81 and Petropolo an 86 today.

Quigley Aims for South Side K. of C. Title

Opening games in the second round for the West division and a contest in the South section which may decide the first half title will feature the schedule in the Knights of Columbus basketball league this afternoon and tonight.

The league this season is playing a split schedule, with the first half winners to meet the second round champions for divisional titles at the end of the season. St. Cyr won the first round title in the West section, while Quigley is now setting the pace in the South.

Quigley's hold on first place will be disputed tonight at St. Rita's gymnasium, 63d street and Oakley avenue, by Santa Maria, in second place. A victory for the leaders will practically sew up the divisional title. Calumet and Loyola-Hyde Park, both of whom also have mathematical chances to tie for the lead, meet in another standout game.

St. Cyr, West division first half champion, will start its drive for the second round championship, which would obviate the necessity of a play-off, against the strong Setters aggregation at St. Philip's gym, Jackson boulevard and Kedzie avenue, in the afternoon. Damen vs. Hughes and Barry vs. Carroll will also bring together teams that stack up as serious contenders for divisional honors.

AMONG THE FOLKS IN HISTORY

COME ON, YOU CANADIANS!

Shamrocks to Meet Windsor on Ice Today

The first amateur hocky game of the season will be held at the Chicago Stadium this afternoon when the C. Y. O. Shamrocks battle the Windsor Motor sextet of Canada. The game is scheduled to start at 2:45 o'clock, with two Blackhawk players as the referees.

The game will be the first of a series on the Shamrocks' schedule against teams in the Michigan-Ontario league. The contests will be held every Sunday afternoon in the Stadium.

Third Conacher to Play.

Roland Conacher, young cousin to Lionel and Charlie of professional hocky fame, will make his local debut in the Shamrock lineup at center position. That another Conacher is coming along to add luster to the most famous name in hocky history is predicted by veterans who have seen Roland play.

Seek Second Victory.

Today's encounter is the second game of the season for the Shamrocks. They won a hard fought battle at Muskegon New Year's day, 4 to 3. The "Irish" were handicaped throughout the game by an unusual number of penalties.

Today's lineup:

ATHLETIC BOARD AT WISCONSIN TO RESUME INQUIRY

Officials Will Take Up the Controversy Tomorrow.

Madison, Wis., Jan. 11.—[Special.]—Two days before it again will be hauled out for further investigation, the exact status of the University of Wisconsin's latest athletic flareup is anybody's guess.

Pigeon-holed by the university board of regents on Dec. 19 until its next meeting, the controversy is scheduled to come before the athletic board again Monday. The regents will return two days later to delve further into the situation.

During the interim there have been numerous rumors and as many denials, but positively nothing "official."

Part of a Long Story.

The most recent outbreak in what admittedly is a continuance of nearly two decades of intermittent friction in the university athletic department came early in December. It revolved about a petition circulated by John Golemgeske, captain-elect of the 1936 football team, which asked the resignation of Dr. C. W. Spears, football coach. Golemgeske signed a statement that the petition was instigated by Dr. Walter E. Meanwell, athletic director, and the war broke out on several battle fronts.

In a rapid succession of events Meanwell denied the charges emphatically and in their entirety; Golemgeske retaliated with a signed affidavit that Meanwell had given him a drink of rye whisky after the Northwestern game, and the whole affair was tossed into the lap of the athletic board.

Everybody Is Questioned.

That body conducted half a dozen star chamber sessions, during which it questioned members of the football squad and the coaches, and then dumped its data into the laps of the regents without recommendation.

Visibly disappointed over the athletic board's failure to commit itself and further puzzled over subsequent charges of fraternity politics and other complications projected into the muddle, the regents hastily called signals and passed the controversy right back to the athletic board.

The latter body has only the power to recommend, but the regents' somewhat sharp statement upon adjournment inferred a demand for such a stand.

Some Fancy Pass Work.

To the casual observer, action of the board and the regents was regarded as a strategic shifting of responsibility in accepting what in legal circles is known as "original jurisdiction." Since that forward passing act the situation has been at a standstill officially. But there have been rumors—always accompanied by denials or refusal to make a statement.

Soccer Teams Put on Second Tourney Today

BY OFFSIDE.

Matches of both the indoor and outdoor variety are scheduled today for Chicago soccer fans.

The Illinois Soccer association will put on its second indoor tournament at the 132d armory, Madison and Rockwell streets, with 16 teams competing in a series of battles beginning at 1 p. m.

Last Sunday the tournament lasted more than six hours. Today the rules have been changed and instead of playing extra periods when teams are tied, the eleven scoring the first goal will be adjudged the winner.

The Vikings, who won the first tourney, will have more competition today, as a number of professionals are entered.

Heading the schedule of outdoor matches is the clash between Sparta Garden City and Moravska, also a member of the Chicago Professional league, at Sparta stadium, 21st street and Kostner avenue, starting at 2:15 o'clock. Sparta is to play the Ben Millers of St. Louis next Sunday in the national challenge cup series.

The national amateur cup match between the Wilsons and Ravenswood Hearts, which has been postponed for two weeks, will be played at Winnemac park at 2:15 o'clock if weather permits.

Winter Tip to Drivers! Take It Easy on Ice

BY HAL FOUST.

More suggestions for winter car operation were acquired in a thousand miles of sleet, slush, snow, and ice driving in pushing the Tribune roadster home from Florida for Christmas. An impressive object lesson with no small thrill was encountered in pulling an injured woman from a wrecked automobile in Kentucky and carrying her fifty miles over slippery roads to an Evansville, Ind., hospital.

The Tribune roadster reached the crest of one of those hills known locally as knobs, traveling 30 or 35 miles an hour. Half way down the long grade two cars bound in opposite directions sidewiped on the ice. One plunged down a fifteen foot embankment. The other came to a stop crosswise of the road.

A touch of the brakes locked the roadster's wheels and indicated there was no chance to stop before reaching the scene of the wreck. The pavement was like a toboggan slide. With one hand on the horn button, I came down the hill headed for the car blocking the road. It pulled away just in time for me to pass and then it continued on south. In another fifty yards I was able to stop on the dirt shoulder beside the pavement.

Too Big a Hurry.

The sedan that had dived down the embankment had come to rest right side up but badly battered from collisions with trees. In the front seat was a woman holding both hands to her head and face. She was helped out of the wreck and into the Tribune roadster.

For an hour and a half she sat beside this reporter en route to the hospital. There was a chip of glass in her left eye, an ugly gash on her forehead and a swollen bruise on her chin.

"I guess I was in too big a hurry," she remarked.

On the trip north the bad weather was met before leaving Florida. A cold rain began while stopped for five hours of sleep in Tallahassee. Shortly after entering Alabama the rain mixed with sleet and snow and froze to the windshield.

I don't know as much as I should about keeping a windshield clean in such weather. There are a number of accessories on the market for this purpose, but the Tribune roadster is lacking in this equipment. From what I have seen of these devices I'm inclined to favor the type that throws hot air onto the windshield. Some buses use this type.

Lacking any special equipment, the hot air heater was started in the roadster. This thawed the ice on the windshield enough for fair visibility.

Brakes Go Bad.

On entering Montgomery, Ala., the brakes faded. I could stand on the brake pedal without getting results. On the streets of the city I was proceeding cautiously, shifting into second gear to let compression bring the car down to ten miles an hour on approaching trafic lights. With full pressure on the pedal the automobile could be brought to a stop from ten miles an hour, but it was with a groan and vibration in the front end.

At the first brake service station a mechanic advised that it would be necessary to pull all four wheels, to wash the linings with gasoline and let them dry. He said there was dirt, water, and probably ice in the so-called waterproof brakes.

Before submitting to this delay and expense I tried an experiment that I hadn't attempted before because the fault had seemed to be something vital, like a broken brake rod. I drove a block in second gear with the engine pulling against the brakes, with friction baking the brake shoes and linings. This corrected the condition and I was able to continue.

NEWS AND VIEWS

James B. Wagstaff, formerly director of advertising and sales promotion for Plymouth, has been appointed general sales manager of the De Soto Motor corporation. Mr. Wagstaff has been with Chrysler corporation since 1928, when he became assistant sales promotion manager.

Mr. Wagstaff and Mr. Peed have been associated together since 1922, when Mr. Wagstaff became district manager for Willys-Overland in Washington, D. C. Mr. Wagstaff was born in Ethridge, Tenn., 39 years ago, and was educated in the public schools of Brownstown, Ind.

William W. Romaine has been appointed director of advertising and sales promotion for the Plymouth Motor corporation to succeed Mr. Wagstaff.

Announcement is made by the Packard Motor Car company that W. M. Packer has been appointed general sales manager. At the same time the company made public the appointment of R. E. Chamberlain as assistant sales manager in charge of the eastern division and L. W. Slack as assistant sales manager in charge of the western division.

Out of 1,268,300 motor vehicles reported in accidents in this country in one year, 93.9 per cent were found to be in apparently good condition, which would seem to place the blame for America's motor massacre on careless driving and failure to use proper safeguards, such as tire chains, when streets and roads are covered with snow, ice, or mud. Safety authorities, in urging the use of established driving safeguards, point to good brakes and the proper use of tire chains as one solution to the ever growing number of highway accidents, which accounted for death or injury to approximately 1,200,000 Americans in 1936.

The Buick Safety legion, with an expected immediate membership of more than 200,000 Buick owners throughout the United States and an objective of 500,000 by the middle of the year, will be launched by the Buick Motor company Jan. 15. The project, plans for which were announced by Harlow H. Curtice, president of the company, will be part of a major safety campaign to be carried on by the company among more than 2,500,000 Buick owners in the United States throughout the coming year.

Newspaper advertising forms the backbone of the promotional effort which Chevrolet is putting behind the most aggressive merchandising program in its history. This was revealed by Felix Doran Jr., assistant general sales manager, in an interview following the all-day session which he and G. I. Smith, great lakes regional manager, conducted here in the Drake hotel by way of launching the year's activities.

Mr. Doran also explained the $1,000,000 used car disposal plan under which Chevrolet and its dealers will scrap thousands of dangercusly old vehicles this month, thus promoting the cause of trafic safety which is uppermost in the public mind.

Tenders have been invited by the Ford Motor company for construction of a continuous glass melting furnace to be installed in the safety glass factory at the Rouge plant, Dearborn, Mich. The furnace will cost in the neighborhood of half a million dollars and will increase the capacity of the plant from 75,000 to 200,000 square feet of rough plate glass per day. Foundations are already in place.

This is the last major equipment order in the glass factory enlargement, which has been in progress since last March at an estimated total cost of $3,000,000.

Due largely to being first in the market with a super-charger model in the low priced field, Graham car sales in the Chicago area turned in a 300 per cent increase during December over a year ago, according to B. G. Sykes, president of the Bird-Sykes company, Chicago distributors.

Mr. Sykes also credited autumn introductions of the new models and the recent highly successful Chicago automobile show as other important factors in the sales gain.

The motor car industry will continue to blaze new trails in 1936 as it did in 1935, according to H. J. Klingler, president and general manager of Pontiac Motor company. From 1930 to 1935 automotive management was a case of trimming sail—cutting expense. Now business has taken such a reversal there is the danger of going overboard with optimism.

"The automobile industry is the country's foremost example of individualism," said Mr. Klingler. "It is a leader, not a follower."

NORTH SIDE AUTO DEALERS TO HOLD SPRING EXHIBIT

In keeping with the current boom of the automobile industry, north side dealers will hold their largest show in history at the 13th annual motor salon, Feb. 15 to 23, inclusive, in the Edgewater Beach hotel. Over 21 different makes of cars will be in the exhibit totaling some 75 models.

Several models of the following cars will be exhibited: Auburn, Buick, Cadillac, Chevrolet, Chrysler, Cord, Dodge, De Soto, Ford, Graham-Paige, Hudson, Hupmobile, Lafayette, La Salle, Lincoln, Nash, Oldsmobile, Packard, Pierce-Arrow, Pontiac, Plymouth, Studebaker, Terreplane, and Zephyr.

PROFIT AT PAXTON.

Paxton, Ill., Jan. 11.—[Special.]—The Paxton invitational basketball tournament this year showed a profit of approximately $200 for the four day series.

VOICE OF TRAFIC

THE POOR PEDESTRIAN.

Chicago, Dec. 30.—"The Quick—and the Dead." So classifies Chicago citizenry. The dead—well, they "sorrow no more." But the "quick" are the alert pedestrians who await the green light to proceed to the opposite corner, reasoning that a "green light ahead" means safe passage—it meant that for driver, why not for pedestrian?

But, lo! a corner turning car rushes upon him from behind; another corner turning car in front rushes toward him! What chance has Mr. Pedestrian? Is it wonderable that the crossing slaughter goes merrily or mercilessly on? Are drivers paid premiums for each victim? Of course some of the "quick" escape.

Why not give the pedestrian a break? Why not allow him a brief five or even a generous ten seconds to orient himself to the green light and make his getaway before pounced upon by corner turning vehicles? Let the impatient driver who has enjoyed his "green light ahead" hold himself this brief moment while somebody's son, brother, father, or mother proceeds safely across the street. Let's play safe rather than be sorry. So will fewer of the "quick" join so speedily the great majority of the "dead."

QUICK.

READABLE STREET SIGNS.

Chicago, Jan. 1.—While members of the city council are on the subject of changing the names of various streets, it is a pity they do not go a little further and discuss ways and means of installing readable signs on all our street corners. Could not some of the so-called federal "easy money" be used for this purpose? In scattered sections all over the city one can drive for blocks and unless he recognizes the streets by familiar landmarks, is out of luck, for there is never a sign to inform him. This condition existed during the two World's Fair seasons, when hundreds of outsiders were driving here.

F. WICKERSHAM.

SLIPPERY STREETS.

Chicago, Jan. 5.—Why is Chicago so lax? So much talk of massacre due to automobile accidents. Haven't they overlooked the fact that one of the greatest hazards of all is the slippery condition of the streets. At present snow and ice making it unsafe for even a careful driver, and for the pedestrian as well.

Why cannot the unemployed be put to work at once as soon as streets become dangerous because of ice and sleet. Let these men spread ashes at all crossings at least, if not on the entire street. So many men could be put to really good constructive use in making the streets safer for the driver as well as the pedestrian.

GOLDEN GLOVES THIS YEAR TO SET ALL-TIME RECORD

392 to Fight in Tournament of Champions.

The Tournament of Champions, which will climax the amateur boxing campaign this winter in 13 states, will break all records for number of contestants. When the tournament opens at the Stadium on Feb. 24 there will be 49 teams eligible for competition.

Forty-four newspapers will hold Golden Gloves tournaments this year and each will send eight champions to Chicago. The Catholic Youth organization's champions also will enter the Tournament of Champions and the three Chicago sectionals in the open division will qualify 32 boxers, four in each weight division. The 49 teams thus will constitute an entry of list of 392 boys.

Finals Scheduled March 6.

In three days this group will be reduced to 32 winners who then will compete in the semi-finals and finals at the Stadium on March 6.

New centers for Golden Gloves this year are the St. Louis Globe-Democrat, Cincinnati Post, Oklahoma City Oklahoman, Kenosha Evening News, Cedar Rapids, Ia., Gazette, Terre Haute, Ind., Star-Tribune, Evansville, Ind., Courier and Journal, and the Huntington, W. Va., Advertiser. The 13 states which will be represented in Chicago are Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, Ohio, West Virginia, Kentucky, Tennessee, Missouri, Oklahoma, Iowa, Nebraska, Wisconsin, and Minnesota.

Detroit Beats 1,000 Mark.

All sectional tournaments now have started taking entries for their bouts. The Detroit Free Press closed entries yesterday with an all-time record of more than 1,000 amateur boxers signed to compete in the trials from which will come eight champions. E. W. Edgar, sports editor, warned all other teams yesterday that Detroit expects to win the out of town team championship trophy. Entry in Detroit is more than 400 larger than a year ago.

While entries for the Chicago Novice and Open tournaments will not close until Jan. 31, the boys who enter now not only will have choice of sectionals when they report for their medical examinations, but they will have more time to prepare for their matches.

All Bouts Three Rounds.

All bouts will be three rounds and each round will be of two minutes duration. No amateur is permitted to box more than twice in one evening. All boxers must be registered with the central association of the Amateur Athletic union. This registration will take place at the time of the medical examinations. Charge for membership in the A. A. U. for one year is $1 in the Open division. Novice boxers may register with the A. A. U. for the Golden Gloves tournament only. This registration fee will be paid for by THE TRIBUNE.

RICKEY DENIES DELANCEY WILL BE OUT ALL YEAR

St. Louis, Mo., Jan. 11.—(AP)—Branch Rickey, vice president of the St. Louis Cardinals, tonight denied reports that the Cardinals had given up hope of getting ailing Catcher Bill Delancey back in uniform during the 1936 season.

Rickey said Delancey, bedfast with a pneumonia attack the last three months, would be moved here from a [illegible]nville, Ill., hospital Monday for special treatment.

"We still are hoping Delancey will recuperate in time to play most of the season, but it all depends on how quickly he improves," he said.

Delancey has grown stronger steadily for two weeks.

Brothers Hold Tourney Today to Decide City Bowling Title

BY HOWARD MARTIN.

For the twenty-second year in succession the Brothers' bowling championship of Chicago will be decided today at the 131 South Wabash alleys. Squads will start rolling at 3 p. m. and shortly after 9 p. m. two young men will be awarded gold medals and other honors that go with the winning of the 1935-36 brothers' title.

Last year Ed and Robert Krems won the championship. They are not among the entries received thus far and if even they were they would not be favorites to repeat since the tournament now is on a handicap basis, giving each pair entered an equal chance.

The first Brothers' tournament was started by Peter Howley, who still has an active interest in the event. Among the entries received thus far are:

3 P. M.—B. and K. Jacobson, B. and J. Minardi, H. and F. Norman, H. and J. Larson, E. and C. Diesing, S. and K. Busch, I. L. and C. J. Wymer, W. and N. Fehramm, G. and J. Pica.

Randolph League.

The last place Cyrilla Cigars came to life and won three Randolph league games at the expense of Roosevelt Brewing. They now have 11 won and 31 lost, games and games behind the leading Mineralites who swept their series with Cohasset Punch and increased their first place margin to eight games over the Boyle Motors and Birk Brothers. In 39 games the Mineralites have lost only eight. High individuals were: Notz 694; P. Butler, 675; Steers, 674; Flint, 672, and W. Freitag, 670.

Windy City League.

All three top teams took it on the chin in the Windy City Major league, which was led by the G. and W. Distillery team's 3,018 total, good for two victories. Both the O'Keefe Coals and Blazek Tailors, who are tied for the lead, lost two out of three, as did the third place Mineralites, who remain two games back of first place. A new low was hung up by the Betinis Boosters, who had a 773 game with such contributions as Hazucha's 139, Podmers' 165, Kotalik's 150, Grabinski's 159, and Plunge's 160. Sykes Thoma led th eindividuals with 664.

About the Women.

Four games now are the margin by which Bess Fender leads the Crocombe All-Star league at the Woodlawn alleys, where the feminine sharpshooters will gather for another round of matches tonight. Miss Fender has 40 victories and 12 defeats. Tied for second at 36 won and 16 lost are Edith Kirg, still the top average shooter, and Fritzi Trettin. Tonight's schedule:

Mae Stone vs. Fritzi Trettin; Nellie Rynberk vs. Bess Fender; Tess Morris vs. May Davison; Agnes Pitelka vs. Cecelia Leary; Mabel Cummings vs. Alberta Burton; Dorothy Burmeister vs. Ann Burke; Edith Kirg vs. Agnes Crocombe; Bess Fender vs. Dorothy Morross.

Marie Ledene's 546 was high in the Samuelson Major league. Eileen Williams shot 541; Nellie Baumgartner, 535; Martha Bendick, 532; Isabel Van Der Mullem, 528; Wilma Wright, 523; Erna Plambeck, 520; Pauline Strassburger, 505; Amanda Kath, 502, and Lill Roos, 500. . . . In the Monte Cristo-Lorel Rug league, Edna Haisch led with 554, followed by Marie Regelin, 541; Charlotte Ehrns, 535; Helen Miller, 511, and Lillian Walder, 500. . . .Marie Schoppen registered 587 for the best series in the Bruck Major league. Then came Bernice Kemph, 570; Nettie Kolb, 558; Celia Rosencranz, 554; Jessie Townsend, 545; Carrie Enders, 543, and Pearl Ammon, 542. . . . A 582 for Betty Kliene topped the West Ridge league.

CALIFORNIA GETS U. S.-AUSTRALIAN GOLF TOURNEY

Sarasota, Fla., Jan. 11.—[U. P.]—The matches between the Australian and United States Professional Golf association teams for the Lakes trophy will be played in California, George Jacobus, president of the P. G. A., announced tonight.

Jacobus had planned the matches for Florida but the Australian team sails for home March 4 without coming to Florida so he granted their request to play on the west coast.

Horton Smith wired Jacobus today that eight of the first ten medalists of the year were competing on the west coast and he feels a representative team can be obtained. The United States won the trophy in 1934 when the matches were played in Australia.

TILDEN TROUPE, WITH NEW CAST, VISITS CHICAGO

Three Stars Are Added for Matches Wednesday

When Bill O'Brien, rotund manager of the professional tennis stars, brings his troupe to the International Amphitheater, 42d and Halsted streets, next Wednesday Chicago tennis fans expect to see the finest array of net talent ever assembled in one group.

Beside the veterans—Bill Tilden, Ellsworth Vines, George Lott, and Lester Stoefen—O'Brien will present three outstanding players who just deserted the amateurs—Berkeley Bell, Mrs. Ethel Burkhart Arnold, and Jane Sharp. Bruce Barnes, the Texan who was a member of the touring stars two years ago, also will be back.

Vines Meets Stoefen.

The outstanding match of the evening should be that between Ellsworth Vines, world pro champion, and Lester Stoefen. Stoefen had Vines at match point in the final of the world championship match last year in Paris, but couldn't get the needed ace and Vines rallied to win. Stoefen, however, says he will make up for the loss on this tour.

Tilden is scheduled to oppose Bell. Big Bill, who says he is playing better now than ever before, must be at his best to beat the New York recruit. Bell during his amateur days won more than 700 trophies, a total larger than Tilden was able to pick up in his career as a simon pure.

Lott Faces Barnes.

George Lott of Chicago will open the program against Barnes. The latter is noted for his colorful antics and O'Brien has promised him a raise in salary if he is able to beat George, so anything may happen.

Mrs. Ethel Burkhart Arnold, the country's second ranking player, will meet her California rival, Jane Sharp. Mrs. Arnold, although only 5 feet 4 inches tall, is noted for her terrific power, as is Miss Sharp.

Mixed doubles will be included in the schedule for the first time and will find Tilden and Miss Sharp opposing Stoefen and Mrs. Arnold. A doubles match between Lott and Stoefen, world champions, and Vines and Bell will conclude the program.

VINES BEATS STOEFEN.

New York, Jan. 11.—[U. P.]—Ellsworth Vines, world's professional singles tennis champion, tonight defeated Lester Stoefen, 6-2, 6-2, before 14,000 at Madison Square Garden.

Vines played with all the assurance and confidence of a champion. His cannonball serve was going in with lightning precision and Stoefen had no defense for the pace and power of his drives.

Table Tennis Tips

[This is the fourth of a series of weekly articles on table tennis by Coleman Clark, former national champion, present western doubles champion, and authority on this sport. Readers are invited to send contributions and to address questions to the conductor of the column in care of The Chicago Tribune.]

BY COLEMAN CLARK.

The chop is the countershot to the topspin drive, to be discussed in next Sunday's TRIBUNE, and is even a deadlier defensive weapon than the "push" shot, described in our last article. Push or half volley shots are made OVER the table; chops, from BEHIND it. Chop is the right name for it. You do just that.

As the ball approaches, you take the arm back, keeping the upper edge of the bat tilted back [figure 1]. Now bring the arm down and across the ball, holding the bat tilted back all the while [figure 2]. There must be a zip and a snap to the stroke to impart sufficient underspin to annoy your opponent.

The Use of the Arm.

The best results are usually obtained if the shot is executed with a fairly firm wrist and with the forearm doing most of the work. As the principal idea is to put underspin on the ball and return it safely, don't follow our advice too literally, but experiment until you find out for yourself the easiest way. Observe in the illustrations how the weight shifts to the front foot at the finish of the shot, also the turn of the body during the making of the stroke.

Backhand chops, of course, are made from the left side. In this case the right shoulder should incline toward the net at the beginning of the shot and the forearm should play even a more important part in making the shot than is the case of the forehand chop.

Those of you who saw Jimmy McClure and Abe Berenbaum in the intercity matches just concluded at the Lake Shore Athletic club saw two of the best choppers in the country. On his forehand Jimmy keeps his elbow close to his body and takes a wicked short cut at the ball that puts a lot of stuff on it. Berenbaum's backhand chop is nasty to handle. His is a jerky stroke, starting from the elbow. Herbert Aronson of Chicago has one of the best half volley shots of them all. His upset of Blattner, Mort Ladin's unexpected victory over Berenbaum, national champion, and Ralph Muchow's defeat of Jimmy Jacobson were bright spots for Chicago. This Northwestern university sophomore and all leading Chicago suburbanites are competing in the suburban tournament Jan. 16, 17, and 18 at the North Shore Table Tennis club, 655 Vernon avenue, Glencoe.

WANT A FIGHT, MR. FISHER? TRY LURE ON SNOOK

Florida Robalo Will Give You a Battle.

BY BOB BECKER.

Known as a tackle buster de luxe the robalo or snook, a salt water game fish in southern waters, is one fish that a northern angler figuring on a southern trip this winter should not overlook. Although there are many interesting and spectacular salt water game fish in the Gulf of Mexico, along the coasts of Florida and especially down through the keys, varying in size from the tarpon to the small, speedy bonefish the average fresh water fisherman accustomed to a five foot bait casting rod will find that the robalo snook will give him just about as exciting a fight as anything that can be fooled into striking a plug lure.

Another good point about the snook is that you don't have to go to sea and toss around in a small boat to get acquainted with him. He likes inlets and the mouths of creeks and rivers. Some of the favorite haunts of the high jumper are around jetties, bridges, and old pilings.

He Puts on Real Show.

We have had excellent fishing for this rambunctious member of the salt water group of game fishes at many places on the west coast of Florida. We have taken them while trolling, but the most fun we have had with this fish was when we bait casted for them in small rivers. With not many places to go except up [or possibly into a snag] the snook put on a real show, often leaving the party very suddenly while we wondered why our tackle broke down.

The robalo will remind you of a muskie or northern pike in conformation. It's a long bodied fish, greenish silver on the back, shading to silver on the sides. A dark, sometimes black, stripe or lateral line runs from the gill cover to the center of the tail. In the rivers around Punta Gorda, Fla., where we have used a bait casting rod to get these fish we have found them lying under cut banks and around old palm trees and other débris in the water.

Hits with Little Hesitation.

The snook will hit a bait or lure trolled behind a boat with little hesitation. We recommend either a spoon, cut bait or a plug for this sport. Fishing out from Everglades, Fla., we have caught many of them on flashing spoon lures.

When you are bait casting we suggest the use of a plug that will float when not in motion and dive when retrieved. The official world's record The largest we were lucky enough to land weighed 19¾ pounds and it fought like a 30 pound muskie.

CHANCE OF A LIFETIME TO GET A BETTER CAR!

Suburban Building Permits for 1935 Set Four Year Record

MIDCITY 5 CENT FARE URGED TO HOLD RESIDENTS

A proposal for a five cent street car fare for central Chicago as a means of combating a steady population decrease in the area, was submitted yesterday to Ald. B. A. Cronson [4th], chairman of the traction subcommittee, by Ald. John A. Massen [48th], chairman of the committee on railway terminals.

Ald. Massen also proposed that rights of way of steam railroads be developed for fast transportation to the suburbs, using 2,800 miles of such tracks in the metropolitan area for the expanded Rapid Transit service. This idea first was advanced by Mayor Kelly when he outlined a proposed Chicago traction program last summer.

The Nickel Fare Area.

The five cent fare proposal would affect an area bounded by 63d street, Kedzie avenue, Belmont avenue, and Lake Michigan. This district, Ald. Massen said, embraces 59 square miles in the heart of Chicago.

During a 15 year period ending in 1930, the population of the area decreased by 110,324. This, however, is not the complete picture, according to Ald. Massen, because population has increased in outer portions of the area, while there has been a decrease of 274,509 in the central 33 square miles of the district.

"Blighted neighborhoods compose approximately one-third of the district, and these areas are spreading," Ald Massen said. "It is doubtful that much can be done to restore them. Perhaps the creation of a five cent fare zone, more or less co-extensive with the district, might attract permanent residents.

Admits Drastic Expedient.

"This would involve a radical departure from the 'one city, one fare' program, but the expedient would, nevertheless, be worth trying. It is clear that, unless these blighted areas are eliminated in some way or other, the district will be one with stagnant trafic demand.

"More or less contemporaneous with the shift in this great central district, there has been a persistent movement of population from the central parts of Chicago to the fringe of the city and to the suburbs," Ald. Massen continued.

"This is probably the most significant, from a local transportation standpoint, of all the shifts of population which are occurring in the Chicago region. The movement is likely to accelerate in future years.

"We could meet this demand by extending the Rapid Transit lines, but this would require a capital outlay which would increase fares.

"The obvious alternative would be to utilize the rights of way of electric interurban and steam railroads in Chicago and Chicago regions. The mileage of such right of way is 2,800 miles—approximately 1,500 miles in the city, and 1,500 in the suburban area.

"Many of the railroad trains which occupy them are elevated. Comparison of the train movements with street car movements indicates that a great deal of track capacity remains unused. Here, plainly, are latent Rapid Transit assets with tremendous possibilities.

"The use of these railroad rights of way for local transportation purposes would remove a considerable trafic burden from the street car lines and would, consequently, increase the efficiency of street car operation.

Enhance Safety of Streets.

"It would, likewise, make for safety on the streets, and this is by no means a negligible consideration.

"Expansion of facilities by this means involves nothing revolutionary. Extensive consolidations of steam railroad services are in prospect and much along this line has been accomplished. Long term leases of steam railroad track and terminal facilities are a common thing. Through routing and interchange of passengers has long been a widespread practice of common carriers. Lightweight high speed railroad trains capable of rapid acceleration and deceleration are now available.

"In point of fact, something of the very thing here suggested already exists in actual operation in the exchange of passengers between the suburban services of the Chicago and North Western Railway company and the downtown services provided by the Chicago Motor Coach company.

"The coördination of the street car, motor coach, and elevated electric railway services in Chicago in a single operating unit has been under discussion in Chicago many years. The inclusion of the electric interurban and steam railroad suburban services indicated in the unification would provide a transportation system adequate for the ever-expanding local transportation needs not only of Chicago, but of the entire Chicago region. Fortunately, only initiative and coöperation are required for its accomplishment."

DEADLINE PASSES WITHOUT APPEAL BY ROY WATHIER

Roy A. Wathier, former manager of the property of Mrs. Elizabeth Palmer Smith, 82 years old, a widow who is a niece of Potter Palmer, let the appeal deadline pass yesterday without appealing the ruling of Clarence P. Wagner, assistant to the Probate judge, that Wathier pay to the conservators of Mrs. Smith's estate $12,425 for which he failed to account as manager.

On Jan. 8 Herbert Fried, attorney for the conservator, the Trust Company of Chicago, filed a motion for Wathier's arrest. Yesterday Fried said he would urge action on his motion. Wathier has until Jan. 22 to show cause why he should not make the payment.

BUS-ELEVATED TRANSFER PLAN STARTS IN WEEK

The Illinois Commerce Commission announced yesterday that transfers between the Chicago Motor Coach company and the elevated railroad will go into effect after midnight next Sunday morning.

Transfer privileges will be available only to elevated riders within the city limits. There will be no charge other than the usual 10 cent elevated or bus fare. Twenty-seven elevated stations near the main bus routes have been designated as transfer stations where time-stamping machines will be installed.

Transfers will be issued only for passage in one direction, although the use of two or more buses or elevated trains is permissible. Bus riders will be given an orange transfer slip, and elevated passengers a green one.

VOLUME RISES TO $14,732,918; TWICE '34 TOTAL

Waukegan Leads District for December.

BY AL CHASE.
[Real Estate Editor.]

Chicago suburban building for 1935, with a total value of $14,732,918 in permits, broke all records since 1931. It was more than twice as great as 1934, more than three times larger than 1933's total, and close to three times that of 1932. Not only did the yearly total climb to cheering heights but the December permits wound up 1935 by surpassing the same month of the preceding year by 250 per cent and the month of November by 22 per cent.

FREDERICK DOYLE.

According to Frederick Doyle, who for several years has compiled the monthly survey of suburban building for the Straus Securities corporation, from which these figures are obtained, if a like increase in construction activity is maintained this year the 1936 volume should exceed the 1931 total of $23,767,000.

Three Year Summary.

	1935.	1934.	1933.
January	293,698	$ 450,848	$ 237,799
February	306,940	240,729	305,421
March	1,067,550	527,228	198,324
April	1,096,079	530,356	330,951
May	1,796,559	491,968	416,511
June	1,026,091	620,568	436,500
July	1,916,458	435,510	352,575
August	1,558,357	355,107	294,972
September	1,557,677	1,436,609	456,383
October	1,695,002	538,874	583,600
November	1,089,369	801,453	201,958
December	1,329,138	380,243	324,010
Totals	$14,732,918	$6,809,493	$4,139,004

As noted before in this monthly survey, the great improvement in suburban building started last March, the first of the million dollar months. With one exception—September, 1934—the 53 Chicago suburbs listed had seen no month with building exceeding $1,000,000 in permits since December, 1931. The lowest month recorded was March, 1933, with only $198,000.

The great change that has taken place is shown in the fact that last month one community alone, Waukegan, had a total which exceeded that of the entire region in many months between 1931 and March of last year. The total of $264,230 for Waukegan represented almost entirely alterations, additions, and repairs, according to Charles Lenke, building commissioner.

As shown in the foregoing table, Evanston is second with $140,250. Building Commissioner E. M. Goodman reported that this total includes one residence, repairs, and about $100,000 of permits issued the municipality itself for minor construction.

In Lake Forest William O. Paape, building commissioner, reported $117,678, which includes a permit for a $59,000 residence for Arthur Dixon designed by Anderson & Ticknor and a $19,000 swimming pool.

Other communities have impressive totals, such as Highland Park with $93,518. S. D. Morris, building inspector, stated that this includes seven residences costing $71,000. Norman S. Schmidt, building commissioner of Winnetka, said that the December total was largest since 1928. The $87,250 comprises five new residences, one commercial building, and alterations.

Hedrich Blessing Rents New Quarters for Studio

The Hedrich Blessing studios, now in the Michigan Square building, have leased space in the 737 North Michigan avenue building for five years beginning Feb. 1. Approximately $10,000 will be spent in remodeling space on the third floor, according to Kenneth Hedrich, president of the concern. Howard L. Storch of Ross & Browne was the broker.

AIR CONDITIONED COLONIAL HOME FOR WINNETKA

H. Mitchell Harper has just completed and moved into the above American farm house colonial style, air conditioned residence at 1010 Hill road, Winnetka, built from plans by Architect Ralph D. Huszagh, of 6 North Michigan avenue. Various materials were used in the exterior walls—stone, brick, clapboard and shingles. It has nine rooms. Harper is the owner of the H. M. Harper company, 2620 Fletcher street, manufacturer of nuts and bolts.

COMPARE SUBURB BUILDING TOTALS FOR THREE YEARS

WORK IS STARTED TO MODERNIZE WINDSOR MOVIE

Modernization of one of Chicago's oldest playhouses, the Windsor, at 1225 North Clark street, from plans by Pereira & Pereira was started last week. A remodeling plan, pictured in this department in August, 1934, has been abandoned for the present much more ambitious program. The original plan called for a Chinese architectural motif. The present design will be modern.

Gay colors and new materials will be features of the exterior. Blue will be the prevailing hue. The interior will be entirely rebuilt, with new seats and a new lounge and rest rooms in space acquired for that purpose. The present boxes will be removed. An enlarged air conditioning system will be installed.

The contract, awarded to Rosenthal, Cornell & Co., calls for an expenditure of $70,000 by the owner, the Windsor Amusement company, of which Harry Balaban is president, according to the architects.

OAK PARK REAL ESTATE BOARD PLANS BANQUET

Don W. Riley, of Riley & Kerr, Inc., Oak Park realtors, will be installed as president of the Oak Park Real Estate board at that organization's annual banquet on Monday evening, Jan. 20, at the Oak Park Arms hotel. Other recently elected officers to be installed will be Walter R. James, vice president; E. F. Wicken, associate vice president, and H. E. Hopkins, treasurer.

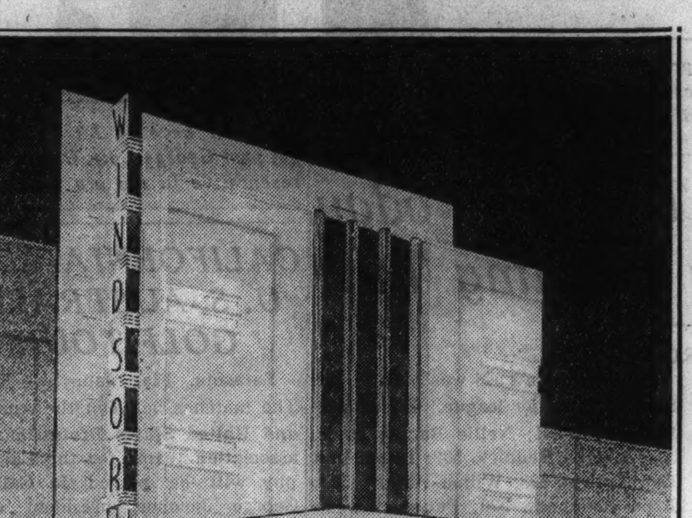
Whitney W. Bowers will continue as secretary and Joseph W. Farr and James A. Howe as vice presidents. The 1936 directorate will include Mrs. W. H. Wright, Walter James, former president; H. E. Hopkins, A. J. Radcliffe, George L. Bruckert, Joseph B. Ford, and Robert E. Nicholas.

Music and entertainment, with speeches barred, will be features of the annual banquet.

BUSINESS BLOCK TO BE BUILT AT 79TH AND EVANS

Work is announced to start on Feb. 15 on a one story terra cotta business block at the southwest corner of 79th street and Evans avenue. Fronting 147 feet on 79th and 125 on Evans, it will contain ten stories. R. Berhard Kurzon is architect for the syndicate owners. Peter G. Maniates of 11 South La Salle, is renting agent.

MODERNIZING AN OLD TIMER



Work has started by Rosenthal, Cornell & Co. remodeling the old Windsor theater at 1225 North Clark street from plans by Pereira & Pereira, Chicago architects, for the Windsor Amusement company, of which Harry Balaban is president. The 1,200 seat cinema will be completely modernized, with new seats, an enlarged air conditioning plant and a free use of color in both the exterior and interior. Completion is set for March 1. The reported cost is $70,000. Two years ago a remodeling plan was announced, but a more comprehensive program takes its place.

$850,000,000 of Property Appraised by Realty Board

During the last fifty years the Chicago Real Estate board has made 70,753 appraisals of property valued at approximately $850,000,000, according to John J. Fischer, who has just been appointed general chairman of the realty organization's appraisal committee. The figures compiled by Fischer show that during 1935 the board handled 11,422 appraisals having a total valuation of $53,056,839. Prior to 1935 the board had made a total of 59,331 appraisals having a total valuation of $791,280,600.

JOHN J. FISCHER.

"Every section of metropolitan Chicago is represented in the appraisals made by the Chicago Real Estate board, including industrial, residential, commercial, and acreage properties," said Fischer.

Called an Authority.

"The efficiency of the appraisal committee has made the board the outstanding authority on Chicago realty values. Its appraisals have been used for reorganization, gift tax, inheritance tax, and income tax purposes; for the closing of estates, in the purchase, sale, and leasing of property, and in its financing.

"The federal, state, county, and municipal governments, as well as many banks, trust companies, insurance companies, mortgage loan houses, estates, and individuals, are frequent applicants for appraisals.

Inspected by Five.

"The public has confidence in the appraisals made by the appraisal committee of the board, knowing that such appraisals are authoritative and made by disinterested real estate experts."

Every piece of property appraised by the board is personally inspected by five members of the appraisal committee for that district, said Fischer. Two active members are selected by the chairman because of special knowledge of the locality, and preferably having offices in the district. A certificate is then issued, signed by five members of the committee and certified by the president and secretary of the board as its official appraisal, together with a photograph and plat of the property.

New Restaurant Chain Leases Loop Quarters

The Family Kitchen, Inc., a new restaurant concern, yesterday leased space in the Randolph-Wells building for the first of a chain of eating places, according to Harold C. Costello and George M. Bracken of the Iroquois Management company, agents of the property.

Chicagoan to Teach PWA Men to Manage Buildings

James C. Downs Jr., vice president of Dayton Keith & Co., has been made an instructor in property management in the school conducted in Washington, D. C., by the National Association of Housing Officials for prospective managers of PWA housing developments.

Chain Stores Lease Space in Woodlawn

Two sizeable leases were reported yesterday to have been closed in the Sixty-third and Maryland building. Maling Brothers, Inc., have rented the double store, 29x100, at 843-45 East 63d street for a term of years for their 12th Chicago popular priced shoe store. The Robin Redbreast Hosiery Company, Inc., has leased the triple store at Nos. 849-53, embracing 44x100 feet, where the largest of that concern's outlying women's apparel stores will be opened.

The two combined leases call for a reported minimum guaranteed rental of $108,000 plus a percentage of gross receipts.

Air conditioning for both units is contemplated, with an extensive remodeling program, said to involve $40,000 in alterations and fixtures, already under way. M. Louis Korman is architect for Maling Brothers. Albert Chapman represented both lessor and lessee in the Maling lease, as well as the lessor in the Robin Redbreast transaction. The lessee in the latter deal was represented by S. E. Terman & Co. Herman Maling was attorney in both deals.

One of the city's largest outlying developments, the Sixty-third and Maryland building is operated under trusteeship by Richard V. Schwartz. Other tenants in the building include O'Connor and Goldberg, Andes' Candies, Balaban & Katz's Maryland theater, the Illinois Bell Telephone company, and more than sixty commercial and professional office tenants.

Contracts awarded in Chicago the week of Jan. 3 to 9, according to figures supplied by the F. W. Dodge corporation, totaled 12, with a combined cost of $604,000. For the corresponding week of last year there were 17 contracts totaling $119,300.

PAY $102,853 IN DIVIDENDS TO BONDHOLDERS

Six Properties Placed on Paying Basis.

Dividends amounting to $102,853 were paid during last year to former bondholders on six properties operated by the central management bureau for the committee acting on American Bond and Mortgage company issues, it was announced yesterday by Dayton Keith, chairman of the committee and manager of the bureau.

These dividends, ranging from 50 cents to $4.50 on each of the old $100 bonds, average $1.73 paid during the calendar year to date. They include $3 on the Knickerbocker theater; $1 on the Engineering building; $2.53 on the Bryn Mawr; $2.50 on the Patricia Manor, Evanston; $2 on Sunny Court apartments; 50 cents on the Lorraine business block, and $4.50 on the Versailles apartments, St. Louis.

Cites Sunny Court.

Keith cited the Sunny Court apartments as an example of how property with inherently good qualities can be made profitable when it is relieved from the handicaps naturally placed on it by even excellent receivership operation. This three story, 43 flat building at 7822 South Laflin street, was taken over by the central bureau in May, 1933.

"It was then producing $875 in monthly rentals and was but 68.7 per cent rented at a monthly rent per room of $9.50," said Keith. "Increases of 45 per cent in occupancy and 8.6 per cent in rental rates have been effected, so that now the total rentals have been increased 58 per cent to $1,386. All apartments are now occupied and the monthly rent per room is now $10.32.

Vacancies and Delinquencies.

"When the central bureau took possession it found 14 of the 43 apartments vacant and nine of the 29 tenants delinquent in their rent. Furthermore, the building was in such condition that it did not readily attract new tenants.

"The increased revenue has been sufficient to permit the property to be put in first class physical condition, pay $2,860 in dividends to the holders of the new stock trust certificates, and reduce the property's indebtedness by $4,175, in addition to paying current taxes as they come due."

Keith stated that a new mortgage loan on the property was refinanced thus releasing a considerable portion of the prospective earnings for payment to the certificate holders as dividends.

Lamp Firm Leases Space in Decorative Arts Bldg.

Real Estate Bonds

During the last week there has been an active market in real estate bonds, with both buyers and sellers showing a much livelier interest in the local bond situation. According to a Chicago bond house which supplied the following quotations, prices continue firm with little noticeable change:

War.

What has become of the war in Africa?

The Italian armies in Ethiopia have been stuck fast since the middle of October. Last summer, when Mussolini said his troops were going to invade Ethiopia, military experts wagged their heads. Has Mussolini stubbed his military toe on an Ethiopian mountain?

Ethiopian troops probably are the least of the obstacles to an Italian advance. In more than three months of warfare there has never been a great battle between an Italian and Ethiopian army. Back breaking mountains, stifling heat, oceans of mud, intermittent rain, the agony of disease, the insanity of thirst—these are the things that have stopped Italian troops. Back of all these is the slow strangulation applied by the nations of Europe. Perhaps the Italian troops could have gone ahead if let alone by Europe, perhaps not.

When the Italian soldiers landed in Massaua last summer they entered an area of terrific heat [temperatures as high as 123 degrees] and met with a shortage of water. As rapidly as possible they were sent to the highland city of Asmara, the base for the northern invasion. [See map on next page for place locations and discussion of Ethiopian climate.]

On Oct. 3 the Italian advance into Ethiopia began. Meeting no resistance from Ethiopian troops, the Italians quickly "captured" Adowa and Aksum. Within two weeks they moved on into Makale. Then the advance stopped. It has remained paralyzed ever since.

The troops had scrambled through mountainous country. Sheer cliffs and deep gorges held up the heavy war machines. Supply trucks could not follow until roads were built in an area where roads had never been known. Even when the roads were finished they were dangerous, tortuous trails. Reports indicate that as many truck drivers as troops have been killed.

A modern army is helpless without its big machinery and its tons of food, clothing, and other supplies. Lines of communication with Asmara had to be built and maintained. Rains in the last month have ruined the roads built at a high cost in men and money.

Ahead of the Italians in the north wait hundreds of thousands of Ethiopian troops. Emperor Haile Selassie repeated last week his orders that they are not to make a mass advance. He tells his troops to let the Italians wear themselves out. The only avenues for Italian advance are through narrow, difficult passes that can be held against infantry by a few men.

A second column of Italian troops tried to advance in the Mount Musa Ali region west of Assab, Eritrea. The terrific heat of the Danakil desert and the disease in the Danakil swamps defeated them. The column has not repeated its October effort.

The Italian armies in the south have been harassed by heat and drouth, mud and rain. The troops moved northward from the coastal city of Mogadishu. They advanced rapidly across the flat coastal lowland. When they entered the Ogaden they were gasping for water in heat ranging up to 150 degrees. Tanks were effective, but horrible to use in the heat.

The tail-end of the heavy rains turned the Ogaden into a sea of mud. Then the heat returned. It has been hot ever since. It will remain that way until the rains come again. Then it will be a sea of mud again until next October.

The main bodies of Ethiopians stayed in the highlands and allowed the Italians to struggle by themselves in the heat. Small bands of irregular Ethiopians have harassed the lines of communication—200 miles long—that Gen. Rudolfo Graziani has been forced to guard. Graziani has told Mussolini that he cannot advance without more troops to guard his communication lines.

Reports from Dessye, Ethiopia, yesterday said Ethiopians had ambushed and killed 800 Italians, capturing 10 tanks, in the battle of Endoshek, near the Takkaze river, on Dec. 14. The story was told by four ragged, terrified Italian prisoners. During the week the Ethiopians were reported massing on the southern front to hold the enemy in its uncomfortable position until the rains start next month.

The Ring.

The military ring around Italy is tightening as the next meeting of the league of nations council approaches. The council will meet Jan. 20 to consider an oil embargo against Italy.

France agreed to share the patroling of the Mediterranean sea with Great Britain. It was announced that French ships would give the British sailors a vacation. Three British liners were taken off their regular runs and converted into troop ships. They will be used to strengthen the British garrison in Egypt.

France was reported to be faced with a serious situation in its North African colonies. The colonists were said to be angry because the French government has been championing Mussolini's attempted oppression of the Ethiopians.

Reports from Paris indicated that British gold may be holding up the Italian advance in Ethiopia. The report said the Italians had hoped to bribe the native chieftains away from Emperor Haile Selassie, but that British gold had bought them for Selassie at a price the Italians could not afford to match.

Italy.

Replying to President Roosevelt's neutrality stand, put forth in his report on the state of the nation to congress, the Italian newspapers defied the United States. The papers, all of which are government organs, said the invasion of Ethiopia would go on. Italian troops guarded the American embassy in Rome for the first time since the world war.

At the same time reports reaching Paris told of the weakening of Italian morale at home. Penalties imposed by the league of nations are said to be pinching Italian industries, forcing many of them to close. The intense patriotic enthusiasm of the last few months is giving way to a feeling of gloom, the reports said.

Germany.

Washington

President.

In a Chicago theater last week a movie news reel showed President Roosevelt as he addressed congress recently. The audience gave him scattered applause. A few seconds later members of the Supreme court were shown. The house went wild with applause.

The court had made the President's week unpleasant by wrecking his AAA. He and Secretary of Agriculture Wallace and other advisers were thrown into confusion. All week, including yesterday, they talked over new plans to help the farmer. On Thursday the President, following an old custom, entertained the Supreme court justices at the White House. This probably wasn't easy, coming so soon after their decision. [See AAA.]

On top of this the President had to sit by while the house passed the soldiers' cash bonus, 356 to 59. Last May 22 he vetoed an allegedly inflationary bonus bill. At the time he said the bonus really wouldn't help needy veterans, and wouldn't help recovery in capital industries. Besides, he said, the veterans because they were veterans shouldn't be given different treatment from other minority groups. His attitude this year—the election year—is not known. [See Bonus; also Politics.]

AAA.

The Supreme court on Monday killed the New Deal's Agricultural Adjustment act and program as unconstitutional. This was as severe a blow to the New Deal as the court's scuttling of the NRA in May, 1935, which brought threats to check the court's power. Justice Owen J. Roberts read the AAA opinion. Siding with him were Chief Justice Hughes and Justices Van Devanter, Sutherland, Butler, and McReynolds. Justices Stone, Brandeis, and Cardozo dissented. The majority held that control of agricultural production was a state or local matter; that Washington's attempt at supervision under the AAA was illegal. The minority held broadly that if it's all right for the government to give money to agriculture it's also all right to control agriculture. [See Business Review.]

The AAA immediately stopped benefit payments to farmers, but President Roosevelt said next day he would recommend an appropriation to pay them on their 1935 contracts. The amount is estimated at 250 million dollars. The President said he didn't know whether new taxes would be needed, although in his budget message he admittedly figured on getting 547 millions in AAA processing taxes. He didn't know whether nearly one billion dollars in those taxes already collected would be refunded. In Chicago alone nearly 55 millions are tied up by injunctions. It is predicted that suits for 200 millions in refunds will be filed.

Reaction to the court decision varied. Republicans cheered, Democrats groaned. London newspapers expressed astonishment. Canada wondered about its own agricultural reform plan, somewhat similar to AAA. Some 6,500 AAA employés in Washington shuddered. The 100 or so AAA employés in Chicago pretended they hadn't heard about the decision.

The substitute for AAA decided upon by the administration will be called "coöp production contest." New Deal lawyers will attempt to write a law which will provide benefits to farmers and stand an assault in the courts. [See main news section.]

Bonus.

House members tumbled over themselves Friday to vote, 356 to 59, for the cash bonus bill. It now goes to the senate, where it will be examined tomorrow. The senate has its own bonus bill. [See Business Review.]

The measure passed by the house bears the approval of three major groups of war veterans. It calls for immediate payment and cancelation of existing interest charges on those certificates on which loans have already been made. As a reward it offers 3 per cent compound interest to certificate holders who wait until 1945 for their cash.

Treasury experts estimate the bonus will cost the nation 2 billion 300 million dollars. Curiously, the bill provides no method of paying the money. Representative Allen T. Treadway of Massachusetts suggested it come out of the unexpended portions of the 5 billion dollar works fund. In this way no new debt would be created, he said. Democratic leaders rejected his idea.

Congressional observers predict that the senate will approve the bill, with certain modifications, and that both house and senate will override a presidential veto, if one is given. [See President.]

During the bonus hearings, Gen. Frank T. Hines, veterans' administrator, reported that the United States has paid out $12,185,682,752.97 in pensions and compensations since 1790. He said pensions or compensations are now being paid to 857,429 veterans and their dependents of six wars going as far back as the war of 1812. In the year ended last June 30, the veterans' bureau paid out $618,522,341, he said.

Morgan.

Senator Gerald P. Nye's senate munitions committee last week dug into wartime financing by the house of Morgan. It had clews from 2,000,000 documents taken from the Morgan files. Chief witnesses were J. Pierpont Morgan and his partners, George Whitney, Thomas W. Lamont, Russell Leffingwell, and S. Parker Gilbert.

Mr. Morgan proved to be a genial witness for the most part. However, he showed a little peeve on Friday in denying his firm or financiers generally had drawn America into the world war. That was due to Germany's insults on the seas he had asserted earlier. Personally, he admitted his sympathies lay with the allies; that his firm acted as money agents in America for England and France; that in 1914 it ordered about 3 billion dollars' worth of materials for them—and netted about 30 millions in commissions.

Nye's committee tried to show that the Morgan house had manipulated exchange in such a way as to force the Wilson administration to break away from its neutrality stand.

This stand, set by Secretary of State Bryan, embarrassed financiers. Bryan had warned that to lend money to belligerents would be to violate neutrality. At the time, however, the belligerents—mainly the allies—were buying materials in America and needed credits or loans. The Morgan company desired to arrange them.

In 1915 the Morgans advised Secretary of the Treasury William McAdoo the exchange situation was bad; that new credit arrangements must be made. At the same time they were hoping to float a big allied loan. James B. Forgan, Chicago banker, asked Washington's attitude on such a loan. McAdoo approved it in the interests of American business. Bryan's successor, Robert Lansing, approved it. Wilson said he would not stop such a loan. That was on Aug. 26, 1915. The following October a syndicate headed by Morgan offered a half billion dollar Anglo-French bond issue.

Budget.

Congress on Monday received President Roosevelt's proposed budget calling for $6,752,606,370 as minimum expenditures for the fiscal year beginning on July 1, 1936, and ending on June 30, 1937. Of this, $5,649,981,738 will go for regular governmental activities. The remainder, $1,102,824,632, will go for recovery and relief. Since expected receipts were put at $5,654,217,650, the deficit was estimated at $1,098,388,720. In a few weeks the President will increase this deficit by asking more millions—perhaps half a billion—for work relief. The budget showed net increases of $782,448,587 for regular activities, among them 193 millions for national defense. It made no provision for a possible bonus—a matter of 2 billions. [See Bonus.] But it included expected receipts and expenditures of the AAA, which was wrecked by the Supreme court at the very moment the budget message was being read. [See AAA.] The budget boosted the public debt to $31,351,000,000, a new high.

Capital Notes.

John McGroarty, Democratic representative from California, shouted "Thief!" in the house Wednesday. "There's a robber in the house—or maybe in the senate," he cried. "He stole my coat." It was a $100 coat, a Christmas gift from his wife.

Even with the use of an airplane over part of his trip, Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes arrived 3½ hours late at a dinner in his honor in San Juan, Porto Rico, Tuesday. The dinner was scheduled for 7:30, but was held at 11. Ickes is making a hurried inspection of Porto Rico and the neighboring Virgin Islands.

Judge Walter J. Casey, Washington, D. C., found Representative Marion A. Zioncheck of Seattle, Wash., guilty of drunkenness Tuesday. He temporarily deferred imposing a penalty. Police arrested Zioncheck in an apartment building where it was alleged he was causing a disturbance. He denied he was drunk.

The salaries of many of the nation's leading executives were no longer secret last week. They were made public by the house in a report given to congress by the treasury department. The report was required by the revenue act of 1934. It listed more than 18,000 officers and employés of some 8,000 corporations who received more than $15,000 during 1934. Many senators and representatives protested. Senator Royal Copeland of New York said he would try to have the publicity provision of the 1934 revenue act repealed.

In her annual report, issued on Monday, Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins called the social security act

The City

The Massacre.

The Chicago Motor club and highway officials debated last week whether pavements left covered with ice and snow were a hazard or benefit to safe driving. A survey, however, showed that accidents reach their peak in the winter, though deaths may decline because of slower speeds. A motorist runs almost twice the chance of an accident in December that he does in September. Skidding is chiefly responsible for more accidents. The aim of the conference was to find a way of reducing the hazard of snow and ice. Outside of the loop, the boulevards, and the street car tracks there is little effort to clear Chicago streets.

Markets.

Manufacturers' style shows of shoes at the Palmer house, of furniture at the Furniture Mart and the Merchandise Mart, and of household furnishings at the Stevens hotel opened last week in Chicago. All reported upturns during 1935 and predicted bigger sales for 1936. But all deplored rising taxes which, they said, were reflected in higher prices.

Officials attending the two furniture shows, which attracted over 15,000 buyers, reported an average increase of 75 per cent in sales last year. Modern furniture, designed for simplicity and efficiency, dominated the shows. There was a distinct reversion from the reproduction of antiques.

The most spectacular sight at any of the shows was Robert Wadlow of Alton, Ill. He is 17 years old, 8 feet 4 inches tall, weighs 400 pounds, and wears a size 39 shoe. He attended the shoe fair.

Budgets.

The school board last week adopted a 1936 budget of $70,852,633. The city council approved it. The budget is the lowest in five years, 30 millions below the all time high of 1931. But Douglas Sutherland, secretary of the Civic Federation and Bureau of Public Efficiency, complained that the $68,377,269 tax appropriation for the budget is $14,500,000 over 1934 and only 9 million below 1931. Both Sutherland and Lester Porter, a Chicago Real Estate board committee chairman, charged that the tax levy is illegal. They joined John O. Rees, director of the committee on public expenditures, in asserting that the board is asking 30 per cent more than is needed to offset loss and cost in tax collection. Civic and teachers' organizations demanded the budget be raised to provide ten months of school and restore part of the teachers' pay cut. The board heeded neither side.

Ross A. Woodhull, president of the sanitary board, announced a tentative 1936 budget of $71,225,637 for the sanitary district. This is a reduction of $22,610,756. Refunding of the district's bonds during 1935 will lower bond taxes from $19,527,000 for 1935 to $16,199,148, said Woodhull. A reduction of a million in operating expenses is expected, despite the $500,000 added cost of operating the new Calumet sewage plant.

Widow's Mite.

Nathaniel Herbert Wheeler went to jail for a year and a day and Edmund Paul Jersig hanged himself in jail. These two events last week removed two hazards for gullible Chicago widows with a weakness for romantic confidence men. Jersig, 54 years old, was the bigger man [340 pounds]. Wheeler, 51, was the bigger business man. For big talk they were about equal.

Wheeler, after finishing a sentence for mail fraud in 1934, plunged back into the nation-wide business which had made him a million dollars. This was to correspond with the women listed in the "cupid" and "lonely heart" matrimonial clubs and, through his romantic persuasions, induce them to invest money in gold and oil stocks. He sent them certificates for stock worth 18 cents on the dollar and pocketed the difference. Two Chicago widows, Mrs. Catherine C. Bauer, $1,500, and Mrs. Rena Felger, $1,250, liked his proposition. They also appeared against him in court after police found Wheeler sitting in dignified splendor in his hotel suite amid a roomful of photographs of himself and of "my" mansions and a suitcase full of love letters and financial promotions. Wheeler said: "I am tired of it all," and pleaded guilty to obtaining money under false pretenses.

Jersig, on the other hand, was in jail at Sycamore, Ill., for cashing a bad $15 check. Mrs. Eleanor Lauderdale Farnum Burke Jersig, former Follies dancer and daughter of a Chicago banker, recently divorced him. They were married last October at Springfield when Jersig promised a $100,000 wedding present. The Texan had delusions of grandeur and talked of million dollar deals and his $19,000,000 ranch kingdom in the southwest. Mrs. Jersig left him the day after the wedding. Her widow's mite was $3, which he paid in instalments. Police found that he was an ex-convict. Jersig left a variety of suicide notes and hanged himself with his rawhide belt.

City Notes.

Shipping concerns and allied organizations last week vigorously protested the sanitary district's new proposal to build flood control works at the mouth of the Chicago river. Some sort of control will be necessary when the diversion of lake water is reduced to a minimum set for 1938 by the Supreme court. Flood waters will cause the current to reverse and pollute the lake. The shippers proposed instead that two-gate locks be built. They said single flood control gates would obstruct trafic. Meanwhile, Secretary Harold F. Ickes announced from Washington that the Chicago sewage program is progressing rapidly enough to meet the 1938 deadline.

A survey showed that cities along Lake Michigan from Michigan City, Ind., to Kenosha, Wis., are preparing to follow Chicago in adoption of permanent eastern standard time. Legislation is planned in Indiana and Wisconsin. Barnet Hodes, city corporation counsel, last week petitioned the interstate commerce commission to extend the eastern time zone west to Chicago to give railroads and markets one time basis between here and New York.

Dr. Herman N. Bundesen, board of health president, reporting for 1935, said Chicago was one of the world's healthiest cities. The birth rate increased from 13.7 to 14.2 per 1,000 population, and the infant death rate declined from 47.7 per 1,000 live births to 39.9 in 1935. The general death rate dropped from 10.4 to 10 per 1,000. The day before Mayor Kelly received the report Dr. Bundesen slipped on a sidewalk and fractured his arm in two places.

Superior Judge Donald S. McKinlay ruled that a judge cannot be sued for remarks from the bench. Then he sustained a demurrer to the $100,000 slander suit brought by Attorney Joseph P. Savage against Circuit Judge Stanley H. Klarkowski. The alleged slander of character took place last fall while Savage was attempting to have his law firm accounting suit transferred to another court. The month long hearing of the suit is still going on. Savage and his former partner, Robert E. Crowe, have enlivened the proceedings with verbal attacks on one another. Judge McKinlay left Savage a loophole to show slander by asking him to amend his complaint to specify whether court was in session. Savage contends it was not.

Politics

Andrew Jackson, seventh President of the United States, probably never spent $5 on a meal in his life, but he did whip the British at New Orleans. That was on Jan. 8, 1815. The date has become somewhat of an anniversary, especially among Democrats. Jackson was a Democrat.

The 121st anniversary of Jackson's triumph fell on Wednesday. To pay homage to his memory and also to pay funds into the Democratic treasury thousands of Democrats gathered at 2,500 dinner tables in more than 1,000 cities and towns. Speakers mutually praised Jackson and his present successor, President Franklin D. Roosevelt.

The admitted main purpose of the dinners was to fatten the party treasury for the 1936 campaign. Leaders hoped to net around $400,000. The principal dinner was held in Washington, attended by 2,000 persons. It was $50 a plate—$5 for the dinner and $45 for the party war chest. President Roosevelt spoke. Plates at another Washington dinner—that of the Young Democrats—at which Mrs. Roosevelt spoke, were $10—$2.50 for the dinner and the rest for the party. Prices varied elsewhere. In Chicago 875 Democrats paid $25 per plate. At Walla Walla, Wash., Democrats paid only 75 cents—and got a good meal.

In his speech the President praised Jackson and the New Deal. He remarked it was too early to comment about the Supreme court's AAA decision, which he called momentous, but said he would try to help the farmer. [See AAA.]

On Thursday the Democratic national committee, meeting in Washington, selected Philadelphia as the Democratic convention city. The convention will open on June 23, two weeks after the Republican convention in Cleveland. Philadelphia won the convention over Chicago and San Francisco for two reasons: First, the President preferred it; second, Philadelphia bid $200,000, against the other cities' $150,000 each. James A. Farley, postmaster general, presided as national party chairman. He predicted a bitter—and dirty—campaign.

Echoes of President Roosevelt's radio speech to congress on Jan. 3 were heard during the week. Both former President Herbert Hoover and the American Liberty league assailed it. [See President, Washington.]

"Mr. Roosevelt's message on the state of the Union might have been entitled 'War on Earth and Ill Will Among Men,'" declared Hoover in a typewritten statement given out at Ogden, Utah, while en route to New York. "It was . . . a good sample of the political method of accusing every one of being terribly wicked and corrupt who objects to the . . . New Deal."

The Liberty league charged that the President was trying to create class hatreds, and described his speech as "the most dangerous that ever came from a President of the United States."

Incidentally, a group of Columbus, O., Republicans offered to give $1,000 to the Democratic party if Postmaster General Farley could get the President to speak once more before congress on the state of the nation. They held his speech helped the G. O. P.

Activity on the part of Republican candidates slowed. Senator William E. Borah chatted with President Roosevelt at a tea Wednesday. They promised each other a vacation cruise if either is elected. Earlier a New York Republican organization formally demanded that Borah "seek the nomination." California Republicans began booming a favorite son, Gov. Frank Merriam, 70 years old. He's willing.

In an address before the National Republican Builders in New York on Wednesday Col. Robert R. McCormick, publisher of THE TRIBUNE, likened President Roosevelt to Louis of Bourbon and George of Hanover. He said that the latter two subscribed to the monarchial theory—that governments should rule and support the people.

Russell Wilson was reëlected mayor of Cincinnati Wednesday, ending a week's deadlock in the city council. Herbert S. Bigelow, a follower of Father Charles E. Coughlin, had tied up things by voting for himself.

Wayland Brooks, young Chicago lawyer and Republican leader, on Friday announced his candidacy for the Republican nomination for governor of Illinois. His announcement followed pleas from downstate Young Republicans and editors. Many Chicago and Cook county Republican groups have also indorsed him. Brooks, though only 38 years old, has a veteran's record, and is known as a vote-getter.

Following a talk in Detroit in which he called for the bonus payment, the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin, radio priest, hurried to Washington. He visited President Roosevelt in the White House on Tuesday. "Just a social call," the priest said. Then he announced his plan to file a suit attacking the legality of the federal reserve act of 1913. He would do this, he said, to take control of the nation's money out of the hands of the big bankers. Earlier he saw Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau.

HAUPTMANN.

Climaxing a week of sensations, the New Jersey Court of Pardons late yesterday denied Bruno Richard Hauptmann's appeal for clemency. Unless Gov. Harold G. Hoffman grants a stay, Hauptmann will be electrocuted at Trenton Friday night for the murder of the Lindbergh baby. [See main news section for latest details.]

Excitement began on Thursday when Gov. Hoffman made public a letter from the mysterious "J. J. Faulkner" declaring Hauptmann innocent. It continued on Friday when Dr. John F. [Jafsie] Condon sailed for South America, and yesterday when Gov. Hoffman said he would ask Condon's arrest, but later backed down.

The Faulkner letter was considered important. Faulkner is the man, never found, who deposited $2,980 of Lindbergh ransom money in a New York bank. He asserts in his letter that Hauptmann's only crime was money madness—that he bought some ransom money to reap a profit.

Condon's sailing revealed he had written a series of magazine articles telling all about the Lindbergh case. Gov. Hoffman examined the original manuscripts. He said they quoted Condon as saying more than one man participated in the crime, and that he knew two of them. On this information he threatened Condon's arrest.

Meanwhile Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh and their son, Jon, were finding quiet near Cardiff, Wales. They were completely ignored during the week by the British press. They were joined yesterday by Mrs. Dwight W. Morrow, Lindy's mother-in-law, who arrived at Southampton Thursday with her daughter, Constance, aboard the liner Bremen.

Flying

Largely because of the heroism of Pilot Joe Crosson and his crew a threatened scarlet fever epidemic in Fairbanks, Alaska, was checked during the week. Twelve persons were stricken and twenty others threatened. There was not enough serum to go around. Health Officer F. B. Gillespie called for help. Crosson responded. With Co-Pilot Murray Stewart and Mechanic J. Ames, he flew to Juneau, got the serum, and returned. It was used immediately. Crosson made the 1,600 mile round trip in 9 hours and 34 minutes, a record, in temperature as low as 45 degrees below zero. At times he had to rise to 18,000 feet over mountains and clouds. Crosson, known as the "mercy pilot" of Alaska, is the man who brought back the bodies of Will Rogers and Wiley Post.

Minor damage was caused to the China Clipper Sunday when its bottom scraped a submerged obstruction in San Francisco bay. It was preparing at the time for its third air mail trip across the Pacific. The accident caused a delay.

G. E. Woods Humphrey, managing director of Imperial Airways, predicted at Hamilton, Bermuda, Sunday that regular airplane passenger and mail service between Hamilton and New York would be established in August. Pan-American Airways will coöperate with the Imperial [British] line.

Three army men crashed in their bombing plane near Mineola, N. Y., Thursday, but weren't hurt. They were Maj. E. J. Carpenter, pilot; Capt. D. T. Crew, prominent polo player, and Staf Sergeant E. A. Sell. The plane developed trouble 2,000 feet up. Maj. Carpenter eased it down as best he could, but it crashed. The plane was wrecked.

Moscow reported Wednesday that twenty-three collective farmers, including several women, were recently rescued from an ice floe by a plane. They had started out to search for a missing plane and were swept out on Lake Baikal on the floe. They were marooned for eight days. During that time another plane dropped food, fuel, and clothing to them. Finally the rescue plane took them off.

The Heinkel HE111, said to be the world's fastest passenger plane, was placed on public exhibition in Berlin Thursday. The plane has two 660 horse power motors, giving it a speed of 250 miles an hour. Later 880 horse power motors will be installed to give greater speed.

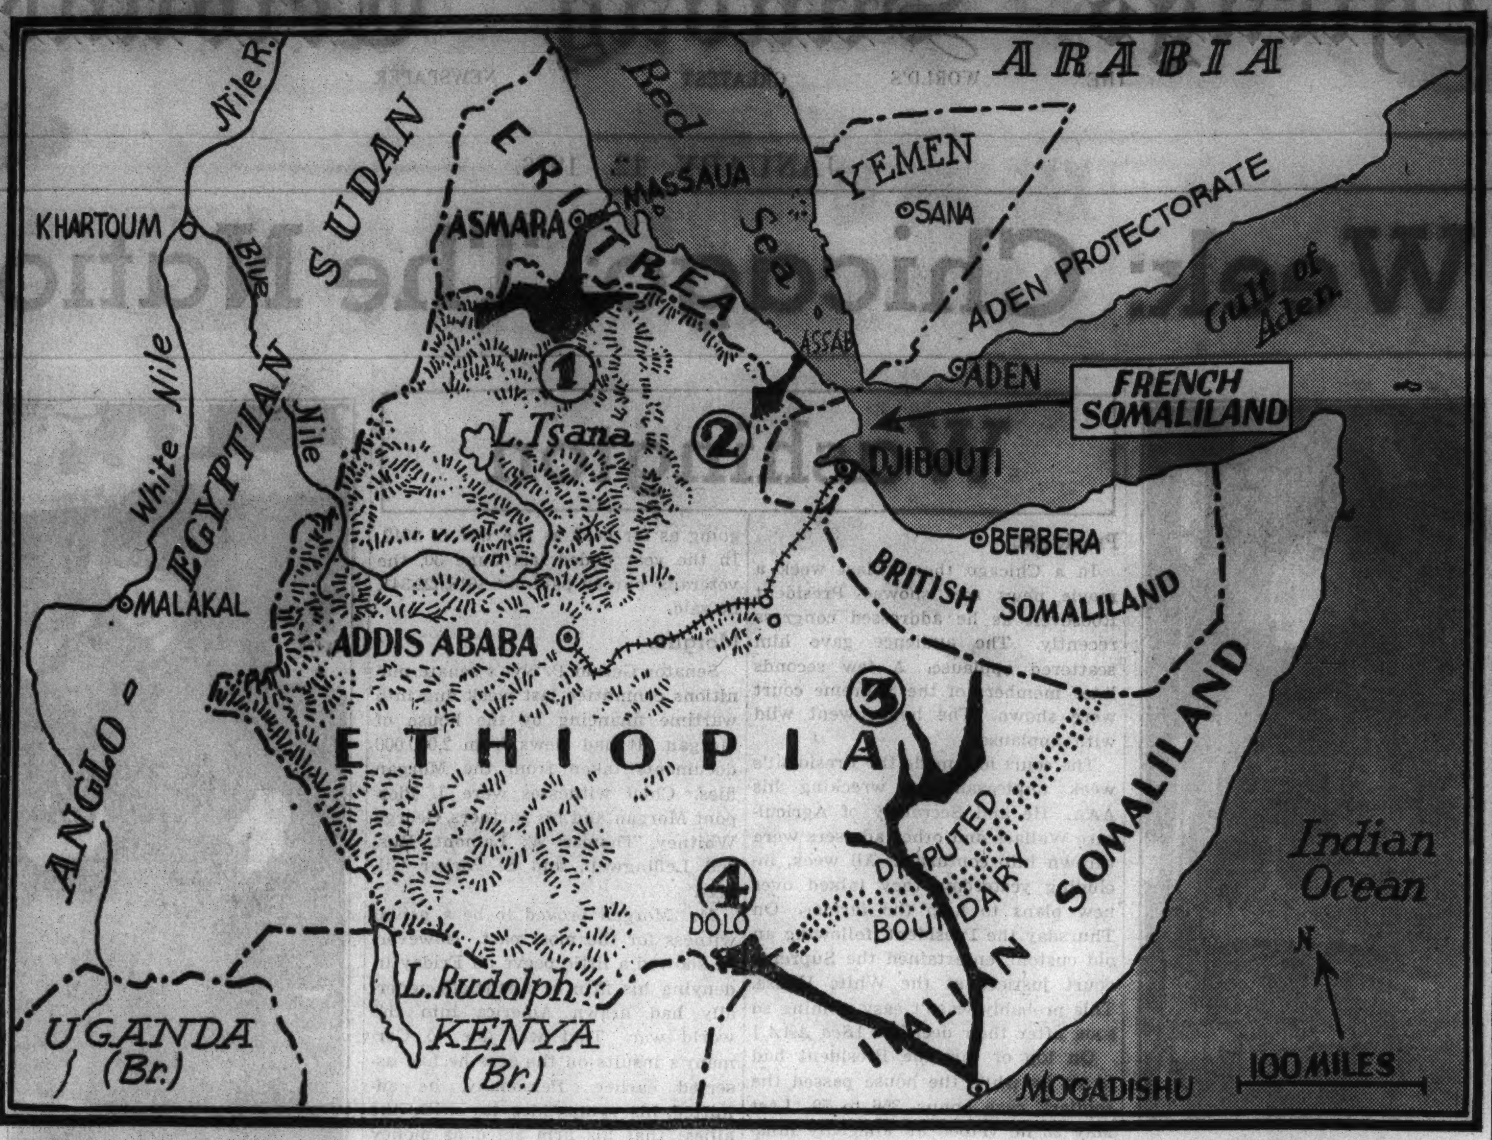
Unification of the air express service in America was announced in New York Thursday by L. O. Head, president of the Railway Express agency. Beginning Feb. 1 the agency will act as coördinator of air and air-rail shipments over twenty of the twenty-three domestic airlines and the lines of Pan-American Airways to the orient and Latin America.

QUADS & QUINTS.

Señora Eulilu Rodriquez, 24 years old, missed world fame by one. Without benefit of doctor or nurse Wednesday, in an inland village of Panama, she gave birth to quadruplets— three boys and a girl.

The day before, Ontario government officials had announced that the world famous Dionne quintuplets have a joint fortune of $120,000—$24,000 each. Motion picture contracts and royalties on postcards, calendars, coats, bonnets, and dolls have provided the money. The quints are now 19 months old. Officials said that they would be worth $300,000 under present contracts if they live to be 3 years old. There is no record of all five children born as quintuplets having lived more than 50 minutes previous to the Dionne children.

Where the Italians Are Stuck in Ethiopia



Rain in the north and Ethiopian troops in the south have prevented the Italian armies from advancing beyond the limits of the black areas shown on the map. The position occupied by the northern army of Gen. Pietro Badoglio is shown by [1]. The eastern column at [2] has been inactive since the middle of October. The two southern columns [3] and [4], commanded by Gen. Rudolfo Graziani have been kept at a standstill for the last two months. Note the long communication lines which are being harassed by Ethiopian troops.

At the present time the prevailing wind direction in Ethiopia is northeast and east. The months of December and January comprise a season of rain in Eritrea and northern Ethiopia. Temperatures are moderate at the heights to which the troops have advanced, but the nights often become bitterly cold.

During the winter months most of Ethiopia is dry. Occasional showers fall on the plateau, but they are neither heavy enough nor frequent enough to seriously impede trafic. In the south, particularly in the Ogaden, there is almost no rain and the Italian troops have been suffering acutely from a lack of water.

In the spring the wind direction shifts from northeast to southwest. During the latter part of February occur what are known as the light rains. For approximately three weeks travel is all but impossible in the roadless country.

With the southwest monsoon in late March or early April come the heavy rains. Until the latter part of September the rains are steady, occurring daily and reaching their peak in July and August. The heavy clay soil of the Abyssinian plateau [Abyssinia is a geographical name, Ethiopia a political name] becomes a clogging, sticky, practically impassable surface.

The effect of the heavy rains is felt throughout the Abyssinian plateau. It extends as far north as the Lake Tsana region and the northern border of Ethiopia.

WRONG ANSWER.

Werner E. Schierler stood before Federal Judge C. G. Briggle in Peoria, Ill., Thursday and asked for citizenship papers. He was asked if he would bear arms to kill in defense of the country. "I would bear arms, but I would not kill," he said. Judge Briggle refused him citizenship. "I am sure you would make a good citizen," he said, "but I cannot grant your petition."

Jewish booksellers throughout the nation were notified that they will no longer be allowed to continue in business. The dismissal of 200 Jewish judges was revealed. Foreign Notes.

The London naval conference reopened its meetings Monday at the end of a two weeks' Christmas vacation. Four days of argument produced no agreement. What is believed will be the final meeting of the conference was set for tomorrow. Japan refused to talk about any other terms for naval limitation unless Great Britain and the United States agreed to the Japanese demand for an equal navy. This was refused.

Reports from Salzburg, Austria, Tuesday said Austria is planning more power for a dictatorial government. There have been rumors that Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg might retire because of ill health. In that case, it is believed, Vice Chancellor Prince Ernest von Starhemberg would become regent of a restored Austrian monarchy.

The little entente—Jugo-Slavia, Czechoslovakia, and Rumania—indicated Thursday that they will not listen to Austrian offers of a "bargain" for a return of the Austrian monarchy. They are afraid an Austrian monarchy would mean the return to the throne of a Hapsburg, in the person of Archduke Otto.

Russian bolshevists maintain a strict censorship over news in Russia. The censorship slipped Tuesday. The Moscow Pravda printed a speech by A. V. Kosariev, leader of the communist youth movement. Speaking to a congress of workers in Moscow, he said the Red army would soon be called upon to force communism on other nations. According to Kosariev, the youth of Russia is looking forward to service in the army with this aim in view.

His speech was seen as offering Uruguay further evidence that Russia is actively fostering communism abroad. Uruguay broke off relation ships with Russia two weeks ago because, the Uruguayan government charged, Russia was using its legation in Montevideo, Uruguay, as a center for communist work in South America.

The league of nations will investigate the Uruguayan charges and Russia's protest at its meeting Jan. 20. Poland, Lithuania, Esthonia, and Finland have offered to supply Uruguay with evidence supporting its charge.

The Japanese continued to be indignant about anti-Japanese demonstrations in the newly created puppet state in North China. They indicated they would take military measures as Chinese generals gathered for a conference that may lead to armed resistance to Japanese aggression. Japanese militarists were also angry because of an incident at Peiping Monday. A carload of Japanese officers drove up to the city after the gates had been locked for the night. The Chinese guards refused to open them. The Chinese claim the Japanese then opened fire. The Japanese claim the Chinese fired on them. The Japanese called the incident "an insult to our imperial army."

An attempted general strike in Buenos Aires, Argentina, ended with five deaths, injuries to many, and the arrest of 1,326 strikers and rioters. The strike was only partially successful, most of its effect being felt in the suburbs.

The general strike was called in sympathy with stone masons who have been on strike for three months. A committee representing 68 labor unions voted to end the strike Wednesday. The disorders caused President Agustin P. Justo to fly back to the capitol from his summer vacation in Cordoba.

President Lopez Contreras of Venezuela ordered civil rights suspended throughout the country. Continuous rioting has gone on since the recent death of Juan Vicente Gomez, aged dictator.

Brazilian police revealed the arrests of more radicals. Harry Berger, owner of a United States passport, and his wife have been in jail since the day after Christmas. The police said Berger is the head of a South American communist ring. Police announced the arrest of Franzer Juber, Berger's secretary, Thursday. The police also said two Brazilian women have been in jail for a fortnight. Police suspect them of being communists interested in fostering a women's revolt.

One soldier was killed and two girls wounded when raiders held up five auto buses near Dolores Hidalgo, Guanajuato state. The men said they were looking for representatives of Mexico's socialistic government.

Medicine

$500,000 Sterility.

In 1934 Mrs. Maryon Hewitt McCarter took her 20 year old daughter, Ann Hewitt, to her friend and physician, Dr. Tilton E. [Uncle Tilt] Tillman, in San Francisco. Dr. Tillman called in Dr. Samuel G. Boyd, surgeon, and Mrs. Mary Scally, state employed psychiatrist. Mrs. Scally said the girl had an 11 year old mentality. Dr. Tillman said she was feeble-minded and proposed sterilization. Mrs. McCarter consented and the two doctors operated.

Ann's mother bore her to Peter Cooper Hewitt, millionaire inventor, four years before their marriage in Paris. Hewitt was the third of five husbands for the southern belle, née Marion Andrews. Upon his death in 1921 he willed a $10,000,000 trust to his widow and daughter. Two-thirds went to Mrs. Hewitt. If she remarried Ann received the two-thirds. Mrs. Hewitt soon remarried. New York courts upheld the legitimacy of Ann's parentage in 1927 against the suit of Hewitt's brothers and sisters to gain her inheritance.

ANN HEWITT.

ANNE LINDSAY.

Last July Ann became 21 and free to marry. Last week she sued her mother, the family doctor, the surgeon, and the psychiatrist for $500,000 damages for depriving her of motherhood. She charged it was a plot to gain control of her trust. Nurse Anne Lindsay declared the girl was normal at the time of the operation. A doctor's statement was produced to show she was now sane and normal. Even if she can have no children, Ann said she wanted to marry.

Through her attorneys Mrs. McCarter replied from Hackensack, N. J., that she had "performed her duty as any mother would," and that the girl's diary would show her "erotic tendencies."

Meanwhile District Attorney Matthew Brady prepared charges of mayhem, a crime, against the four. Ann must sign them. California law permits sterilization only if a court judges the person feeble-minded or incompetent.

Medical Notes.

Drs. W. Mary Stevens and Isidore Finkelman of the Elgin, Ill., State Hospital for the Insane announced that dementia praecox may result from interference between the brain controls and the sympathetic nervous system. They found that the temperatures of normal persons immersed in cold water fell slowly and rose slowly when they came out. In contrast insane subjects showed a swift drop in temperature and a swift rise in temperature.

Dr. Benjamin Gruskin of Temple university, Philadelphia, last week reported in the American Journal of Medicine a new and simple test for pregnancy. An extract of the powdered placenta [afterbirth] is injected under the skin. If the patient is to become a mother the skin in the area becomes inflamed within ten minutes.

HUEY LONG.

Was Senator Huey Long, fatally wounded last Sept. 8, assassinated by Dr. C. A. Weiss Jr., as is generally accepted, or was he slain by his own bodyguards? The records show that Weiss fired at him and was then shot 60 or more times by Long's guards. Last Thursday young Weiss' father, Dr. C. A. Weiss of Baton Rouge, made public a letter he had written to Gov. O. K. Allen. In it the elder Weiss charged that Long "in all probability" was slain by his own bodyguards, who then "ruthlessly assassinated" the supposed killer.

Crime

The murder of Dr. Silber C. Peacock, widely known specialist in children's diseases, grew more puzzling during the week. Police admitted that all previous clews having faded, they must start from scratch again. They questioned a dozen possible witnesses, among them Frank and Anton Stephen, brothers, and May Mason, a nurse, but got nowhere. Dr. Peacock was found slain in his car Jan. 3 in the 6300 block of North Francisco avenue. He went to the neighborhood on a call. Two days ago the north shore branch of the Chicago Medical society offered a $500 reward for solution of the crime. [See Main News Section.]

Illinois justice moved swiftly for Lawrence Lidholm, 26 years old, of Rockford. On Sunday night he stole $100 from Ira Miller, a school principal of Leaf River. He had served eighteen months for income tax evasion, less 108 days for good behavior, and had paid a fine of $108. A woman met him when he left prison. They came to Chicago. •• Christian P. Paschen, former Chicago building commissioner, on Thursday completed a two year sentence at Leavenworth for income tax evasion. He was kept in prison for failure to pay a $20,000 fine and $1,500 court costs. The government recommended that, since he cannot pay the fine, he take a pauper's oath. This will permit his release in thirty days.

He was accused of running down Mrs. Evelyn Sliwinski with an automobile after a wild party. Daley, superintendent of the Oklahoma crime bureau. The seven states are Colorado, Missouri, Kansas, Arkansas, Texas, Oklahoma, and New Mexico.

WPA workers on Thursday uncovered a body buried in quicklime in Stickney, Ill. Cicero police identified it as that of Clyde H. Stimson, 20 years old, who disappeared Feb. 3, 1931, and was evidently murdered. Stimson's father, a railroad switchman, offered a clew. He said his son had fallen in with a gang of hijackers. A pair of woman's glasses found near the body led to Stimson's identification. They belonged to Miss May Blazek, a friend. Stimson had carried them for her when they left a theater the night he disappeared. The girl's optician positively identified them.

The infamous Scottsboro rape trials, twice reversed by the United States Supreme court, will open again in Decatur, Ala., on Jan. 20. Haywood Patterson, one of the nine colored defendants, will go on trial alone. As before, the death penalty will be asked. The setting was prepared on Thursday when Judge W. W. Callahan, in Morgan Circuit court, denied a defense plea for transfer of the trial to the federal court. The defense asserted it could not get a fair trial in the state courts because equal rights were denied on account of the defendants' color. The Supreme court set aside the last conviction on that ground, holding that Negroes should have been called as jurors in the case.

Burglars broke into the historic Greek Catholic Church of St. Barbara in Vienna, Austria, on Wednesday. They smashed a glass walled sarcophagus and stripped the antique chain and cross from the body of Jehosaphat, a martyred saint.

Religion

By reading in relays 359 persons can read through the Bible in 69 hours and 15 minutes, in 513 reading periods. This interesting fact was demonstrated in Ponca City, Okla., last Sunday.

Ardh Humbh is one of the great religious festivals of Hindu India. Thousands of Hindus opened celebration of the festival before dawn Wednesday when they plunged into the cold waters of the sacred Ganges river. More than 3,000,000 are expected to follow them by Jan. 24. The more religious will bathe in the filthy water hourly. The festival, held once every twelve years, provides authorities with acute problems of sanitation, transportation, and discipline.

Followers of the Byzantine [Eastern] Orthodox Catholic church celebrated Christmas Tuesday. They follow the Julian calendar. [Most of the western world follows the Gregorian calendar.] In Belgrade, Jugo-Slavia, the boy king, Peter II., led in the festivities that began at the end of the year of mourning for his father, the assassinated King Alexander. Peter was happy when his mother presented him with a motion picture outfit.

The festival of the Epiphany marks the visit of the Three Wise Men who followed the star to the manger in which the Christ child lay. It is now celebrated on Jan. 6. Last Monday in London King George and Queen Mary observed the day by offering gold, frankincense, and myrrh at the chapel royal. They placed their gifts on a gold plate before the altar.

Disasters

At least thirty were known to be dead as the result of storms which swept western Europe during the week. Winds of 100 mile an hour velocity prevented the liner Manhattan, carrying part of the American winter Olympic team, from touching at Cobh, Ireland. The winds were so strong that a two ton truck was blown thirty feet sideways into a restaurant in London. Hundreds of persons were homeless in France as the result of the worst floods in 25 years. •• Either the storm or an old wartime mine caused the wrecking of the Russian steamer Donetz in the Gulf of Finland. The entire crew of 31 was believed to have been lost. •• Nearly 300 persons were buried alive in a landslide following an earthquake near Marino, Bogata, Friday. Reports reaching Bogata were delayed because communications were down. It was feared the death toll would increase. The area is near the border of Ecuador.

Science

Pop vs. Boom.

Like the law of gravity, scientists have always regarded the speed of sound, whether a pop or a boom, as constant. This is 1,090 feet a second. But last week F. L. Partlo and Jerry H. Service of the Michigan College of Mining and Technology at Houghton, Mich., announced that sound travels faster at the start and slower at the end. Comparing the speed of sound from a dynamite cap and a pound of dynamite at five meters distance, they found the cap's air waves were traveling at 1,420 feet a second and the big stick's sound was going 1,505 a second. At 50 meters, both had slowed down to below the lawful speed, the pound explosion's sound registering only 941. Partlo and Service suggested that recoil of the surrounding air slows the sound down, and the greater the sound the greater the recoil. Thus a pop and a boom might average the same time for a longer distance.

Personality.

Dr. Blake Crider, Cleveland psychologist, last week announced a test for a person's likability. After questioning several thousand persons to find what traits they considered disagreeable Dr. Crider formulated a question test which showed the best personalities on the judgment of acquaintances had four bad traits and those much disliked at least 25 objectionable characteristics out of a possible 63. From his tests Dr. Crider surmised: "It is not the admirable personality characteristics which get us ahead, but the annoying personality traits which hold us back. For example 65 per cent of the job failures are due to certain personality peculiarities rather than lack of competency."

Atom Splitter.

The University of California's atom splitting machine, the cyclotron, designed by Dr. E. O. Lawrence, has changed a score of common elements into artificially radioactive substances unknown in nature. Last week the university at Berkeley announced that mechanical improvements made by Dr. Arnold Cooksey of Yale will enable a speed up of the cyclotron to 6,000,000 and more volts. This, they hope, will enable the production of the new substances in sufficient quantities for medical and biological testing as substitutes for radium.

Lithium Six.

The Bartol Research Foundation of Philadelphia exhibited a new metal called "lithium six" to the New York Electrical society. Extracted by a new magnetic machine at the cost of $5,500 a pound, the metal is 10 per cent lighter than the previous lightest known metal and lighter than solidified gas. The world's supply at present is the size of a penny and thinner than paper.

STOCKS CHURN BUT PRICES ARE LITTLE CHANGED

New Buying Offsets Profit Taking.

New York, Jan. 11.—[Special.]—Stocks churned about in lively fashion throughout the two hour week-end trading session today, but the close found final price averages about where they were yesterday. Mixed trading was the rule throughout the list, week-end profit taking sales being balanced by fresh buying orders.

Large blocks of shares changed hands at intervals in various trading favorites and the ticker was kept clicking merrily, falling as much as two or three minutes behind at times. The turnover amounted to 1,641,050 shares.

Buying Based on Inflation.

Brokerage house observers said a good proportion of the new demand evidently was based on fresh inflation prospects raised by the passage of the bonus bill by the house and by expectations of a further cut in the dollar's value by President Roosevelt following his proclamation extending the period of his power to take such action.

The market opened strong, with several unusually large bundles of shares, one of them 20,000 shares of Packard, changing hands in the first few minutes of trading. After execution of the usual accumulation of overnight orders, however, the list turned irregular and price movements zigzagged until the close.

Oil shares made a show of strength in the early dealings but gave way in the face of realizing in the final hour.

Mining Group Is Strong.

The mining shares were active and strong, particularly the gold issues. Among the silvers, United States Smelting, Cerro de Pasco, and Howe Sound were prominent.

Amerada was again the feature of the petroleum division, adding another 2 points to the price gain column it has been running up for the last few days. Standard of New Jersey opened on a sale of 4,700 shares at 55, up ⅝ point and the highest price in more than a year, but sagged after its initial splurge and finished showing a small loss on the day.

Railroad shares with a few exceptions, among them Union Pacific and Illinois Central, were disposed to sag. Pennsylvania made a new high, but dropped back.

Studebaker was heavily traded in at better prices but closed unchanged from its previous rating. Chrysler dipped a point or so. Steels were generally stronger.

The bullishness of the speculative community was further emphasized during the day by announcement of the sale of two more stock exchange seats at higher prices, one of them going for $150,000 and the other for $155,000, up $1,000 and $6,000, respectively, from the last previous quotations.

TRADE INDICES ADVANCE DESPITE ADVERSE NEWS

[Copyright: 1936: By the Associated Press.]

New York, Jan. 11.—(AP)—Business and the financial markets breasted a flood of Washington developments this week and won through to higher ground at the finish.

Such developments as the Supreme court invalidation of the AAA, passage of a bonus payment measure in the house, and the confusing activity at the national capital as the administration sought a substitute farm program, created a minimum of disturbance, considering their importance.

The Associated Press weekly index of industrial activity advanced, with 6 of its 7 components improving. The average of 60 stocks toward the close of the week moved forward to another peak since September, 1931.

Figures for the industrial activity index, which is adjusted for seasonal variation and is based on 1929-'30 as 100, follow:

	Latest week	Prev. week	Year ago
Composite index	85.8	85.2	76.6
Automobile production	102.8	100.7	86.5
Steel mill activity	66.0	63.7	58.3
Cotton mfg. activity	106.7	107.1	100.6
Electric power prod.	105.5	105.4	99.5
Residential building	43.3	41.9	18.3

CONTINENTAL STOCK RECORDS 10 POINT RISE

Continental bank stock featured brisk trading here last week in over the counter sales, closing at 131 bid, 133 asked, up 10 points for the week, after high sales of 136 on the declaration of two $1 dividends.

First National was also strong, gaining 7 points for the week to 225 bid, 230 asked. Harris Trust, at 325 bid, was 15 points higher with little interest shown among sellers. Northern Trust gained 10 points to 580 bid, 590 asked.

Merchandise Bank and Trust had an advance of 40 points for the week, closing at 195 bid, 210 asked. The sharp upturn was attributed to a scarcity of offerings and expectation of a favorable earnings report when figures are made public in a few days. Terminal National was unchanged at 24 bid, 26 asked. Chicago Title and Trust remained at 168 bid, 172 asked.

Banks, if Free, Can End Loan Jam—Brown

BY HOWARD WOOD.

Restoration to the banks of the right to underwrite long term bonds for commerce and industry would do much to clear up the jam in private financing and would enable the government to withdraw more rapidly from the lending field, Edward E. Brown, president of the First National bank of Chicago said yesterday.

Mr. Brown's remarks yesterday were an amplification of the statement in his annual report to stockholders in which he had said:

"We are still hopeful that the law may be ultimately liberalized so as to allow banks, through their bond departments, to again act as a medium of supply of long term funds for commerce and industry."

Forced Out By Banking Act.

The banking act of 1933 forced commercial banks to withdraw from the underwriting of corporate and railroad issues and left them power to underwrite and distribute only bonds put out by government bodies, including cities, states, and local political subdivisions.

"I am not particularly concerned about retail distribution of corporate bonds by the banks but I do feel that amendments to the banking laws which would again permit banks, through their bond departments, to underwrite industrial and railroad bond offerings would facilitate the financing of private industry and would stimulate business recovery," Mr. Brown said.

Cites Need for Bank Aid.

"Assistance of the commercial banks is needed in this field. Banks with their large capital resources could handle some of the big refunding operations that have to be taken care of during the next few years in such a way as to save money for the corporations and railroads which have these jobs to do.

"Also as recovery advances there will be the need for raising new capital which the banks would be in a position to help supply."

Mr. Brown said that he did not anticipate any relaxation of the laws regarding the underwriting of bonds by banks during 1936 because he believed there was a general disinclination to enact any banking legislation during an election year. However, he was hopeful that at some time in the near future laws barring the employment of bank funds in the underwriting of long term issues of private industry would be made less rigid.

Provision Deleted.

He pointed out that the banking bill of 1935 while in the hands of the senate banking committee contained a provision which would have allowed the bond departments of banks to do a general industrial underwriting business. This provision was deleted before the bill finally was passed by congress.

As an illustration of the assistance which commercial banks might afford private industry Mr. Brown cited the impending refinancing of the Great Northern railway, whose 100 million dollar refunding issue the Reconstruction Finance corporation recently offered to underwrite at 4 per cent after private underwriters had arranged to handle it at 5 per cent. Mr. Brown said that in such an operation the banks, because of their large capital resources, would have been able to underwrite the issue at the lower rate without the intervention of government agencies had they been permitted by law to participate.

AUTO COMPANIES EXPAND OUTPUT; NEAR CAPACITY

Automobile production gained sharply in the United States and Canada last week through the addition of one extra working day, Ward's Reports, Inc., reported yesterday. A total of 101,696 cars and trucks rolled from assembly lines, compared with 65,388 a week earlier.

Practically every company entered 1936 with unfilled orders sufficient to warant operations near a capacity rate for several weeks, the agency said. In addition, heavy orders are being booked currently.

"Most manufacturers are conservatively placing January quotas at or near December figures, but believe an increase will be necessary before the month closes," Ward's continues.

"Approximate production by General Motors last week was 39,760 vehicles, compared with 29,950 in the preceding week. Ford and Lincoln finished an aggregate of 26,975 units, against 9,618 in the previous week. The Chrysler group ended the week with 22,650 units, against 18,670."

43 Favorable Dividend Changes Made Last Week

New York, Jan. 11.—Favorable dividend announcements during the last week totaled 43 against 30 in the preceding week, the Standard Statistics company reports. There were no reports of unfavorable actions.

U. S. May Curb Stock Loans, Prevent Boom

Washington, D. C., Jan. 11.—[Special.]—A tentative draft of margin regulations covering bank loans for the purpose of purchasing or carrying equity securities registered on national security exchanges, transmitted today by the federal reserve board to its agents, provides for equal margin requirements on bank and brokers' loans.

While seeking "comments and suggestions" from reserve members and non-member banks and representatives of security exchanges, to which the agents are instructed to transmit two alternative sets of margin regulations, the reserve board is understood to be determined to put margin requirements on bank loans into effect as one means of keeping excess bank reserves, estimated at 3 billion dollars, from being used in the stock market for inflationary purposes.

Aimed to Prevent Boom.

"Regulations of this kind will put the reserve system in a position so that if the potential bank credit started to go into the market, the board would have facilities for checking the movement," a person close to the board explained.

The first alternative plan submitted calls for the same statutory regulations for bank loans that are in force for brokers and dealers. These regulations provide for a margin requirement of between 25 and 45 per cent on securities, the percentage required at present being 45 per cent.

The second plan, in effect, provides for less detailed regulations and slightly higher margin requirements. In either case, it is the declared intention of the reserve board to have the margin regulations for bank and brokers' loans conform.

May Require 50 Per Cent.

The percentage of margin that would be required under the second plan, which, it is reported in some quarters, the board favors, is not cited in the letter sent out, but brokers in Chicago, meeting recently discussed a margin requirement of 50 per cent, and the reserve board is said to consider this percentage satisfactory.

Under either set of regulations, the reserve board has the right, under the law, to increase margin requirements on both bank and brokers' loans up to 100 per cent.

A reserve official said today that the board would consider carefully all suggestions received on technical points but remarked that under any conditions, regulations of some sort covering bank loans would be put into effect.

Chicago Calls Bloc of Tax Warants for Jan. 15

R. B. Upham, city controler, yesterday issued calls for payment of 1933 and 1934 tax anticipation warants on which interest will stop Jan. 15. The 1933 warants called are public library issues, numbered 612 to 617, and municipal tuberculosis sanitarium issues, 461A2 to 470A1. The 1934 issues are corporate warants, numbered 460 to 486A14; public library, 655 to 659, and municipal tuberculosis sanitarium, 899A7 to 908A4.

END OF HOG TAX BOOSTS FLOW OF CASH TO FARMS

More Swine Sold at Higher Prices.

The death of the AAA and its processing taxes last Monday not only greatly enhanced the farm wealth by raising the aggregate value of hogs in the country almost $100,000,000 over night, but it resulted in an immediate increase in the flow of cash back to farmers from the leading packing centers as hog raisers began cashing in on the high markets prevailing since the tax burden was removed.

Farmers who sold stock at the twenty leading markets last week were paid a total of $11,600,000 for hogs alone, compared with only $5,977,000 in the preceding week and $6,069,000 in the corresponding week in 1935. The rise in farm income was due both to the phenomenal gain in net returns from hogs after the removal of the tax and the substantial increase in the movement of hogs from the farms following the decision.

Hogs Held Back Pending Decree.

Farmers selling hogs here during the week explained that they had expected the tax to be killed and, since an advance in the markets was certain without the tax, they had been holding stock back for the last two or three weeks and planning to sell as soon as the tax was killed.

Twenty leading markets during the week received a total of 517,000 head, compared with only 278,000 in the preceding week, 279,000 two weeks ago and 357,000 a year ago. Current receipts are the heaviest since December, 1934. Such volume in any of the recent weeks while the tax was still on would have demoralized the trade.

Prices during the first five days rose 50 to 75 cents, with instances of $1 gain scored in places. Top grades of hogs that sold at $9.50 early Monday forenoon were bringing $10.25 on Friday, and at times during the week sold as high as $10.35 and $10.40 as packers scrambled for volume.

Stores Feature Pork Sales.

Stores over the country featured pork, especially fresh pork on which a price cut almost the equivalent of the tax has been made since early Monday.

The death of the tax on hogs had an adverse effect on other live stock. Cattle fluctuated uncertainly most of the week, the bulk of the steers at $8.50 to $12 closing 25 to 50 cents under a week ago. Best grades of cattle, those selling over $13.50, were scarce and held firm, while some of the cheapest grades under $8 were higher than a week ago.

Lamb prices fell 60 to 75 cents as competition of cheaper pork reduced quotations for lamb meat. Receipts were largest since last October. Top lamps fell from $11.25 on Monday to $10.65 at the close yesterday, with the six day average at $10.60 off 35 cents from the preceding week. Dressed lamb carcasses sold 50 cents to $1 less than a week ago, the range at $15 to $18 being lowest since Nov. 27.

FISH TO DEMAND ACCOUNTING OF STABILIZING FUND

Washington, D. C., Jan. 11.—(AP)—Representative Fish [Rep., N. Y.] tonight announced he would demand an accounting of the use to which the exchange stabilization fund has been put and call for the amount on hand Jan. 30.

The fund, a 2 billion dollar affair from which $200,000 has been drawn, was extended for another year yesterday by President Roosevelt under the terms of the law establishing it. Except for his action it would have terminated at the end of this month.

"The President has failed to show cause where an emergency exists, or the necessity for the continuance of the fund as required by law," Fish asserted.

"As a member of the house committee on foreign affairs and on banking and currency," said Fish, "I protest the turning over to any one man, such as the secretary of the treasury, a fund of 2 billion dollars without any accounting whatsoever to congress."

BUSINESS NEWS IN REVIEW

Business Activity Expands on Wide Front—Leading Firms Report Higher Earnings—Markets Erratic Following AAA Decision—Gold Act Extended—Inflation Looms.

Further acceleration in business and industrial activity was recorded last week by principal statistical indices. Automobile production, steel output, and electric power sales registered gains over the preceding week and the comparable periods of 1935. A report made by the reliable Mid-West Shippers Advisory board forecast a continued improvement in business through the first quarter of the year. The board estimated railroad freight car loadings for the first quarter would run about 10.4 per cent above the comparable months of 1935. The forecast is based on the estimates of individual shippers of their prospective requirements.

The weekly report on car loadings showed a slightly greater than seasonal expansion. Trafic was at the highest level for the season since 1935. The movement of coal and "miscellaneous" freight accounted for the largest contribution to the gains over the preceding period and the corresponding week last year.

The index of electric power production also showed an expansion larger than that which ordinarily takes place at this season. Output was up .4 per cent compared with the preceding week and more than 11 per cent over last year. Chicago production declined from the preceding week but showed a substantial gain over 1935.

Operations in the country's steel mills increased again. Production at the close of the week was estimated around 51½ per cent of capacity, an expansion of 2 per cent over the preceding week.

Business done by bank checks also expanded. The federal resereve board reported debits in the principal cities of the country at $10,097,024,000 for the week ended Jan. 8, compared with $9,049,345,000 in the preceding week and $7,300,489,000 in the corresponding period a year ago.

Markets.

Commodity and security markets were thrown into turmoil by the decisive 6 to 3 ruling of the Supreme court Monday declaring the agricultural adjustment program unconstitutional. [See Washington: Review Section.] After the first confusion among traders heavy buying set in and prices of commodities and securities rose rapidly. Shares of food processing companies that paid heavy taxes over to the government under the AAA were the first to respond. Buying then spread to other securities. Utility shares were bid up in the belief that the court's decision forecast a similar finding when it rules on the federal public utilities act which calls for the legal execution of holding companies.

On the Chicago Board of Trade the market value of wheat, rye, corn, lard, and cotton, all commodities on which processing taxes were levied, held at their previous price levels and in some instances made advances after the news of the decision was out. Later in the week the cotton market developed acute weakness and prices on new crop futures dropped below 10 cents a pound, the first time any contract had sold below that level in more than two years. The AAA decision left little hope that the Bankhead production curtailment act would get by the court.

Livestock.

On the Chicago livestock exchange hog prices were bid up immediately on the news that the tax of $2.25 a hundredweight had been eliminated. Trading in the market on Monday was the most active in several years. The market continued to advance throughout the remainder of the week.

Removal of the tax resulted in higher prices for producers and cheaper pork for consumers. Packers reduced their prices on fresh pork $3 to $4 a hundred pounds after the decision. The money that otherwise would have gone to the government in the form of taxes was divided between the producer and consumer.

The most radical price adjustments that followed the decision were in processed articles. Flour prices were slashed by millers in all parts of the country from 80 cents to $1.40 a barrel. A wide variety of other articles such as corn starch, corn meal, and cotton duck were reduced to give effect to the removal of the tax to which they were subject.

Problems.

The decision left the knotty problem of disposing of nearly $200,000,000 in tax funds which had been impounded by federal courts in various sections of the country after validity of the act had been attacked. There was also the question of the billion dollars that had already been collected in taxes which the Supreme court held were not taxes at all.

Could this money be recovered by the taxpayers and who were the taxpayers? These questions remained unanswered as the week closed, but there was plenty of evidence that claimants for these funds would not be missing. Some processors filed suits for recovery of the impounded money. The St. Paul Live Stock exchange started suit to recover funds placed in escrow by Chicago and St. Paul packers. The exchange contended producers who sold hogs to the packers actually bore the burden of the tax because they received lower prices than would otherwise have been paid to them.

Evidence.

Evidence of general improvement in business and industrial conditions was received during the week from various sources.

Directors of the Pennsylvania railroad on Wednesday ordered the distribution of a $1 dividend to stockholders. The decision was made after studying 1935 earnings results of the system. A dividend had been expected but most guesses were for a 75 cent payment.

On the same day the Nash Motor

DOLLAR FALLS; EUROPE FEARS EVENTS IN U. S.

Bonus, Devaluation Prospect Factors.

New York, Jan. 11.—[Special.]—Foreign money markets today viewed the United States as heading for inflation and sold dollars heavily, resulting in the highest prices for foreign currencies in six months. All gold bloc currency rose above their parities against the dollar and the British pound sterling for the $5 level.

Apprehension over the future of the American dollar was evident in Paris and London, where the franc and pound continued their rise against the dollar. The renewed weakness in American money was ascribed largely to the effects on sentiment abroad of the large vote in the house of representatives on Friday in favor of the cash bonus to veterans.

AAA Court Decree Is Factor.

Other factors that contributed to the improvement of foreign exchanges against the dollar included the rumors and alarms that had been set in motion earlier in the week, following the invalidation of the AAA by the Supreme court.

A minor influence in stirring devaluation talk was the action of President Roosevelt on Friday in extending for one year his powers to alter the gold content of the dollar under the gold reserve act of 1934. Foreigners are reported as viewing this action as an admission that the emergency declared under that act has not passed. Fears of inflationary farm legislation were also said to

BROOKMIRE CLIENTS PROFITED FROM LAST YEAR'S FORECAST

Extracts From Brookmire 1935 Forecast

"... recovery sums up in one word the Brookmire appraisal of the outlook for 1935.... business expansion promises to accelerate .... stocks are due in 1935 to enter upon a rapidly advancing phase in response to the expansion of general business, excess bank reserves .... the time is near to expect a broad upward movement ... a movement culminating in a veritable boom."

BROOKMIRE 1936 FORECAST

The past year has conspicuously illustrated the need for careful selection and balancing of investment portfolios. The year 1936, faced with confusing economic developments, will require equal care in the planning of investment programs.

Plan Your Investment Program—NOW—To Profit from 1936 Developments

The success of the 1935 Brookmire $100,000 Stock Program (illustrated in the small graph) demonstrates the soundness of planned investment programs. From an original valuation of $100,900, this fund had grown by the end of 1935 to $161,600—a gain of 60.2% as compared to a gain of only 39.9% in the Dow-Jones Industrial Stock Average.

SMALL RETURNS INDICATED FOR 2 CLOSED BANKS

South Side Institutions Report on Condition.

Only small further returns to depositors are indicated in Dec. 31 quarterly reports made yesterday by receivers of the National Bank of Woodlawn and Jackson Park National bank to the controler of the currency.

The Jackson Park bank, which has paid $357,798 or 54 per cent of deposit liability, the latest of which was a 10 per cent disbursement just before Christmas, has remaining assets on the books of $636,178. These are expected to yield $116,587, according to current estimates. After the receiver pays $17,700 balance due on loans of $313,700 from the Reconstruction Finance corporation and meets current expenses, this would equal about 15 per cent more for depositors eventually.

Collections of $1,127,484 include $700,810 from assets and $56,676 on the assessment of $200,000 against stockholders. Only $12,800 more is expected in stock liability collections. Disbursements include $380,752 on secured and preferred claims, $8,174 to protect assets, $4,761 interest and RFC expense, and $71,898 cost of liquidation aside from the RFC loan repayments and dividends to depositors. Cash on hand is $8,099. J. M. Connolly is receiver.

The National Bank of Woodlawn has returned $520,545 or 42½ per cent to depositors. It still owes $12,500 on RFC loans of $322,000 after repaying $10,000 last quarter, and has cash on hand of $14,239.

Assets to Yield $132,675.

Remaining assets of $860,621 book value are expected to yield $132,679 when sold. This is equivalent to about 10 per cent more for depositors after expenses and repayment of the RFC.

Collections of $1,359,241 through last Dec. 31, including $21,500 in the final three months of 1935, consist of $874,020 from the sale of assets, $33,449 interest and rents, $1,257 miscellaneous items, and $128,515 on the stockholders' liability assessment of $300,000. Only $11,007 more is expected in stock liability collections. Aside from depositor and RFC payments, other disbursements include $426,295 prior claims, $16,810 to protect assets, $5,366 in RFC charges, and $66,485 cost of liquidation. Eugene E. Highman is receiver.

ILLINOIS ROADS TO BEGIN PICKUP, DELIVERY JAN. 20

Pickup and delivery service on less than carload shipments of freight at practically all stations in Illinois by railroads was authorized yesterday by the Illinois commerce commission. The order makes the new service effective on Jan. 20.

Under the new regulations railroads can pick up freight at the plants of shippers, take it by truck to their depots, transport it by rail to the city of destination and deliver it at the freight platform or home of the consignee. A shipper or receiver who delivers or picks up his shipments at the railroad freight depots will be allowed 5 cents a hundredweight reduction in charges.

BUSINESS GAINS ARE EXTENDED ON WIDE FRONT

company reported a profit of more than half a million dollars for the last three months of its fiscal year—the first quarterly operating profit in three years. Charles W. Nash, chairman, told stockholders he looked for a substantial improvement in business in 1936.

General Motors corporation on Wednesday made public its 1935 sales figures showing unit sales the largest in six years. On the preceding day Montgomery Ward & Co. announced that its sales for December and the 11 months ended Dec. 31 were the largest in its history. Sears, Roebuck & Co. announced the largest December sales since 1929.

Recovery.

In one of his rare public addresses, William A. Irvin, president of the United States Steel corporation, on Wednesday told an audience of Chicago business and industrial leaders that recovery is "as certain as death and taxes." He told his listeners to be prepared for the inevitable upturn.

The head of the nation's premier industrial organization took the opportunity to criticize certain of the reciprocal trade agreements that have been entered into between the United States and other nations. He declared any tarif concessions by this country which would remove the protection for "workers' living standards."

Irvin also pleaded for a cessation of regulatory legislation over business and industry. A halt on such laws should be called, he said, "at least until the country has had time to digest the great mass of new legislation and regulation which is hardly yet effective."

Criticism.

Criticism of New Deal policies continued in other quarters. The rising cost of government and its threat to the nation's welfare was the theme taken by Frank C. Rand, chairman of the International Shoe company. Speaking Tuesday at the national shoe fair in Chicago, Rand warned that the country will be ruined unless government expenditures are drastically curtailed.

After a study of federal, state and local taxation, the Chicago Association of Commerce announced its conclusion that government is seizing such a large share of the national income that business is being discouraged and wages and savings are being jeopardized. The association also criticized the use of the federal taxing power to force states and individuals to conform to social and economic readjustments.

Gold.

On Friday President Roosevelt issued a proclamation extending the life of the gold reserve act of 1934 for one year and thereby continued the "59 cent dollar" until Jan. 30, 1936. The executive action also continued the two billion stabilization fund set up by the act. The President declined to comment on rumors that an international monetary stabilization conference will be called in the near future. On the day prior to the President's proclamation rumors were circulating in the capitols of Europe that the United States was preparing to devalue the dollar further. This was promptly denied by Secretary of Treasury Morgenthau.

Earlier in the week Secretary Morgenthau disclosed that the United States had closed a secret silver pact with Mexico.

Inflation.

House passage of the bonus bill Friday by a large majority [See Washington: Review Section] again emphasized inflationary potentialities in the securities and commodities markets. The house vote caused a flurry in prices on the New York Stock exchange and the Chicago Board of Trade.

Continental.

Holders of common stock of the Continental Illinois Bank and Trust company on Feb. 1 will receive their first dividend in three years. At their meeting Friday directors of the bank authorized the distribution of two payments of $1 each, one to be made on the first day of February and the second Aug. 1. Common stockholders of the bank have been in the minority since the sale of $50,000,000 of preferred stock of the Reconstruction Finance corporation. Walter J. Cummings, chairman, whose election was due to RFC influence, told stockholders that the bank had no intention of retiring the preferred stock at a rate of more than 5 per cent a year, beginning Aug. 1, 1936, as required by agreement with the government agency.

Oil.

On Friday all major companies in the midcontinent area joined in raising the price of crude oil from 5 cents to 15 cents a barrel. The price advance was estimated to increase the income of producers and royalty owners by $175,000 to $200,000 a day.

HOG SLAUGHTER LAST YEAR FALLS TO 39 YEAR LOW

Official Total Placed at 26 Million Head.

Packers under federal inspection slaughtered 26,057,627 hogs during 1935, the department of agriculture reported yesterday. This is the smallest total since 1896 and a reduction of 17,818,766 head, or more than 40 per cent, compared with the 1934 kill.

In 1933 packers killed 47,225,518 head, not including the 6,410,866 pigs and sows destroyed by the AAA that year to bring about a shortage. The largest number of hogs slaughtered in one year was 53,334,000 in 1923. The average for the last ten years ended with 1935 stands at 45,064,000 head.

Only 2,874,855 hogs were killed during December, the smallest total for that month since 1910. The December, 1934, slaughter was 4,196,894.

The cattle and calf slaughter also was down during 1935. Packers killed 9,665,840 cattle in 1935 and 9,943,086 in 1934, none of the totals including any of the 8,287,786 head killed by the government during 1934 and early 1935.

The calf slaughter for 1935 at 5,679,399 compared with 6,077,629 a year ago. During December 892,173 cattle and 480,878 calves were killed, against 795,844 cattle and 447,005 calves in December, 1934.

Slaughter of sheep and lambs for 1935 totaled 17,644,188, the third largest on record and an increase over both 1934 and 1933. A year ago 16,055,474 were killed, not including the 3,609,773 sheep slaughtered by the government.

DOLLAR FALLS; EUROPE FEARS EVENTS IN U. S.

Bonus and Devaluation Prospect Are Factors.

have influenced the heavy selling of dollars abroad.

In foreign markets forward selling of the dollar was reported by investors who have recently sent large amounts of money here for the purchase of stocks and who, alarmed by the devaluation rumors, were seeking to "hedge" against a possible further cut in the weight of the dollar.

European Improvement Seen.

Foreign exchange experts particularly thought that the rise in the gold bloc currencies was assisted by the improved economic and political conditions in Europe, inducing the return to home shores of the large sums of money sent out of their countries as a precautionary measure weeks ago, when the European situation was highly unsettled.

At one time today the French franc reached 6.65 cents here, the highest price since July 9, 1935. The closing price was at 6.64¾ cents, up 1¾ points for the day, and reducing the value of the American dollar against francs to 99.80 cents from $1.0005 yesterday.

Guilders advanced 22 points to a closing quotation of 68.40 cents, compared with a parity of 68.06 cents against the dollar. Swiss francs at 32.75 cents were 9 points higher for the day and compared with a parity of 32.67 with the dollar.

Pound Sterling Advances.

The pound sterling showed a net gain of 1⅛ cents for the day at the closing price of $4.97⅛ cents after a high price of $4.98⅛, which was the best level since last Aug. 26. The pound has not touched $5 since Nov. 13, 1934, a few days after the appointment of Marriner S. Eccles as head of the federal reserve system.

German marks were 10 points higher here at 40.45 cents, Belgian belgas rose 4 points to 16.96 cents, Scandinavian currencies were up 7 to 10 points, the Japanese yen rose 13 points, Hongkong dollars rose 5 points, and Shanghai dollars gained a point. The Canadian dollar was steady at 99.93¾ cents. All other currencies traded here were either unchanged or higher.

While some bankers believe the inflation talk was primarily responsible for the hardening of the French franc and the pound, others were inclined to give credit to the greater calmness abroad over the Italo-Ethiopian situation and more solidity in the French political and credit position.

Dollar Weaker in Paris.

In the Paris market the franc closed at 6.631 cents against the dollar, compared with the overnight New York rate of 6.63 cents. In London the pound advanced 1 5-16 cents. against the dollar, closing at $4.96 3-16.

No engagement of gold abroad or imports here were reported by the New York Federal Reserve bank, but word was received that at San Francisco $4,010,000 of gold had been received from Australia and $320,000 from China.

Recovery Coming if Politicians Permit It, Asserts Sibley

Rochester, N. Y., Jan. 11.—(AP)—Denouncing "regulatory policies" and "economic experiments" of the administration, Harper Sibley, president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, today said the "stage appears to be set for recovery—if recovery is permitted."

Sibley addressed a luncheon meeting of the City club.

Declaring that before the processes of recovery can operate freely, certain problems must be recognized, he enumerated administration policies which he believes are retarding recovery. They are:

1. Excessive public spending, leading to unbalanced budgets and the possibility of increased taxation.

2. Prolongation of economic experiments to meet emergency conditions or to afford a standard of measurement for future governmental regulation.

3. Uncertainties attending the administration of regulatory laws by bureaus and other governmental agencies.

4. Monetary instability.

5. Governmental competition with private enterprise.

He declared that the policies which legislative and executive federal authorities should follow seem plain. He cited:

1. Check further regulatory legislation or confine it to an unavoidable minimum consistent with sound public policy until business has adjusted itself to present conditions of operation.

2. Liquidate as rapidly as possible emergency devices as the need for them passes.

3. Define as cleary and promptly as possible administrative policies of the various bureaus and agencies invested with authority.

4. Coöperate in the establishment, as soon as practicable, of a stable international monetary base.

5. Carry forward as rapidly as may be consistent with public requirements the curtailment of public expenditures in order that the national budget may be brought into balance.

COST OF HOME BUILDING VARIES WIDELY IN CITIES

Washington, D. C., Jan. 11.—(AP)—In the first survey of its kind, the Federal Home Loan bank reported today a broad spread between building costs in different sections of the country.

Through a check of exact costs of construction of an identical house in 27 cities, the board found they ranged from $4,337 in Columbia, S. C., to $6,442 in Providence, R. I. The cost in Chicago was $6,361. Labor supply, transportation facilities and accessibility of materials were listed as major factors in cost.

The home used as a standard of comparison contains a living room, dining room, lavatory and kitchen on the first floor, three bedrooms and a bath on the second floor, and an attic. The exterior is of wide board siding with brick or stucco trim. A one-car attached garage is included.

Total cost of construction in the 27 cities was listed as follows:

Hartford, Conn., $5,846; Portland, Me., $4,813; Boston, Mass., $5,861; Springfield, Mass., $5,963; Manchester, N. H., $5,380; Providence, R. COMMODITY PRICES ERRATIC FOLLOWING INVALIDATION OF AAA

Erratic price changes occurred in commodity markets last week as to the result of readjustment which followed the elimination of the AAA and the processing tax of 30 cents per bushel levied on wheat and rye, 5 cents per bushel on corn; ½ cent per pound on sugar; 4.2 cents per pound on cotton, and $2.25 per 100 pounds on hogs.

Leading grains sold at the highest mark since October, with July corn hitting the best level of the season. All deliveries of lard with the exception of the May delivery dropped to the lowest point since December, 1934. Distant deliveries of cotton were the lowest since December, 1933. Sugar, after selling at a new low for the season, rallied 25 points in one day, the first time it had fluctuated the maximum amount permitted under exchange regulations in 15 years. A record trade was transacted in cotton seed oil during the week with prices declining to a new low for the season. Interest in silver was limited. Rubber sold at a new high.

GRAINS LOWER; INFLATION TALK LOSES POTENCY

Impending AAA Decrees Restrict Trading.

Inflation talk led to a moderate buying of grain futures at the opening of trading yesterday on the Chicago Board of Trade, but the minor upturn in wheat was taken advantage of by scattered longs to lighten their lines and final trades were near the bottom. May wheat lost nearly a cent, while the new crop months were off half of that amount. Losses in other grains were confined to small fractions.

With the Supreme court expected to hand down important decisions tomorrow determining the constitutionality of additional AAA legislation, there was a rather pronounced tendency on the part of speculators to go slow on either side of the grain markets.

Cash Wheat Demand Improves.

Only moderate mill purchases of futures were indicated, but there was a much improved call for cash wheat and local elevator interests reported about 125,000 bushels of soft red winter sold to mills.

No. 2 red wheat in store was quoted at 3 cents or more premium, compared with the May delivery.

As the result of scarcity of nearby wheats, lack of offerings from Argentina and strength in the pound sterling, Liverpool has developed considerable strength in the last few days. The March delivery in the English market advanced one cent per bushel yesterday. The July delivery was 4⅛ cents over Chicago yesterday and 4⅝ cents over the same future in Winnipeg at the close.

Larger Canadian Exports Reported.

While export demand for Canadian cash wheat was reported to be showing improvement, with sales of 500,000 bushels in all positions, the Winnipeg future market was little affected and closed about a half cent per bushel lower. Greece was said to have taken 500,000 bushels of Australian wheat during the day.

NEW FORTUNES in the MAKING—

New fortunes are created by new industry Early in 1935 TECHNIGRAPHICS chose the youthful aviation industry as the outstanding investment and speculative opportunity, and recommended the purchase of leading aircraft stocks. Sensational profits in the selected issues have been available to clients during the past year.

Douglas Aircraft

Douglas, first recommended for purchase at 18, was recommended again for investment accumulation at each of the following prices: 21, 23, 24, 26, 28, 32 and 37. The recent price of 58 represents an advance of more than 300% on original purchases.

United Aircraft

United, first recommended at 12, was again recommended at 14, 17, 19 and at 22. It sold at 30 for a 250% advance.

Boeing Airplane

Boeing, originally recommended at 7, was again recommended at 11, 15 and 17. It reached 23½ for more than a 300% advance.

Will the aircraft industry again offer a leading opportunity for profit in 1936, or have its possibilities been temporarily exhausted? What new opportunities are looming on the horizon?

The next and succeeding bulletins of TECHNIGRAPHICS will point out current investment and speculative opportunities. You may test the timely and definite recommendations of TECHNIGRAPHICS for yourself by sending One Dollar for a three-weeks' trial, on both stocks and grain. Supplementary collect telegrams will be included, if requested. A 40-page book of charts of leading stocks and averages (regularly retailing at $1.50) showing daily range, volume, and performance indexes, with instructions for their use, will be sent free with your trial. [Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Jan. 11.—Volume of bond trading on the New York Stock exchange today maintained the pace of the last few days as the market absorbed a brief siege of profit taking and finished with gains predominating over losses.

Traders followed what has now become the established custom of realizing paper profits before an important Supreme court decision, such as is expected in the Tennessee Valley authority case Monday.

Activity Smaller.

A total of $10,705,000 par value of bonds was traded today. This compared with $14,405,000 last Saturday. Sales for the week aggregated $109,630,000, against $73,427,000 for the week before.

New York Central 5s closed the day up 1 point at 84½. Hudson & Manhattan 5s were up 1; Philadelphia & Reading Coal and Iron, rose 2¾; Remington Rand 5½s, gained 4⅛; Penn Dixie 6s, advanced 2, and Alleghany 5s, rose 1⅜.

In the corporate section there were few losses of more than a point.

Several Issues Decline.

Some of the bonds that finished on the down side were Warner Brothers 6s, Anaconda 4½s, American Water Works 6s, Laclede Gas 5½s, and North American debenture 5s.

United States governments were strong on a small turnover. Treasury 3¼s, due 1943, rose 10-32ds. Gains in other active issues averaged 5-32ds.

Italian bonds had a modest recovery. Australian 5s and Denmark 4½s also showed gains. The market for foreign loans was quiet and narrow.

A Reader Comments.

Life insurance is an unusually desirable type of investment for the small investor. Most life insurance salesmen are well convinced of this, but in an attempt to sell their clients they bring up so many zealous arguments that they usually lose sight of the simplicity of the fundamental argument for it.

Mrs. K. G. E. presents in simple language the simple elements that make life insurance attractive and practical. She writes to the Investors' Guide:

"Your article on 'Personal Inventory' on Dec. 29 was excellent. It is one of the most truthful and soundest articles I have ever read for the average small investor. Too bad it couldn't have covered the entire front page so every one would be sure to read it.

"The puzzling thing is how the average man with limited earning power and future will gamble with the future of his loved ones and himself and dabble in the stock market when he doesn't have the slightest idea of what or why he is buying. On the other hand, the same man will grudgingly buy a small life insurance policy after some salesman has pushed him into it and then, as you said, mentally kick himself for doing it.

"The principle of creating the estate first and then paying for it from current income should be a big inducement for the average man. Then, too, if he does not live to complete it, we find that the insurance company will complete it for him. If he should live, at old age, when he can no longer work and his family has grown up, he and his wife can enjoy an income for life from this same money.

"Where else can a man put his money and get so much for it? Think of the peace of mind and satisfaction. Then, too, when he buys life insurance he gets the diversification you speak of, for every dollar put into life insurance is divided into investments all over the country.

"We take advantage of all modern improvements, but most of us are still using the old horse and buggy when it comes to an important matter like saving our little nest egg.

"Most mistakes in life can be corrected if given enough time, but if we use the wrong plan in saving for our own old age, or our family's, that is a mistake that cannot be corrected because it is found out too late.

"If we would only think of life insurance, not as a phrase, but as a plan, a scientific device for saving money and having certain ambitions and sticking to them."

PRICES OF COTTON FUTURES CLIMB ON INFLATION TALK

Inflation talk affected both American and foreign cotton markets yesterday, but the demand flattened out later. Evening up operations by traders, who believed the Supreme court may hand down a decision in the rice milling case Monday, brought about a reaction from the best prices.

The March delivery, which had dragged Friday, showed the most strength yesterday, while the new crop months were the weakest. Closing trades in leading markets showed gains ranging from 15 to 95 cents per bale.

Spot cotton closed 5 to 25 points higher, with New Orleans at 11.60 cents, Houston 11.65 cents, Galveston 11.40 cents, and New York 11.95 cents per pound. Prices in cents per pound:

CHURCH UNITY MOVE GAINS NEW IMPETUS HERE

Both Catholics and Protestants Active.

BY THE REV. JOHN EVANS.

With the ideas of church unity prominently advocated during the last week by a primate of England, the Most Rev. William Temple, archbishop of York, both Catholic and Protestant communions are emphasizing plans looking in this direction.

THE REV. EDWARD V. DAILEY.

The Catholic octave of prayer for church unity will open in the Holy Name cathedral on Saturday, Jan. 18, the feast of St. Peter's chair, to continue through to Jan. 25, the feast of the conversion of St. Paul. An "octave" in the religious sense is an eight day observance.

Protestant churches unite today in the observance of Christian unity Sunday with sermons and special programs placing emphasis on their coöperative activities made possible by the Chicago Church federation, which, according to its president, Dr. Joshua Oden, "is an organization to unite the various branches of Christian churches in Chicago in bringing the message of the gospel to all people and to promote the application of the law of Christ to every relation of life."

Pope Recognizes Movement.

The octave of prayer for church unity originated in 1908 in the Episcopal church. The Society of the Atonement, an Episcopal monastic institution at Graymoor, N. Y., desired reunion according to the ideals of the early apostolic see at Rome. Headed by the Rev. Paul James Francis, this organization was converted to the Catholic church and the following year Pope Piux X. recognized and blessed the octave movement.

Pope Benedict XV. subsequently extended this movement to embrace the whole world, but it has been observed by Catholics in this country only since 1921, and Chicago is the only place in the middle west where it is observed. It is sponsored here by the Very Rev. Msgr. Joseph P. Morrison, rector of Holy Name cathedral, and directed by the Rev. Edward V. Dailey, recently appointed chief editorial writer of the New World, official publication of the Chicago archdiocese.

Manifesto Issued.

The recently published Church Unity Octave council, consisting of high church Episcopalians, a parallel to the present Catholic octave, again advocated union with the church of Rome. About ten days ago it issued a manifesto to 1,500 Episcopal clergy stating that since "the religious world has never acknowledged any rival to St. Peter and his successor," if and when unity does come about "it is reasonable to suppose it will center about the venerable pontiff who then occupies the see at Rome."

Confirming this manifesto, the Catholic octave will devote one sermon to the "submission of all Anglicans [or Episcopalians] to the authority of the vicar of Christ," which will be delivered on Jan. 20 by the Rev. Edwin V. Hoover, musical director of the cathedral.

Each day of the octave the sermon deals with one particular intention, or specific aim of the movement for unity, and the first will be preached by Father Dailey on "the return of other sheep to the fold of St. Peter, the one shepherd." He will also preach on Jan. 22 "that Lutherans and other Protestants of continental Europe may find their way back to the mother church."

Rev. Burke to Preach.

The Rev. Dr. Edward Burke of the chancery office, 719 North Wabash, will preach Jan. 19 on "The Return of All Oriental Separatists to Communion with the Apostolic See," and the Rev. Barry Horne of the archdiocesan mission band, Jan. 23, on "The Return to the Sacraments of All Lapsed Catholics."

The preachers for the intention on Jan. 22 "that Christians in America may become one in communion with the chair of St. Peter" and that for Jan. 24, "the conversion of the Jews," have not yet been announced.

The devotions preceding the sermon will consist of the recitation of the Rosary with special prayers for church unity, concluding with the Benediction. The intention sermon for the last evening will be delivered by the Very Rev. Msgr. James J. Horsburgh.

Dr. Le Roy Dakin of the First Baptist church, Milwaukee, will preach this morning at the First Baptist church, 935 East 50th street, exchanging pulpits with Dr. J. Perry Stackhouse, who begins today an eight day preaching mission in Milwaukee.

Sisterhood to Meet.

Olga Rosenova, dramatic interpreter, will give a reading of Sherwood Anderson's "Winterset," before the K. A. M. Sisterhood Tuesday evening, in the community house of the temple, 50th street and Drexel boulevard.

Close Harmony by Beverly 'Y' Harmonica Band

"Do, re, me," the three harmonicas exclaim in their deepest tones. "La, te, do," answer the singing strings of the mandolin and the guitar. And so a concert of the Beverly "Y" Harmonica band gets under way. The boys' next engagement is for Friday evening at the Legion hall of the Roseland post, 115th street and Indiana avenue. The five boys pictured, just 20 per cent of the band, are, from left to right, Garretson Humphreys, Robert Hooker, Phillip Di Cola, Wilfred Seehafer, and Robert Swift. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

VAST PROJECTS TO SET RECORD IN CITY, SUBURBS

Many Improvements Are Under Way.

With more than 11 million dollars in outright grants and loans from the Federal Public Works administration, the south side and south suburban cities and towns are undertaking a record program of permanent public improvements this year, according to an announcement from the Chicago PWA offices.

Schools, roads, sewage systems, fire and police stations, bridges, waterworks, and other projects have received the assistance of PWA grants of 45 per cent of their cost, and in some instances, the remainder of the cost has been provided by the taxing units in loans.

All the projects were initiated by the sponsors, local authorities such as the city, state, county, or town governments. Many of the improvements had been planned for years, but the depression delayed start of work.

Three New Schools.

The workers in the south section are benefiting from the PWA enterprises, for local labor is hired whenever it is qualified, and prevailing wage rates are paid on all projects.

The board of education is building three new schools and additions to two others on the south side under PWA loan and grant of $2,000,000 for city wide construction. Thirty-eight of the unsatisfactory portable buildings will be removed by this construction. One of the new schools, to be at 86th and Wood streets, will cost $121,726, replacing five portables. Another new building is to be erected to serve the southwest section, and will be located at 54th street and Oak Park avenue, at a cost of $134,804. Twelve portables will be supplanted.

Contracts have already been awarded for the third new building, Mount Greenwood, at 109th street and Homan avenue, which will cost $265,282, and eliminate ten portables.

Additions Are Listed.

The additions to be built on the south side are: Avalon Park branch, 86th and Creigier avenue, cost $134,804 and replacing eight portables and the O'Keeffe addition, 6940 Merrill avenue, costing $100,962 and replacing three portables. Plans for all the schools have been prepared by John C. Christianson, architect of the board of education.

Two of the five new police stations and four of the nine new fire stations to be built by the city with the aid of 45 per cent grants from PWA will be on the south side. Contracts have been let for both the fire and police stations.

The police stations will be at 3501 South Lowe avenue and 1830 West Monterey avenue, in Morgan Park. The new station on Lowe avenue replaces the old one now on Loomis street near Archer avenue, while the present Morgan Park station is now in a rented store.

A single type fire station will be biult at 10458 South Hoxie street, where an old frame building has been used for many years. Three of the fire stations will be double type, and will be located at 212 West Cermak road, replacing not only the station now there but another at Archer and State streets, which is 60 years old; 4005 South Dearborn street, replacing a frame building, and 71st street and Parnell avenue, a new site which eliminates two wooden stations, one at 69th street and Normal avenue and another at 8000 South Vincennes avenue.

Standard Type Stations.

Paul Gerhardt, city architect, has developed standard type fire and police stations, and the buildings will follow this standard. The police stations will have cells for detaining prisoners, squad rooms, office for the lieutenant, and garage for squad cars. The fire stations, of reënforced concrete, with face brick and Indiana limestone exterior, will have equipment rooms on the first floor, sleeping quarters on the second, and the latest installation of signal and other devices. The police stations cost $61,000, single fire stations $35,300, and the double stations $64,000 each.

With the aid of a PWA grant of $2,925,000, which represents 45 per cent of the cost of the large amount of paving planned, the Cook county highways department is engaged on a program of road extensions and widening within the city limits. Of the nine contracts which have been let so far, two are on the south side, and more improvements are scheduled under the project. The two streets for which contracts have been let are 76th street from Racine avenue to Vincennes avenue, to cost $141,844, and 63d street from the Indiana Harbor railroad to Austin avenue, which wil cost $87,999.

Mammoth Sewage Works.

Of major importance to the south side also is the sewer and disposal plant construction of the sanitary district, already being carried out at a cost of $175,000,000, of which $59,000,000 is from WPA in the form of a loan and grant. The Calumet disposal plant is already in operation, elminating much of the pollution in the southeast section, and the huge new Stickney plant is expected to

PARK EMPLOYES COMPLETE PLANS FOR FIRST PARTY

A "perfect '36," in the person of Miss Arlene Causey who last summer won the All Chicago Parks Bathing Beauty contest, will emerge at midnight from between the layers of a huge birthday cake to climax the Chicago Parks Goodfellowship club's first party, to be held on Saturday evening at the Medinah Michigan Avenue club.

FRED L. BOISSY.

Introduced by Allen Henckel, Miss Causey's arrival will be the signal for the New Year's celebration and confetti snowball battle that will conclude the festivities. The program will begin at 8:30 o'clock and will include supper, a floor show and dancing.

The floor show, to be presented by Fred L. Boissey, 8535 Drexel avenue, as master of ceremonies, will include talent recruited from the neighborhood parks, radio, and stage. Among the amateurs to appear are the Chicago Park District Legion Post drill team, the Chicago Police quartet, and Grace Lerch's dance ensemble from Gage park.

J. W. Higgins' WPA vaudeville troupe will headline the professionals. Others are Victor Moore and William Gaxton of "Anything Goes," and Tom, Dick and Harry of W-G-N.

MERCY FEDERATION WILL HOLD ANNUAL HOMECOMING SUNDAY

The annual homecoming of the Mercy federation, an organization of graduates of local schools conducted by the Sisters of Mercy, is to be held next Sunday afternoon at Mercy High school, 8100 Prairie avenue. The program will open at 1 o'clock and continue until 6 o'clock.

MISS GERTRUDE M. COOGAN.

One o'clock, reception for members, their guests and sisters of the 12 schools in the federation; 3 o'clock, solemn benediction of the blessed sacrament in the high school chapel; 3:30 o'clock, business meeting and annual election of officers; 4:30 o'clock, social program, and 5 o'clock, tea.

The speaker of the day will be Miss Gertrude M. Coogan, economic analyst and author.

I. C. C. TO CONDUCT HEARINGS ON NEW TRANSIT SERVICE

Public hearings on several proposals to expand transportation services provided by the Chicago Surface lines, the Chicago Motor Coach company, and the Chicago Rapid Transit lines in various sections of the south side are scheduled for Tuesday morning and afternoon before the Illinois Commerce commission in its offices at 1 North La Salle street.

Those propositions on Tuesday's schedule are: A proposal to establish street car feeder bus lines on 83d street, between Green Bay and South Chicago avenues; on Jeffery avenue, between South Chicago avenue and 67th street; on Yates and Oglesby avenues, between 67th and 95th streets; on Crawford avenue, between 31st and 71st streets, and on Cicero and Laramie avenues along a staggered route extending both ways from Madison street.

The Chicago Rapid Transit company has an application on file to supply bus service in Oakland, Kenwood, Hyde Park, Woodlawn, and South Shore by operating a line starting at its Kenwood terminus at 41st street and Lake Park avenue and ending at 79th street and Colfax avenue, and another to serve communities along Loomis boulevard and connecting with east and west branches of the lines.

Complaints have been lodged against the street car and bus lines requesting service on Woodlawn avenue in Hyde Park and Woodlawn and the bus company has filed an application to provide express service on Leif Ericksen drive. The bus company also has been cited by residents in South Shore to provide service on Jeffery avenue.

INCUMBENT OFFICERS OF FEDERATED CIVIC CLUBS KEEP POSTS

All present officers of the South Side Federation of Improvement associations have been reëlected, Cedric Allan Shantz, secretary, announced last week. They will be formally installed at a meeting Tuesday evening in the community room of the Chatfield bank building, 7936 Cottage Grove avenue.

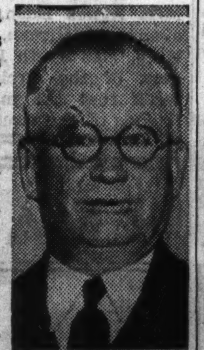
T. A. ARNOLD. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

Besides Mr. Shantz the officers are: President, T. A. Arnold; vice president, William Prieb; treasurer, John Rietz. Ralph O. Butz is legal counsel. William R. Wendland, a past president, and F. A. Moore, Guy A. Skinner, and Thomas Chilton form the board of directors. Mr. Prieb is chairman.

Municipal Court Judge Matthew D. Hartigan will conduct the installation.

CITIZENS ASKED TO KEEP WALKS CLEAR OF SNOW

South siders were asked last week by the South Area council, an advisory group of neighborhood women's clubs and business men's organizations affiliated with the Chicago Motor club, to "pitch in" and help the city during the winter months by aiding in snow removal. Lack of funds and equipment makes it impossible for the city to carry on a complete program, the council observed, and "in the interest of public safety we ask the people to help."



H. L. DAVENPORT. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

Property owners are asked to pledge themselves to keep the sidewalks in front of their homes and business property clear of snow to prevent formation of ice, and to clear away the snow and refuse from sewer entrances to allow proper drainage when the snow starts to melt. Owners of property at intersections also are asked to sprinkle sand or cinders on the streets.

"It is manifestly impossible for the city to accomplish this task with the money and equipment at hand," said Homer L. Davenport, chairman of the council.

Mrs. Bargelt's Articles Now in Metropolitan Section

Beginning today Louise Bargelt's articles on Home Building and Home Remodeling will appear in the Metropolitan section. These articles include all phases of home construction and modernization work. They present examples of new homes which have been recently completed, and reveal the trend in materials, equipment, and construction. They show from time to time proposed renderings of modern dwellings, the work of recognized architects, skilled in home design and building. They also offer many photographs of all types of modernization, "Before and After" pictures of exteriors and interiors which have been brought up to 1936 standards. Makers of building materials and equipment have been spending days and nights in their laboratories these last four years and are offering a limitless number of improvements in durability, safety, beauty, and convenience. The building field never offered greater opportunities along every front, and the homes which prospective owners can build or buy this next year, or the materials and workmanship with which they can modernize existing homes are the finest for the money that have ever been on the market. For information on building new homes or rejuvenating old ones, address Louise Bargelt, Home Builders' Editor, the Chicago Tribune.

273 SOUTH SIDE CADETS PICKED TO RECEIVE MEDALS

First Tribune Awards Are Presented at Calumet.

Two hundred seventy-three south side high school reserve officers training corps cadets have been named to receive medals being awarded by THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE for outstanding efficiency. Thirty of the Calumet unit were among those honored this last week at a series of colorful programs at 11 schools.

Friday 13 Kelly students will be presented with medals and next week members of the nine remaining schools will receive their awards. These include Fenger, Morgan Park, Tilden Tech, Lindblom, Bowen, Hyde Park, and New Phillips, 30 each, and ten to Englewood and Harper.

Martial music by R. O. T. C. bands and stirring speeches made impressive ceremonies of the medal presentations last week at Senn, Lake View, Roosevelt, Schurz, Lane Tech, Von Steuben, Foreman, Sullivan, Amundsen, and Calumet High schools.

Ceremony at Calumet.

At Calumet presentation of the awards was made by Phil Maxwell representing THE TRIBUNE, before an assembly of the entire student body. There was a special program which included presentation of letters to members of the football team, members of the All-Calumet Civic league, the band, the Cal Crier, school newspaper, drama club, students for general service as hall guards or ushers, the student library staf, members of the R. O. T. C. rifle team, and outstanding members of the music club and orchestra.

Silver, first year, Edward Maynard, Alex Olek, Richard Platkus, Avery Hein, and Joseph Stock, and second year, Raymond Wickman, transfer student.

Included in the awards to be made this week are 140 to cadets of west side schools and 12 to Waller, besides those to Kelly. Presentation of medals on the west side will be made as follows: 30 to Austin, Marshall, Crane Tech, and Harrison Tech, and 10 to McKinley.

In presenting the medals Capt. Corpening said of R. O. T. C. training: "It breeds good fellowship and more respect for one's self than any other activity. Besides that, it smooths off the rough edges of character and develops poise, mental balance, and self-confidence."

It is upon the basis of these beliefs that THE TRIBUNE is seeking to encourage high school students to enroll in military training classes and thus promote the growth of the R. O. T. C. in Chicago.

Record Enrollment This Year.

This semester's enrollment of 8,034 is the largest in the 3 years' existence of the corps and shows the growing interest in military training. This fall 11 additional units were established, making a total of 28. In the new units 2,186 already have enrolled and this figure will double before full strength is reached, according to Col. William F. Morrison, head of the R. O. T. C. department of Chicago high schools.

Ten cadets in each of the new corps, Englewood, Kelly, and Harper of the south side, will receive medals. In the other units honors will be bestowed upon 30, ten each to cadets in their first, second, and third year of military training, respectively.

As a climax to the year's activity, a review of the entire brigade, by civil and military notables will be held in May in Soldiers' field. At that time the best drilled unit of the city, and the best of the newly established will be awarded a stand of colors including an American and a regimental flag. Presentation of medals to the most proficient cadets also will be made.

DIRECT MORGAN PARK ACADEMY R.O.T.C.

IT'S DRAMA WEEK FOR HIRSCH HIGH STUDENT ACTORS

Three Plays Scheduled for Two Night Run.

Wednesday and Friday of this week might well be designated at Hirsch High school as "Drama days," because the Hirsch Masquers have chosen the afternoons and evenings of those days to present their annual dramatic program. Three players are on the program, the afternoon performances of which will be especially for the student body and those in the evening for parents and alumni. Friday evening has been designated as "Alumni night," and will be followed by a party.

The bill of fare offers "Journey's End," the famous war play; "The Knave of Hearts," a light comedy piece, and "A Happy Journey from Camden to Trenton," a modern drama played without scenery. The plays were chosen by Miss Sarah Niederman, dramatics director, for their variety of expression and methods of staging.

Scenery Made Specially.

"Journey's End," which has an all-male cast, presented something of a problem, both in direction and staging. Scenery makers have been busy for more than a month constructing the special sets.

Those who will take part are Benton Burns, Jack Clinkman, Jack Davenport, Robert Davis, William Jackson, William Morey, Douglas Morse, Jack Rollins, and Samuel Zimmerman.

"The Knave of Hearts," described as the "lightest of light drama," tells the story of how the knave came to steal the queen's tarts. The cast is composed of Sidney Marco, Howard Tausig, Miss Paggy McClurg, Benton Burns, William Morey, Francis Wallertz, Miles Standish, Howell Jones, Carl Lindstrom, Miss Jeanne Hall, Miss Geraldine Grund, Miss Martha Pulling, Miss Rena Panteliot, Miss Jean Peterson, Miss Lois Gross, Miss Evarose Karpen, George Huntley, William Riley, Jack Davenport, Jack Hizer, and Patrick McManus.

No Minor Characters.

"A Happy Journey from Camden to Trenton," a play whose outstanding characteristic is said to be a total lack of minor characters, humorous incidents, and scenery, will have a cast of six players. They are George Wright, Miss Katherine Vick, Henry Wells, Miss Anne Weiner, Miss Jean Skeeles, and Ray Behrends.

The plays have been in rehersal since September. A special stage crew, organized and trained by "Grundy" MacGavock, will erect the scenery. Its members include Wesly Freishlag, Walter Kneisler, Albert Block, James Reid, James Austin, Richard Winter, James Lund, Edward Forbes, Harold Le Boy, and Jerry Goldenberg.

Splash Party.

The R-Z Brandeis chapter of Avukah will be hosts at a splash party and dance Wednesday evening at George Williams college, 53d street and Drexel avenue.

BUREAU WOULD MAKE COLLEGE OF HIGH SCHOOL

Equipping Masses for Life Is Objective.

Development of the high school as the ordinary student's college is the objective of a newly organized department of the board of education, the Research bureau, created by William J. Bogan, superintendent of schools. The findings of the bureau will be applied in the schools during the coming semester.

DR. WILLIAM H. JOHNSON.

The director of the bureau is Dr. William H. Johnson, assistant superintendent of schools, professor in the education department of Loyola university, and graduate of the University of Chicago and Northwestern university. The bureau, already in operation, is conducting a series of studies in the high schools to determine the weak points of the educational system in this modern light, analyze them for cause, and determine procedures to gain the practical objective.

Support of this work is found in a statement by A. W. Clevenger, professor of education at the University of Illinois and chairman of the Illinois State committee of the North Central Association of Secondary Schools and Colleges.

Professor Clevenger says: "High schools are the colleges of the common people. They are no longer to be regarded as preparatory institutions but should be organized to meet the needs and interests of pupils not likely to continue their organized training beyond the high school."

Aid for Backward Readers.

In speaking of his research program Dr. Johnson says: "The task we have before us is a difficult but obviously practical one. To be able to adjust himself to modern life a student should receive help to be more adequately prepared to train himself along specialized lines.

"To this end it is our intention to set up studies and projects in the various high schools. These studies should lead to definite improvement in educational procedures and administration. Our work is not to be academic research for its own sake.

"In spite of the large number of students to be accomodated," Dr. Johnson continues, "We must undertake an active consideration of individual differences. This fact underlies all of our work. Separate studies now being made include tests of the reading ability of freshman students and remedial measures for backward readers; work on the technique of study; causes of failure and its prevention; the relation of health to educational efficiency; widening of the scope of industrial and household art departments, and a presentation of the basic points of legal procedure."

Eight Schools Making Studies.

Schools in which individual studies are being made are Crane, Amundsen, Von Steuben, Austin, Englewood, Calumet, Steinmetz, and Wells. Work at Von Steuben is on reading tests and study methods; Crane on social science, failure studies, and individual differences in mathematics; Steinmetz on reading tests, study methods, and accident prevention and at Wells on vocabulary requirements of children of foreign born parents.

At Amundsen studies are being made on foreign language instruction; Austin on reading tests and foreign language instruction; Englewood on groupings by capacity in mathematics classes and advanced music study, and at Calumet on educational guidance and the relation of health to study.

PULLMAN HOMES OF 50 YEARS AGO ARE MODERNIZED

2 Units Transformed by Improvements.

Remodeling of two of the half century old houses in the Pullman section into modern type residences, was hailed last week in the far south side as the first step in a move to modernize the whole community.

The remodeled structures, at 11258 and 11260 Stephenson avenue, built in 1880 by the late George M. Pullman, founder of the Pullman Car company, as homes for his employés, were thrown open last week for inspection as examples of what can be accomplished by present day architects and contractors. The work was financed through the Federal Housing administration by the Pullman Trust and Savings bank, whose trust department owns one of the homes.

Kitchens Are Modernized.

Both the exteriors and interiors of the two homes have been done over and the exterior has been trimmed in such fashion that instead of seeming what they are, two units in a long row, they now resemble separate dwellings. Inside the walls have been redecorated with new materials in light colors, floors laid with Pullman carpeting and kitchenettes constructed of processed steel and porcelain. Electric refrigerators and stoves and fitted cabinets have been installed in each home.

"These homes are peculiarly adapted to modernization," says Bartholomew O'Toole, president of the Pullman bank. "The late Mr. Pullman spared no expense in their construction. Only the best materials were used, and consequently contractors encountered few instances where replacement was necessary. In addition the architect who planned them made the most of his opportunities. There is no waste space and because of this the modernization work was accomplished at surprisingly small cost."

Cost of Upkeep Small.

Owned originally by the Pullman company, the homes, built in long rows along the streets east of Cottage Grove avenue in the territory north of 115th street were sold to private owners in 1907. Most of them are still in very good condition, Mr. Bartholomew O'Toole says. The latter is the authority for the statement that the owners enjoy low upkeep costs.

HIGHLIGHTS OF A BUSY WEEK IN RADIO CIRCLES

More Pet Peeves and Perfume Presented.

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

Highlights of a fairly busy week:

Encountering Samuel Insull on the top of the Opera building shooing away reporters who sought the lowdown on his new low-power radio network. [This week Mr. Insull is busy shooing away radio job seekers who are flocking there in droves.]

Meeting Eddie Cantor and Parkyakakas talking it over with a policeman on Michigan avenue, New Year's morning when most of the city was still asleep. However one may feel about Eddie's radio program you can't help liking him a lot personally. Frank and friendly and not what New York critics would have you believe.

Meeting glamorous Gladys Swarthout and her talented husband, Frank Chapman. There are no lovelier ladies in radio than Miss Swarthout. She has charm and chic. Those dressmakers who included her among the ten best gowned women in the nation knew their business. [Miss Swarthout revealed that she doesn't believe Lily Pons is married to Andre Kostelanetz despite all the published reports. Lily and Gladys are fast friends and Lily denies it.] Miss Swarthout is one of the most obliging and considerate radio singers we have ever seen face a microphone.

Luncheon with Alec Templeton and hearing him play everything from Bach to Ravel. He is the most amazing figure we have encountered in radio. His blindness actually seems to have enhanced his brilliance. He is a real wonder.

Witnessing George Burns and Gracie Allen in rehearsal. Gracie gets as much kick out of the lines as you do—she hears them for the first time early Wednesday mornings.

PEEVES AND PERFUME

"Peeves and Perfume" letters have been rolling in the last week. Excerpts from several which seem to be of general interest appear below. Many others contain illuminating suggestions. Sorry that we can't print all or reply to them.

* *

A NOTE FROM EDDIE.

I am deeply appreciative of the manner in which you handled our interview in Chicago. If you should come to New York don't fail to look me up.

EDDIE CANTOR.

REGARDING MR. HUSING.

Just finished your open letter in today's TRIBUNE. It's a joy to know there are people in this game who can and will say what they think . . . and say it so darned well.

BESS JOHNSON, Chicago.

* *

I wish you could have heard the many comments I heard yesterday and today on your open letter to Ted Husing. It was without question the most potently to the point open letter that I've ever read.

IREENE WICKER, Chicago.

Editor's note—Miss Wicker, as everybody must know by now, is the Singing Lady of W-G-N and NBC.

* *

Attaboy. When these underschooled cluck announcers stick their necks out—let 'em have it on their impervious skulls. If it wasn't for you fellows we would certainly be fed a lot of pishwish, so keep on, and on, and on.

BERT B. BARRY, Chicago.

A PRONOUNCEMENT.

JULIUS BUDA, Chicago.

FROM A RADIO EDITOR.

You asked for pet peeves. How about this one: Wayne King's music, which you Chicagoans apparently think is tops, but which I think is the payoff as far as dreariness and monotony are concerned. . . . And then there's Kay Kyser. I can't go for his week-kneed music. And we westerners are all kicking because we can't hear Jack Hylton.

HERB CAEN,
Radio Editor Sacramento [Cal.] Union.

Editor's note—We do like them, brother. Also some of your Californians—Meredith Willson, Raymond Paige, among them.

WHOOPS FOR HYLTON.

I have just had a most pleasurable hour listening to those delightful musicians—Jack Hylton's troupe. What an agreeable surprise to find among so much trash one must tune out these days, a group catering to today's demand for "light stuff" in such a sincere fashion, yet with the readily discernible keen training, artistry, and musicianship of these Britishers.

I. L. STROBEN, Chicago.

Editor's note—But don't forget, Jack Hylton himself admits that he owes a measure of credit to the 21 Chicago men who make up his orchestra. The featured soloists and entertainers he brought with him.

* *

WHEN BORN, YOU'RE DONE FOR.

To us, Snoonie is the high, bright spot on Fred Waring's program. If you don't like Snoonie, you were born without a real sense of humor. I wish that we, the Peeves, could have our column to ourselves without your comments.

ALL RIGHT, ALL RIGHT!

My grateful thanks to you for the many kindnesses you have extended to my amateurs and to me this last year.

MAJ. EDWARD BOWES, New York City.

REGARDING BEAUTIFUL HANDS.

My pet peeves are these announcers and women who claim you can have beautiful hands—also younger hands—by using certain flakes and soap every day of the week. I have yet to find a woman who does all her own housework with beautiful hands who does not use some kind of a lotion or rubber gloves. No soap is going to keep [make] your hands beautiful if they are old.

MRS. ANN J. PIERCE, Chicago.

AGAINST ALIEN ENTERTAINERS.

My pet peeve is having alien singers and radio performers filling our radio hours as well as our movies. I and several of my friends have agreed among ourselves not to patronize firms that employ foreign artists. . . . A large sized bouquet to Henry Burr, please.

MARGARET E. PICKARD, Chicago.

RESENTMENT, CONVICTION, GRATITUDE.

Registered by this listener: Well founded resentment at high pressure, sales shouting announcer. Astonishment that anyone as pretty as Magda Neeld could have such a thoroughly ———* voice. Disgust that Fred Waring's fine glee club and the incomparable voice of Stuart Churchill must be interrupted by an inanity called Snoonie. The conviction that Alec Templeton is a genius. Gratitude for General Motors, Ford, and the Philadelphia symphonies, Nelson Eddy's great voice, and Milton Cross' restraint in announcing.

MARGARET J. McGILL, La Grange, Ill.

*Libelous adjective deleted. Miss Neeld has been singing though ill recently, disobeying her physician. However Miss McGill feels about you, Miss Neeld, I know many a person who has not missed a single one of your songs since you came to America.

"LUCKY GIRL" CHOSEN

With Leopold Stokowski as guest conductor and Mme. Enid Szantho, Hungarian contralto of the Vienna opera, as soloist, one of the most notable of the series of the G. M. concerts will be broadcast over WMAQ-NBC from 9:00 to 10:00 tonight. Mme. Szantho recently arrived for the first time in this country after three notable years at Bayreuth.

The program will open with "Ein Feste Burg," "Come Sweet Death," "Aria" and "Fugue in G Minor," all by Bach. Mme Szantho will sing the "Ombra Mai Fu" from the Handel opera, "Xerxes."

The orchestra will open the second half of the hour with the "Rhumba" by McDonald. Mme. Szantho will resume her program with the aria from Saint-Saëns' opera, "Samson and Delilah,"—"Mon Coeur Souvre A Ta Voix" and Wagner's song of grief, "Schmerzen."

FORMER MIDWAY CO-ED WINS TEST FOR AIR STARDOM

In an audition more like that for a Hollywood picture than for a radio show 21 beautiful Chicago actresses assembled the other day for the casting of "Lucky Girl," new drama to be presented over W-G-N Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday at noon starting next Tuesday.

Blair Walliser, author of numerous previous shows on W-G-N, NBC, and CBS, will write and direct the new show. "Lucky Girl" is the story of a small town beauty who skyrockets to fame via a beauty contest.

Catherine Campbell is a former co-ed, having won a degree at the University of Chicago, where she distinguished herself in dramatics and class activities. Her supporting cast includes Ethel Hurley, William Wright, Ed Prentiss, John Deering, Alice Hill, Guila Adams, and Charles Calvert.

'CINDERELLA' IS NEWEST W-G-N MORNING DRAMA

In "Broadway Cinderella," heard every week day morning at 10:45 o'clock over W-G-N and the Mutual network, every young woman, every mother, will find a dramatization of bits of her own life and experiences. A true-to-life picture of real people, and especially of a young girl who has only talent and perseverance to aid her, it tells a story that is at once new and familiar to women everywhere.

Just as its story is both new and old, "Broadway Cinderella" employs a new treatment of the old combination of music and drama. Unlike the average musical dramatic show, in this program the music is used as a major feature in logical complement to the plot.

The story is principally that of Hope Carter, an orphan, who learned, upon leaving school, that she is unjustly held responsible for a debt of $26,000. Rather than accept an offer of a thousand dollars in cash and cancelation of the debt if she will sign a certain paper, she has come to New York to take vocal lessons and earn money to pay the debt. So far she has refused the offer. Now, with only a few dollars left and no job, she is living at a boarding house off 42d street, where she meets Larry Burton, former cowpuncher, who is also penniless.

To Rosemary Dillon, who plays the part of Hope Carter, "Broadway Cinderella" may mean her big chance, just as Hope is looking for hers. A young singer from Dayton, O., Miss Dillon is almost unknown to the radio public, yet she was given the part by unanimous vote after exhaustive auditions in which 107 other singers were heard.

Eddie Dean, who plays the part of Larry Burton, a Texan, has had somewhat more radio experience. For these two ambitious young people the story of Cinderella may indeed come true if they become as popular with the radio audience as the sponsors of "Broadway Cinderella" think they will.

Other members of the cast include Lee Bennett, cast as Jimmie Dale, band leader and singer; Hazel Sopheide as Lovely Tremaine, keeper of an actor's boarding house; Virginia Lee as Kitty La Tour, and the show is directed by Tiny Stowe, who produced the Gold Medal Minstrels at the same hour for the sponsor that has the new show.

An orchestra, directed by William Fantozzi, features both symphonic and popular music and the music for the show is arranged by Beasely Smith from Nashville, Tenn.

Stage Stars on W-G-N Today

Billy Gaxton (lower left), Irene Delroy, and Victor Moore, headliners from the stage success, "Anything Goes," who will appear on Mayor Kelly's "Safety Program" over W-G-N at 3 o'clock this afternoon.

MUSICAL COMEDY STARS IN SAFETY PROGRAM TODAY

All of the principals of the great musical comedy hit "Anything Goes," currently playing at The Grand Opera house, and Mayor Edward J. Kelly will appear on a special "Keep Chicago Safe" program on W-G-N this afternoon from 3 to 3:30 o'clock. The program is being presented in the interest of keeping trafic accidents to a minimum in 1936.

Included in the roster of stars who will appear on the program are Victor Moore and Billy Gaxton, comedians of the stage show; Miss Vivian Vance, the torch singer, and Miss Irene Delroy, the prima donna of the production. Mr. Moore and Mr. Gaxton will present an original sketch while Miss Vance and Miss Delroy will offer several songs. The Foursome also will be heard in several selections.

Harold Stokes and the W-G-N Dance orchestra will supply the music for the program while George W. Fleming, chairman of the "Keep Chicago Safe" commission and Mayor Kelly will be heard in short addresses.

This will be one of the few Chicago radio appearances for Mr. Gaxton and Mr. Moore. Miss Vance, The Foursome and Miss Delroy are well known on the airlanes.

'NOTHING BUT TRUTH' WITH ALEX M'QUEEN ON W-G-N TOMORROW

"Nothing but the Truth," starring Alexander McQueen and featuring Tenor William Miller and the two piano team, Freddy Witmer and Alice Blue will open a three a week program over W-G-N tomorrow at 10:15 a. m. The program will be on Mondays, Wednesday, and Fridays at the same time.

McQueen is heard at present on a west coast CBS network. Not depending on news of the day but on a vast store of information and his unusual library, a feature of which is a collection of 200 dictionaries, McQueen will present odd facts on his broadcasts.

Boynton on Russell.

"Religion and Science" by Bertrand Russell will be reviewed by Prof. Percy H. Boynton of the University of Chicago on his "Book Talk" over W-G-N at 7 tonight.

WILL OSBORNE TO OPEN ON W-G-N, AT BLACKHAWK

Featuring a six instrument brass section of three trombones and three trumpets, a departure in dance band instrumentation, Will Osborne will open at the Blackhawk and on W-G-N and the Mutual Broadcasting system next Tuesday.

Will Osborne is noted for many orchestra innovations, starting with the whispering orchestra and croon style of music, which he helped introduce to radio, and with the development of a large entertainment unit.

Featured over all three networks on commercial programs, starred in movie shorts, headlined on the stage throughout the country, Osborne has a national reputation for his entertainment and the personalities he has brought into the limelight.

Does This Picture Look Like A Woman of 60?

Edna Wallace Hopper, Who at Past Sixty Has the Skin of a Girl, Tells How She Does It. Coupon Brings Tube Free.

Look at my picture. Do I look like a woman past 60? People can't believe it, but I am. Boys scarcely above college age often try to flirt with me. I've been booked from one theatre to another as "The One Woman in the World Who Never Grew Old." At a grandmother's age I still enjoy the thrills of youth.

Now, let me tell you how I do it. Then accept, Free, as a gift, a trial tube of the method I use. Follow it and I promise if you're 50, you'll look 40. If you're 40, you'll look 30. If you're 30, you'll gain back the skin of eighteen. Women I've given it to call it a miracle—say it takes 10 years from the face in 10 minutes!

It is the discovery of a Famous French Scientist, who startled the cosmetic world by discovering that the Oils of Youth could be artificially re-supplied to the skin of fading women. He found that after 25 most women were deficient in certain youth oils. Oils that kept the skin free of age lines and wrinkles. And then, by a notable scientific discovery, he found a way to re-supply the skin daily with these oils.

This method puts those oils back in your skin every day. Without them you are old. With them you are young—alluring, charming.

All you do is smear it on your face like a cold cream. But, don't rub it off. Let it stay on. Then watch! Your skin will absorb every bit of it—literally drink in the youth oils it contains. It's one of the most amazing demonstrations in scientific youth restoration known. Lines and hollow places soon go. You look years younger the first treatment. Youth and allure come back. Look at me. At over 60—I am living proof.

Edna Wallace Hopper

The method is called Edna Wallace Hopper's Special Restorative Cream. You can get it at any drug or department store. Or mail coupon for free trial tube. Try it. It may give your life a new meaning.

DETAIL LENDS AUTHENTICITY TO PERIOD HOUSE

BY LOUISE BARGELT.

THIS new home in Lake Forest, just completed this month, is in the Cape Cod style. The exterior walls of its main portion are of stone, while the wings are of wood, painted a gleaming white, and, that tradition may be followed closely, the roof is of hand-split shakes.

The wealth of finely executed detail lends interest and beauty to the house. No touch, it would seem, has been forgotten. We even see the spreading peacock gate with its James river lanterns and a closely spaced picket fence. In fact, at Bremo, in Virginia, lanterns of the identical type were used in one of Thomas Jefferson's homes.

The entrance door is of the divided Dutch type. Through it one enters a hall carried out in the red, white, and blue colors of the Continental army. As one of the photographs shows, the hall leads directly through the center chimney of the house. Old fisher folk in bygone days huddled under such protecting chimneys as this in times of storm.

Maps Give Colorful Walls.

The deep cobalt blue of the sea is reflected on the dining room walls, with a twenty-four inch white dado and woodwork. The ceiling here is a soft straw shade. The library can be reached from this room or from the main hall. In this book room, the dado is a hunter's green and the ceiling yellow, while the wall flaunts maps; these make a striking marquetry of color and design.

An interesting feature of this library is that the bookstalls swing away from the walls and give access to two large bed closets for the storage of hidden beds. Thus in an emergency the library becomes a guest room, with the first floor bath in close proximity to it. This bath might also be called the poudre room of the home, since it is easily reached from the reception hall. It is a striking little room, with its chartreuse walls reflected in the black lacker ceiling and its floor of shining, synthetic marble.

In the living room, which is modeled after a well known room in the American wing of the Metropolitan museum, the harth is of white washed stone, in a custom which still prevails in Cape Cod. The room is finished in northern white pine, painted.

Kitchen in Red, White, and Blue.

The kitchen is done in red, white, and blue again. Its cases are arranged to afford maximum of service. Its floors are of rubber tile. The fact that a small hall leads from the kitchen to the maid's room and bath eliminates the expense of an extra flight of stairs at the rear. A service door from the kitchen permits an easy serving of breakfast or luncheons on the large porch opening from the dining room.

A ship's rail balustrade on the stairs to the second floor gives a nautical air to the stairway. On the upper floor are three bedrooms and two baths. One of the baths is carried out in a warm mahogany brown and white. The auxiliary bath is done in Dubonnet, with an old rose and white chevron floor.

The house and garage are alike insulated with a heavy blanket of a fill material. The large two car garage is well plastered. It may be turned into a children's playroom when the weather is bad.

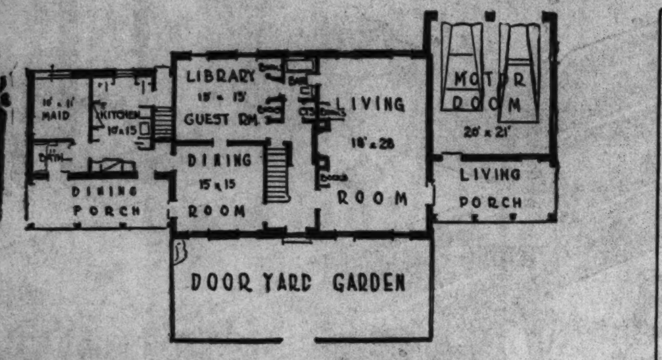
In the basement there has been installed a storage vault with a temperature suited to the storage of fur garments. There is also a large recreation room with a great stone fireplace, a room spacious enough to house billiard and ping pong tables.

The entire house is air conditioned. It has a modern heating system, oil fueled.

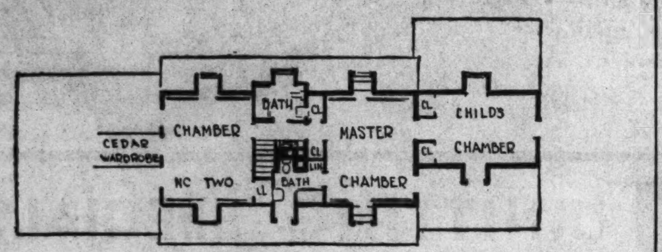
Mrs. Bargelt will speak over W-G-N next Wednesday at 2:15 p. m.

NEW ENGLAND TRANSPLANTED TO CHICAGOLAND

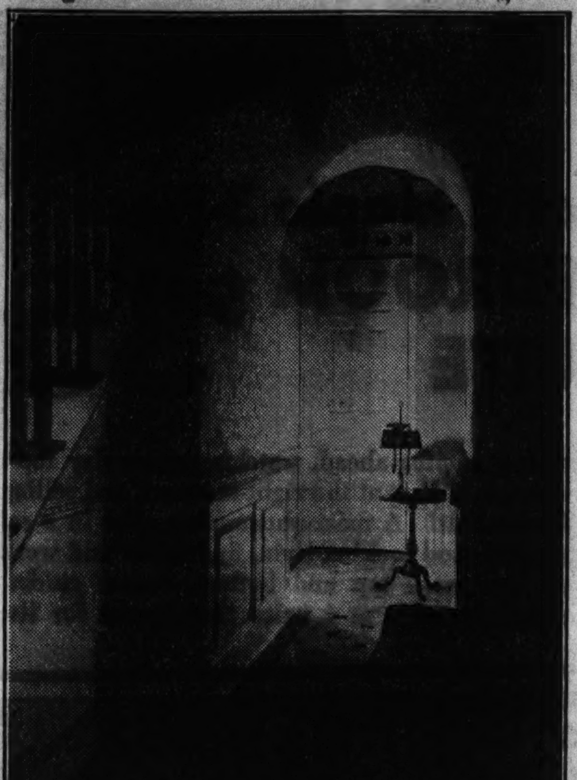
An exterior view of the new home of Marshall Campbell on Green Bay road, Lake Forest, Ill. It is in the colonial Cape Cod spirit, with roof of hand-split shakes. Designed by the architectural office of Jerome Robert Cerny, Inc., Lake Forest.



The first floor plan of the house shows its large living room, with porch at right, the dining room with porch at left, and terraced spaces at the back. There is a combination library and guest room, with bath, and also maid's bedroom and bath directly off the kitchen.



The second floor plan of the Campbell house includes three sizable bedrooms, two baths, and a cedar room. Access to the second floor is up an easy flight of stairs with a ship's rail balustrade. All the bedrooms have ventilation on three sides and abundant closet, blanket, and linen space. Note the cedar wardrobe.



In this interior hall, which is executed in the colors of the Continental army, one walks through the center chimney of the house! A tradition of old Cape Cod houses, found here intact. Floor is of white flagging.

A detailed glimpse of the closely spaced picket fence and peacock gate. Beyond is an intimate dooryard garden. All are in the faithful style of homes in Martha's Vineyard and Wood's Hole on Cape Cod. Note lanterns on each side of gate.

Bowen High Homemaking Classes to Show Work

SOUTH SIDE GETS MILLIONS IN U. S. BUILDING FUNDS

City and Suburbs Share in Vast Program.

Access to the south and southwest sides wil be greatly improved by the construction of the Ashland avenue bridge over the west fork of the south branch of the Chicago river, where a serious bottleneck now exists. The grant for this bridge has been increased by PWA to $562,500 because of the need for this improvement. The new bridge, a doubleleaf bascule type with a span of 183 feet, will have two 28 foot 6 inch roadways, and with its approaches will end the jamming caused by cars making a left turn through heavy trafic and across the street car line.

Another New Bridge.

Stil another important south side PWA bridge is that at Torrence avenue near the Ford Motor plant, where a modern vertical lift bridge is now under construction with the aid of a PWA grant of $472,500. The old bridge has been moved to the west so that there is no interruption to the heavy flow of trafic on this important gateway to the south side of the city. The Torrence avenue bridge also has an important part in improvement and development of the Calumet river as part of Lake Calumet harbor and has been so designed that it will not interfere with the largest ships which will use the harbor.

In Joliet two old bridges built in 1896 and designed for horse drawn trafic of the time but now on main roads with heavy trafic which has forced the closing of one of the bridges and the condemnation of the other will be replaced by two-span concrete bridges, one at Miller avenue and another at Second avenue. The cost of the new bridges will be $73,000 of which PWA made a grant of $32,000.

A grant of $36,000 also was made to Joliet for improvements in four small parks. A one story bath house of modernistic design, constructed of concrete, will be built at Michigan beach to provide dressing rooms and showers for men and women, rest rooms, and public lounge room.

Other Park Prospects.

A combination garage, assembly office and comfort station building will be built on the Woodruff golf course, providing dressing and shower rooms, a garage space, and assembly office. An equipment and machine shop is to be built at Pilcher park, and a work and carpenter's building is scheduled for Birdhaven park.

Lansing is building a new Imhoff sewage disposal plant at a cost of $48,500 of which $17,500 is a PWA grant. The same town is also improving its water supply system by making a connection with the Hammond mains, and building a 500,000 gallon concrete storage reservoir and a pumping station, a project which received a $17,571 grant.

A loan of $25,000 and grant of $20,864 are enabling Summit to modernize its water system, with the addition of new mains, cleaning of some old mains, and elimination of leakage which has caused large losses.

At South Holland the school board is moving the present school about 100 feet, and remodeling and enlarging it, the total cost being $30,000, of which $13,909 was a WPA grant.

Bradley Sewage System.

The town of Bradley is extending and improving its waterworks and sewage system. The water storage tank, which was inadequate and close to condemnation, will be replaced by a 60,000 gallon elevated steel tank and a 54,000 gallon concrete reservoir. Chlorinating apparatus also will be installed. To end the flooding of basements in storms, extensions will be made to the sewer system. A loan of $45,000 and a grant of $36,818 was made to Bradley for the work.

PWA housing division has awarded contracts for the foundation of its $3,250,000 low rent housing project just south of Trumbull park, at Oglesby avenue and 105th street, which will provide modern housing for workers in the Calumet region at rents comparable to those they are now paying. This development which will have apartments for 466 families, will be completed before the end of the year.

Two large projects are underway in Kankakee, a sewer system and treatment plant being built by the city with a loan and grant of $337,330, and the state having a $553,000 addition to the Kankakee State hospital underway, assisted by a $248,844 grant. An intercepting sewer is being built parallel to the Kankakee river and a primary treatment plant for sewage is to be built in the northwest section of the city, connecting with all main and lateral sewers and having provision for storm overflow.

The state hospital has under construction a new diagnostic building and two ward buildings with connecting dining halls.

Expansion of Hospital.

At Manteno a total of $1,669,815 was granted on the large expansion program of the state for the Manteno State hospital, which will cost $3,710,000. Forty buildings will be added to the present institution for insane, including 26 ward buildings which attached dining halls, a tuberculosis hospital, eight cottages for resident doctors, a diagnostic building, an assembly hall for patients, and various minor buildings.

Wilmington is modernizing its grade school and gymnasium and adding a two story addition, at a cost of $97,000, of which $43,363 was a PWA grant. At Momence a new high school building, which is located on a 15 acre site at Franklin and Washington streets, is being built with a grant of $135,000 toward the cost of $300,000.

Burlington is building a new high school with four class rooms, a gymnasium with stage, lecture room, and other facilities. PWA made a grant of $21,272 to this school, which will cost $47,272.

Absence of Price Tags invariably mean Higher Prices
"Absence of price tags ...almost always means that a price higher than ordinary is charged," says a bulletin from Consumer's Research—an organization that provides unbiased counsel on goods bought by the consumer.
LAIN meets the price question openly—by price-marking all merchandise in plain figures—NOT IN CODE—and quotes prices on complete funerals as low as $110. Others at $150, $200, $250, $395, $750, or more. And because of this fair-dealing policy, Chicago's preference for LAIN service is now 20 to 1—twenty times the average.
Over 63% of all LAIN funerals cost less than $300. Over 35% cost less than $200.
Thus a finer type of service by LAIN doesn't cost any more—usually 33⅓ to 50% less—and you are assured of dependable service and reliable merchandise. All LAIN prices are for a complete funeral—NO EXTRAS.

WE'VE BEEN ENGAGED FOR TWO YEARS ... AND I'M GETTING TIRED OF THIS DELAY! DON'T YOU WANT TO MARRY ME?
GEORGE, DARLING, WHY ARE YOU SO IRRITABLE? I'LL MARRY YOU THE DAY YOU GET YOUR PILOT'S LICENSE!
IF SHE REALLY LOVED YOU SHE WOULDN'T CARE WHETHER YOU HAD TIN WINGS PINNED ON YOUR CHEST OR NOT!
MR. COFFEE-NERVES
WELL, YOU CAN'T PUT ME OFF ANY LONGER! I'M TAKING MY FINAL TEST FLIGHT IN THE MORNING!
OH, NO, YOU'RE NOT! THE CAPTAIN SAW YOU ALMOST CRACK UP THAT PLANE TODAY—
SPYING ON YOU, WAS HE? OR MAYBE THIS SNOOPING SERGEANT RAN AND TOLD HIM ABOUT IT!
MR. COFFEE-NERVES
YOUR NERVES MAKE YOU A MENACE IN THE AIR AND A NUISANCE ON THE GROUND. YOU'RE NOT READY FOR YOUR WINGS YET!
OH YEAH? SAY... IF YOU HAD MY INDIGESTION.... YOU'D BE IN THE HOSPITAL!
—IF THIS SNOOP WAS AS GOOD AS HE THINKS HE IS.... HE WOULDN'T BE SO FRESH WITH HIS ADVICE!
WHY HAVE YOU GOT IT IN FOR ME? I'VE JUST GOT TO TAKE THAT FLIGHT! THIS MEANS EVERYTHING TO ME! MY GIRL WON'T MARRY ME UNTIL I GET MY WINGS!
SORRY, BUDDY... CAPTAIN'S ORDERS. —AND IF YOU FEEL AS BAD AS YOU SAY, YOU'D BETTER REPORT TO THE DOCTOR!
LAY OFF THAT DOCTOR! WHEN HE GETS THROUGH WITH YOU, YOU'LL HAVE YOUR WINGS ALL RIGHT.... AND A HARP!
—SO THE DOCTOR SAID YOU HAVE COFFEE NERVES? WHAT DID HE ADVISE?
HE SAID 'QUIT COFFEE AND DRINK POSTUM INSTEAD!' BUT, SHUCKS, THAT'S BUNK! I'LL GIVE UP AVIATION AND GET A JOB SOMEWHERE!
THAT'S THE FIRST SMART THING YOU'VE SAID SINCE YOU TOLD THAT DOCTOR WHAT YOU THOUGHT OF HIM!
MR. COFFEE-NERVES
IF YOU GIVE UP TRYING, GEORGE, YOU'LL GIVE ME UP TOO! I WON'T MARRY A QUITTER!
OH, ALL RIGHT. IF YOU FEEL THAT WAY ABOUT IT, I SUPPOSE I'LL HAVE TO TRY POSTUM!
CURSES! THAT WASHES ME OUT! POSTUM ALWAYS PUTS ME INTO A TAILSPIN!
I HOPE GEORGE TURNS OUT TO BE AS GOOD A HUSBAND AS HE IS A PILOT!
HE WILL.... HE'S BEEN THE SWEETEST MAN ALIVE SINCE HE SWITCHED TO POSTUM!
TAKE A TIP FROM ME.... IF YOU'VE GOT COFFEE NERVES ...TRY POSTUM!
Of course, you know that children should never drink coffee. But do you realize that the caffein in coffee disagrees with many grown-ups, too?
If you are bothered by headaches or indigestion, or find it difficult to sleep soundly ... caffein may be to blame.
Isn't it worth-while to try Postum for 30 days? Postum contains no caffein. It is simply whole wheat and bran, roasted and slightly sweetened. It is easy to make, and costs less than one-half cent a cup. It's a delicious drink, too ... and may prove a real help. A product of General Foods.

MILLIONS SWITCHING TO THIS NEW, SAFE "NO-SCRUB" SOAP

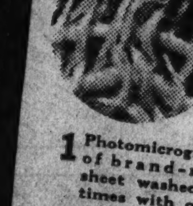
This amazing laundry soap invention, OXYDOL, comes to you from the makers of gentle Ivory. It is the result of a patented process which makes mild, gentle soap much faster acting—a formula which makes it 2 to 4 times whiter washing. You just soak clothes 15 minutes to the tub-ful . . . no scrubbing, no boiling . . . and white clothes wash so white it will amaze you. Even the "grimiest" spots come clean with a gentle rub. Yet every washable color stays brilliant—fresh. Even sheer cotton prints, after 100 consecutive washings, showed no perceptible sign of fading. By comparison, old type no-scrub soaps seem harsh, hard on colors, and unfit for hands.

You'll be amazed, too, how economical OXYDOL is. One package often does twice the work—lasts twice as long—as old-fashioned bars, flakes or chips.

Accept FREE Trial

Send your name and address to Procter & Gamble, Dept. D5-1, Box 1801, Cincinnati, Ohio, and we'll see you get a regular-size package absolutely free. Or to avoid delay—get OXYDOL from your own dealer.

"I REALLY COULDN'T BELIEVE MY EYES"



I really couldn't believe my eyes, when I soaked my dirty clothes in OXYDOL suds for the first time and found out how the dirt soaked out of them. It used to be a case of boiling and scrubbing and rubbing to get clothes clean. But now I soak the clothes, and while they're soaking, I do my other housework. OXYDOL has certainly made washing easy for me. And it takes much less time to get my washing out on the line, and it always looks so clean and white and smells so fresh. OXYDOL is certainly a time-saver and labor-saver for me, and I hope others can benefit from using it as much as I have.

Land Sales Show Chicagoland Back to the Farm Movement

BY BOB BECKER.

Business men in Chicagoland and elsewhere in the middle west are staging a back to the farm migration such as real estate men have not seen in many years. Reports from many cities in Chicagoland show sales of farms in 1935 more than 50 per cent greater than in 1934, and more cash sales than some real estate agents have seen in more than 20 years.

Behind all of these sales of farm lands is the significant fact that business men believe that at the present time farm properties represent one of the safest investments available, and also that a farm is the best hedge against inflation and other New Deal financial high jinks.

Real estate agents call attention to the unusual number of cash deals for farms during the last year. T. J. Stahl of Waukegan, Ill., states that 90 per cent of the transactions he handled in 1935 were for cash and that he has never seen such cash farm buying as in the last 12 months. He adds that with but few exceptions the deals were for two purposes—investment and security.

Fear New Deal Disaster.

Fear of eventual financial difficulties as a result of New Deal mismanagement at Washington was given as one reason for farm purchases, given by Grover C. Elmore, head of the Grover C. Elmore Real Estate Improvement company, which probably handled the largest number of acreage deals during 1935 in Cook county.

Mr. Elmore stated that his total sales of $1,000,000 worth of farm land to wealthy Chicagoans was approximately 50 per cent larger in volume than during the preceding year of 1934.

In the south end of Cook county A. W. Tatge of Homewood reports more activity in farms during 1935 than in several years. He said that most of the purchases were by Chicago men who were putting their money in land for a safe investment.

Kane County Increase.

Charles Doetschman of Aurora, Ill., Kane county recorder, states that there has been an exceptional increase in the sale of farm property in the Kane county region during the last year.

"Many Chicagoans," he says, "are entering the farm realty market and are buying choice acreage tracts for investment purposes and for year-round homesites. Sales during 1935 easily eclipsed all records for several years back."

William George of Aurora, Ill., a dealer in farms, says that a great many Chicagoans are looking for "distressed" property, seeking to drive a bargain and at the same time invest spare capital in something apparently sounder to them than other types of investments.

Joliet real estate dealers report a 50 per cent increase in sales of farms during 1935 and also that the value of farm properties is going up.

Safe Investments Stressed.

One broker handling Will county farm lands states that he sold seven farms to clients "who wanted to make what they considered safe investments." Illustrating further the trend toward farm purchases as investments, another Will county farm broker says: "Some of the men who bought farms during 1935 converted securities into cash with which to purchase farm lands."

Opinions expressed by real estate brokers in Kankakee county show that Chicagoans have become interested in farm lands in that area. The general opinion of these men is that Chicagoans are either hedging against further New Deal antics or simply buying because land is one of the soundest investments at this time.

Some Chicagoland Transactions.

Edward A. Cudahy Jr. of Chicago recently bought a 543 acre farm two miles west of Aurora. Gordon Keogh of the Edward Keogh Printing company in Chicago bought a 200 acre farm five miles west of Geneva. Porter Fox, a Chicago investment broker, about a year ago bought the 175 acre Nels Patterson farm five miles west of St. Charles, Ill. Col. Edward J. Baker of St. Charles owns several farms in the Fox River valley, and within the last year bought a 200 acre farm west of the town in which he lives.

F. W. Ellis of Armour & Co. and some of his associates have purchased 459 acres on the Lincoln highway, about eight miles east of Joliet. This is one of the oldest farms in Will county, the brick residence having served as a stage coach station in pioneer days.

Women's Features

New Ensembles Combine Smart Design with Stitches Familiar to Amateur Knitter

By JEAN MACDONALD.

THE constant knitting which has been done by many women in the last four or five years has increased their speed to such an extent that a knitted skirt no longer is the bugbear it once appeared to be. A skirt may be knitted by nonprofessionals in the record time of from two to six weeks, while blouses are easily knitted in from one to three weeks, depending upon the energy expended.

An amusing and most interesting example of knitting done by an amateur was a skirt which a young woman created in four weeks. The girl in question had had no experience with knitting or knitting needles save for an attempt to make a jiffy sweater, which was never completed. Being an optimist, she thought she might like to make something easier—a two piece suit of crêpe. As a result she had a striking ensemble in six weeks' time, and it wasn't a nonstop flight, because she is an inveterate bridge hound with great contempt for those who carry their needlework to a card table. She was considerably slowed down by the fact that by nature she is left handed, and she determined to learn to knit right handed.

The two piece dresses illustrated today are quick, simple knitting jobs—but the height of fashion.

Swiss Fiber Yarn for Warm Weather.

The dress at the upper right has a military note, with the frogs at the front fastening. Other interesting features are the clever yoke and kimona sleeves in one piece, the bodice being attached with attractive binding. An unusual note is the hem of the blouse which matches the skirt. This is made of a fine wool yarn with a matching nub of rayon throughout.

Extreme Versatility in New Fashions.

The knit garments designed by French and American couturiers for the various yarn manufacturers are so numerous it is virtually impossible to bring them all before the public. These recognized designers do deserve an ovation for their extreme versatility. Not only must they be clever and deft in their handling of women's dresses, coats, suits, and blouses, but they must be fully conversant with masculine apparel and ingenious in their designs to meet favor. Children's clothing must be given still another of the artist's deft touches if it is to be in keeping with the youth of the wearer.

Women who like to knit several blouses rather than one skirt may have their skirts made for them. One Chicago department store has installed a hand power machine and will knit the skirts of any ensemble. This service is free of charge providing sufficient yarn for one outfit is purchased.

Yokes and military effects as seen in this two piece, kimono sleeved dress are found in an increasingly large number of hand knits this season. The tiny collar and frogs and the suede belt are smart touches.

Raisins Forsake Mere Puddings for New Roles in Exciting Main Dishes

By MARY MEADE.

IT'S too bad that we all are so accustomed to raisins. We order them conscientiously and periodically as part of our pantry staples, we toss a few into this spice cake or that pudding, and most of us don't even skim the surface of their latent possibilities!

Think now. Did you ever tuck them into a casserole with baked carrots? Did you ever try a raisin cheese soufflé? Ever add raisins to a savory pot roast sauce, or turn the talents of raisins to the problem of a soul-stirring Mexican rice?

Raisins in Sandwich Spread.

Well, that's just a beginning. Maybe you have still to learn of the charm of raisins as sandwich fodder, as part of a creamy molded peanut butter salad or fruit ice cream, or as a rich filling for puffy sweet potato cases.

CARROT RAISIN CASSEROLE.

4 cups shredded raw carrots
Salt, pepper
¼ cup butter

Wash the raisins in hot water. Drain and mix with the carrots, which may be sliced thinly if you prefer, and place in a casserole. Dot with butter, sprinkle with salt and pepper, and cover the baking dish. Bake for 40 to 50 minutes at 350 degrees F. As a vegetable with the meat course, this recipe serves eight; as a main luncheon dish, six.

RAISIN CHEESE SOUFFLE

1 cup milk
2 tablespoons flour
½ teaspoon salt
Paprika
¼ teaspoon dry mustard
1 cup grated American cheese
4 eggs
2 tablespoons minced green pepper
¼ cup seedless raisins

Thicken the hot milk with a mixture of the flour and seasonings, which have been smoothed to a paste with a little of the milk before heating. Cook over direct heat, stirring constantly, until the mixture boils. Turn into the top of a double boiler, and add the grated cheese. When the latter is melted and well blended, stir in the slightly beaten egg yolks, and stir constantly until the mixture is thickened—about 2 minutes. Remove from heat, add the raisins and chopped green pepper. Beat the egg whites until light and stiff, and fold into the custard mixture. Turn into a baking dish, set in a pan of hot water, and bake in a moderate oven for 40 to 50 minutes, or until an inserted knife blade comes out clean.

Pot Roast Adopts Fruit.

COMPANY POT ROAST.

5 pound beef chuck or rump roast
½ cup seedless raisins
Salt, pepper, flour
4 tablespoons lard
1 cup hot water

Cut deep slits into the roast, fill with raisins, and skewer or tie together to prevent their dropping out. Dredge the roast with flour and seasonings, and brown on all sides in the hot fat. Add the hot water, cover, and cook slowly for about two hours, or until tender, adding water as needed. Serve with this sauce:

3 tablespoons minced onion
¼ teaspoon chopped garlic
1 tablespoon butter
½ cup seedless raisins
1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce
2 teaspoons chili powder
2 tablespoons cornstarch
1 cup cold water

Cook the onion and garlic in the melted butter until slightly browned. Add the raisins and Worcestershire sauce. Blend the dry seasonings with the cornstarch, smooth to a paste with the cold water, and add to the raisin mixture. Cook until thick and clear, stirring constantly. Serve hot with the raisin pot roast or other meat course.

DESSERT SALAD, DE LUXE.

1 cup seedless raisins
1 tablespoon granulated gelatin
½ cup cold water
½ cup peanut butter
½ cup mayonnaise
2 cups cottage cheese
1 cup diced celery

Wash the raisins in hot water, drain, and cool. Soften the gelatin in the cold water, and melt over hot water. Blend the peanut butter and mayonnaise, and mix with raisins, gelatin mixture, cottage cheese, and celery. Pour into

Cruise Clothes Offer Preview of New Styles

By Bettina Bedwell.

PARIS.—[Special.]—Styles that are made for southern resorts and cruises, which are regular winter pilgrimages for lots of women, may be quite special. Or they may be styles that have a real fashion future. The conditions of life on a liner are different from those you will find on shore, and the resort that specializes in hot sunshine in January isn't ordinary, either. However, the woman who goes on a cruise or down south in the winter is likely to wear the same clothes all the summer through and her best bet is to pack a wardrobe which will function harmoniously when she gets back home. The styles that have a future are the ones to choose.

One of the headline fashions for the southern resort is the sports dress, or suit, with a divided skirt. This is, also, something to take along on a cruise or ocean voyage. And the divided skirt dress and suit are going to be in fashion everywhere next summer, so they have a future.

Knit Suit a "Must" for Cruise Wardrobe.

A knitted suit or ensemble is another fashion unity that is almost an essential on board ship, and I don't need tell you that you can wear these things at home, too. The smartest knitted suits this season have contrasting jackets, by the way. Charming, slightly crazy little hats and berets, also knitted, are being made to go with such costumes. They are just the thing for a windblown deck or shore.

The inevitable coat that the travel wise woman carries with her when she leaves for a cruise or on a train will, this season, be a model which will be much seen on the streets and avenues of our cities in the spring. This will be the slim, semi-molded coat that buttons up the front, and that is skimpily trimmed with fur or has none at all. It may be tweed or other sturdy, warm woolen. A baby swagger coat, no more than wrist length, can be chosen if you can have more than one coat along with you.

While one real evening gown is a necessity, the evening suit may serve both for formal wear and for occasions when women don't dress in low cut frocks. The folks who make styles are laboring to give the evening suit for women a permanent niche in fashions, and it is an ensemble you can go for in a big way. It consists of a long skirt, a low cut blouse, and a jacket, or maybe a cape. There are thousands of variations.

Astrakhan Lends Elegance to Skirt and Muff.

A new kind of evening suit is shown, No. 1. It is ultra chic and from Lucien Lelong, who makes it of black cloky. The jacket is like a bodice, buttoned primly up the front on jet buttons from a wide, black antelope belt. The standing collar is edged with black astrakhan and the sleeves fit like dress sleeves from elbows to wrists. Tucks like sunrays make a trimming where the sleeves are sewed to the jacket. A full length skirt of black silk fringe is attached to the jacket under the belt. This floats around when the wearer moves and is a clever and graceful novelty. A cloky muff trimmed with long fringe and with astrakhan fur goes with this suit. When the jacket, with its fringed skirt is taken off, there is a stunning blouse of black and white striped satin, shown left, and a long, black, pencil line skirt. The blouse has a jabot collar and puff sleeves and is worn over the top of the skirt. A second blouse, extremely low cut and made of black cloky, transforms this suit into a grade A evening dress.

A sports dress with a divided skirt, from Schiaparelli, is shown, No. 2. This model is an example of perfect color harmonizing. It is made of pastel blue wool jersey and it has a combination sash and bag that is clever. The sash is bright red on one side and deep pansy blue and pale blue on the other, twisted to show all the colors. The ends conceal a bag that you can use for all your vanity and monetary needs. The divided skirt of this frock looks like a regular skirt but isn't. When you want to go sunback you unzip the shoulders and let the back of the bodice fall.

Chanel's Coat Silhouette Gets Fashion's Prize.

The most fashionable type of knitted suit is shown in No. 3. It has a heavy knitted jacket of orange wool with brown leather buttons and a brown scarf fringed with orange. The skirt is brown tricot and there is a simple white linen blouse under the jacket. The turban is brown, knitted and trimmed with wool fringes that fall over the front. It's a Lucien Lelong model.

The coat numbered 4 is a Chanel model. It is made of dark blue wool with wavy plaid in white. The cut is awarded fashion's first prize in Paris. The wrap buttons up on blue and white buttons and has four roomy patch pockets, two just below the shoulder yoke and two oversize ones on the hips. The sleeves are comfortably wide, but narrow into buttoned cuffs above the wrists.

A dangerous new ascent to Lodeiskapa, one of the loftiest mountains in Norway, recently was named Shannon Way in honor of Mrs. A. M. Shannon of Dublin, Irish Free State, who made the climb of 7,000 feet to the peak in thirty hours.

COMING FASHIONS CAST THEIR SHADOWS ON SOUTHERN BEACHES

● No. 1: This black cloky Lelong evening suit has a long fringe skirt on its waistlength jacket. Fringe also adorns the cloth muff. The blouse is black and white striped satin.

● No. 3: Lelong gives this knitted suit an orange jacket and a brown skirt. The hat and scarf are brown, trimmed with orange yarn fringes.

● No. 4: Chanel puts four patch pockets on this blue and white plaid coat and buttons it down the front.

4 cups mashed cooked sweet potatoes
1 teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon cinnamon
⅛ teaspoon ginger
¼ cup melted butter

Beat the egg slightly, add the mashed sweet potatoes and seasonings, and blend with the melted butter. Fill the center with this sauce:

½ cup orange juice
¼ cup sugar
⅛ teaspoon cornstarch
1 tablespoon finely sliced fresh orange peel
1 cup seedless raisins

Blend the orange juice with the sugar and cornstarch, and place over low heat, stirring until the mixture is thick and clear. Add the orange peel and washed raisins, heat for several minutes longer, and serve hot in the hot sweet potato cases.

Dangerous Adventures Fill Life of This Young Woman

LIFE is just a series of adventures for Miss Sunny Heath of Council Bluffs, Ia. She has been in two airplane wrecks, three automobile accidents, a train crash, and had her automobile blown off the highway during a Kansas tornado. She never was injured seriously.

Let's Chat Over the Cookstove

Gelatin is prepared from various animal substances. Common bulk gelatin comes from the bones and softer parts of the hides of mature cattle. Better grade gelatin is made from the calf's neck pieces and cheek, cartilage connective tissue, and some of the bones.

Mr. L. E. F., Waterloo, Ia.: "Wanted, a recipe for making Philadelphia scrapple."

Older recipes for scrapple call for meat from a hog's head and fresh pig's feet, but since few of us meet up with same these days, we're offering a modernized version, equally good, that uses any of the less expensive cuts of lean pork.

PHILADELPHIA SCRAPPLE.

1 pound lean pork | 1 cup cornmeal
1 quart water | 1½ teaspoons salt

Cook the meat in the water, simmering slowly, until tender. Remove the meat from the water and chill the broth. Skim off the hardened fat, and add enough water to the broth again to measure one quart. Bring the broth to a boil, and stir in the cornmeal. Cook slowly for two hours. Chop the cooked pork, season with the salt and sage, add to the cooked mush, and continue cooking slowly for 20 minutes longer. Pour into a cold, wet, loaf pan, chill, and when firm slice fairly thin, dip in flour, and brown delicately in hot fat.

Miss E. M., of Gary: "May I have a recipe for Welsh rabbit made with beer?"

Melt a half pound of sharp cheese in a double boiler or chafing dish. Add ¼ teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon paprika, ½ teaspoon mustard, and 1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce. Separate two eggs and add slightly beaten yolks to melted cheese, stirring constantly. Gradually stir in a half cup of beer, remove from heat, and add stiffly beaten egg whites. Whip briskly for a few minutes with rotary beater and serve at once with toast or crisp crackers.

True Beauty Is Unaffected by Passing Time

Noted Producer Describes Glamorous Women Who Have Graced Theater.

Miss Donnelly's authoritative articles, counseling women in matters of beauty and charm, appear every day in the feature pages of the Chicago Tribune.

By Antoinette Donnelly.

"THE passing of time has nothing to do with beauty. Customs change and costumes change, but beautiful women decorate every period!"

So says Daniel Frohman, dean of the American theater, under whose management have appeared nearly all the world's foremost actors and actresses. In his recently published autobiography, "Daniel Frohman Presents" [Kendall and Sharp], one meets almost every glamorous woman who has graced the stage during the last half century, including a number of the current glamorous ones.

I interviewed Mr. Frohman on the comparative qualities of beauty today and yesterday, eliciting from him the comment quoted above. Pressing him further I asked what it was that gave to certain women, such as the famous Lillians, Langtry and Russell, Mary Anderson, Julia Marlowe, and so on, that enduring quality that has made their beauty traditional. Mr. Frohman answered: "If Nell Gwynne had had but beauty alone, would her name have come ringing down the ages as it has? She had beauty. She had wit. She had talent. She could act.

Actress Must Give Weight to Beauty with Measure of Talent.

"It's important for an actress to have beauty," Mr. Frohman continued. "But to give that beauty substance and the enduring quality spoken of, there must be more."

To explain, Mr. Frohman cited the instance of two sisters, one a breathtaking beauty, the other not so beautiful but talented, and the survival of the latter in contrast to an early boredom of her audiences in the case of the former sister.

"Interest must be created. Modjeska had amazing versatility. Her charming humor gave her a fine sense of proportion, touching her performances with spirited grace. She was one of those rare women whose buoyancy of spirit makes them eternally young. She was capable of lofty idealism and a thrilling intensity of feeling. And she was a great actress.

"Sarah Bernhardt, Eleanor Dusé, and Helen Modjeska were the three greatest actresses of my time. And amazing women, all three of them. Bernhardt could have been a notable sculptress, a painter, an outstanding literary figure if she had not preferred the stage. Bernhardt was a woman of strong physique, in spite of her slight figure. Otherwise she never would have been able to continue her stage career after an infection had made it necessary for her leg to be amputated."

Stage Has Quality Which Tends Toward Longevity.

I asked Mr. Frohman the secret of the eternal youth of so many of the stage people. He answered: "The stage has a charm and quality which tends toward the longevity of the people connected with it. This is due, no doubt, to the care they take of their health, for no actor, if he can help it, will miss a performance. That is why Madge Kendall played young parts even though old in years. Bernhardt, Dusé, and Modjeska played young parts when over sixty. Marie Tempest in this year, 1935, although 70, played a performance in London before the king and queen, in which she looked the part of the 35 year old woman she portrayed. It is temperament and good health that enables people to carry on in every career. As for age, it is mainly a matter of attitude. There is no such thing as growing old unless one wishes to be old."

Mary Anderson, according to Mr. Frohman, was the most beautiful actress that America ever brought forth. She was a woman of fine character, religious in her tendencies.

Geraldine Farrar Possessor of All Foremost Qualities.

Geraldine Farrar had everything, Mr. Frohman pronounces. Beauty, a marvelous voice, a grand manner, and, above all, she possessed to a superlative degree the art of making friends.

Lillian Russell's beauty tradition is deserved, according to Mr. Frohman. Lillian Langtry, who also came under Mr. Frohman's management, was, in his opinion, a handsome woman rather than a beauty. As an actress she did not rate highly with the dean of the American theater.

Of our modern glamorous ones, whose gifts presage a traditional future, Mr. Frohman points to Katharine Cornell, a great personality as well as a woman of great charm; to Jane Cowl, clever, beautiful, talented; to Helen Hayes, to Billie Burke, who seems to grow younger with the years; to Peggy Wood, all women of charm, beauty, and talent.

A FRIEND IN NEED

If Post-Christmas Days Find Extra Articles in Your Home, These Will Fill Great Need in Many Poor Families of the City.

By Sally Joy Brown.

SOMETIMES the post-Christmas season finds otherwise well organized households with surplus articles due to the influx of gifts. Perhaps you have a new and an old easy chair or several extra rugs and haven't quite made up your mind as to what to do about it. If that's your trouble this department will be only too glad to suggest possible uses for almost any usable article.

If you have a rug of which to dispose perhaps you'd be interested in helping the B. family, one of hundreds without adequate floor covering. Mrs. B., her husband, and child live with her mother and a younger brother and sister who are still attending school. They live above an empty basement and their home is heated by a stove. The baby has just recovered from bronchitis and the cold floors are a real menace to his health. The address is on the south side.

If there was a brand new pair of skates under the Christmas tree there might be a discarded set for the boy Miss R. writes about.

"Dear Miss Brown: Do you think you could help me locate a pair of ice skates for a boy who wears a size 9 shoe? His father has been missing for some years and his home recently was broken up because his mother became acutely ill and had to be moved to a sanitarium. The boy needs recreation and is particularly fond of skating."

A similar request from one of my young friends: "Dear Miss Brown: I am writing to you in the hope that you will be able to help us as you have helped others. We are three healthy, active children and love outdoor sports, especially skating. Do you think, dear Miss Brown, that you could get us skates through your column? Some children probably received new skates from Santa and we would appreciate it if some one would pass his outgrown ones to us. Father earns only a little a week and cannot afford to buy us any. I am 13 years old, wear size 7 shoes. Brother Johnny, 10 years old, wears size 4½, and Betty, 9 years old, wears size 2½ or 3. We would be glad to call for them if any skates are offered. MILDRED P."

Mr. C. H. is an interested worker in a small church. A friend donated a small phonograph and he is interested in obtaining records of sacred selections for work in the Sunday school and other activities. He will be glad to arrange to call for any offers.

A case worker sends word of a pitiful case: "Dear Miss Brown: May we make an appeal through your column for a wheel chair for a man we have been assisting? He is 74 years old and is unable to either walk or stand alone due to an accident a few years ago in which he suffered several broken bones and lost the sight of one eye. His wife also is crippled and can get around only with the aid of a crutch. Their physician feels that a wheel chair will make him more comfortable and will make it easier for his wife to care for him. We shall greatly appreciate anything your readers are able to do for these people. B. F."

G. L. is an elderly man with no relatives or friends in this part of the country. He now is ill and in a sanitarium, but hopes to be released soon. It is imperative that he have a suit, size 36 or 37, which the institution now sheltering him cannot provide. Any offer will have to be mailed to him.

Although we always found musical instrument difficult to obtain, I do hope some reader can supply a piano accordion for a 16 year old girl. A victim of infantile paralysis, she is unable to leave her home. She is much interested in music and an instrument would occupy her time nicely and bring her a great deal of happiness. She has longed for one for many years and will appreciate having her wish fulfilled. The address is on the north side.

Glazing Liquid Well Blended on Wall Gives Antique Finish

MANY of the paneled walls in the old palaces in Europe had a glazed, transparent finish which was highly attractive. To obtain this same glazed or antique finish on a freshly painted wall, tint some glazing liquid the desired color and brush it over the toned wall. Then with a wad of soft cheesecloth blend or soften the glaze until the desired effect is obtained. More than one glaze may be applied in the same manner and the same finish may be applied to moldings, woodwork, and furniture.

Conversational Ease Is Aid to Social Aplomb

Miss Bartlett will be glad to answer questions pertaining to etiquet and correct social behavior. For a personal reply, enclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope with your letter.

By Helen Bartlett.

THAT feeling of embarrassment in the company of strangers and lack of self-assurance with which so many young people suffer can be overcome largely by the cultivation of the art of conversation. To be able to talk intelligently and interestingly on a variety of subjects, and not be at a loss for words or subjects, contributes greatly to this abstract, indefinable quality called poise.

To improve one's ability as a conversationalist is principally a matter of self-training . . . practice and experience. Unfortunately there is no magical formula or definite set of rules which we might set down that would bring about an immediate change. Rather, it is a slow and somewhat painful process, but not impossible.

Wide Reading Aids Thought and Increases Vocabulary.

One of the best exercises is to read—read prodigiously. Read everything, books, magazines, newspapers. This will increase the vocabulary, put thoughts in the head and words in the mouth. With that a great deal will have been accomplished.

Then you can begin to pay attention to your choice of words and the quality of your voice. Be watchful of your pronunciation. Overcome any defects of speech such as lisping, stuttering, or stammering. Strive for a kindly, pleasant, well modulated voice.

Affectation is detestable, either in the tone of voice, pronunciation, or in the choice of ultra-elegant phrases. The reverse of this, slovenly speech, also is on the blacklist. Be natural and spontaneous.

A good rule to remember in any drawing room conversation is the same as for any courteous conduct. Don't be afraid to express your own opinion. But be sure to make it a give-and-take proposition. Remember that there may be some one else who might have a word to say on the subject, too.

Think Twice Before You Speak, and Avoid Blunders.

Be tactful and avoid blunders. You can do that by thinking twice before you speak. Do not bluntly contradict another with an I-know-it-all attitude. Of course you are entitled to your opinion, but be tolerant and courteous in the manner in which you present it.

Try to keep drawing room topics of conversation pleasant and agreeable. Be original in your thoughts and in the expression of those thoughts, not just an echo. Curb gossip.

Slang cannot be considered perfect English, neither can it be wholly condemned. It is colorful and expressive and is used to such an extent that it is a part of the American language. It need not be barred exclusively from your vocabulary as long as it is not common or vulgar.

Lemon Juice, Muriatic Acid Polish Gilded Frame

Gilded picture frames look beautiful when they are clean. But when the dust has settled on them and won't come off easily, try a good washing with mild soap and luke warm water, and then a quick rinse with lemon juice. A small quantity of muriatic acid diluted in water also will clean the frames to a sparkling brightness.

A Gray Mood Dominates Early Spring Fashions

By Rhea Seeger.

WATCH GRAY! It's going to steal the fashion spotlight from now on. Already the slim, smart suits that you buy so eagerly to wear under a fur coat feature gray, from swanky gunmetal tones to light grays that are stunning contrasts under either black or brown fur coats. Two-tone effects are also good. For instance, one may combine a straight skirt of dark gray with a fitted short jacket of light gray, made with collar and revers of the same dark hue as the skirt. Gray mixtures in plaids, in blurred checks, and in monotone effects are the smartest things in town. Gray knitted clothes, quantities of gray sweaters, all kinds of perky gray hats, in felts and fabrics, and all the newest of gray gloves and handbags are ready for the rush.

If you prefer soft afternoon dresses and still search for contrast, you'll like the afternoon models featuring flattering, draped silhouettes, full skirts with fullness achieved with stitched down plaits in front to keep a slim streamline. These have all the best of the new sleeves. They have intricate insets of drapings. And they come in every tone of gray you ever dreamed about. Every designer is using this subtle gray idea.

Dove Gray and Black Spell Sophistication.

With the proper accessories much can be done to achieve an ensemble of gray distinction. Nothing is more French than soft dove gray with inky black gloves, a brimmed black hat edged with a devastating bit of fine veiling, sheer black hosiery and black footgear to match the black bag. The same get-together using deep rich brown in place of black is another stunning combine. It is especially flattering to "copper tops."

The right shade of gray goes especially well with all the new, bright colored gloves—rust, emerald green, hunter's red, bright blue, cerise, and dusty pink. The trick is to know the shade of gray that best contrasts these grand new glove colors. Gloves and a matching scarf, belt and hatband or bow are accessories to the fashion fact that gray is the outstanding basic color for new and unusual ensembles.

Gray Fabrics Will Enchant the Amateur Dressmaker.

Make-your-own-clothes shoppers are going to witness the best showings of gray fabrics that have been unpacked in years. Gray taffeta in almost every tone you need, black and white plaids and stripes that give a gray tone are winners. So are soft, easily draped, heavy silks, smooth or interestingly rough as to texture, which feature every subtle tint of this popular gray. Sheer wools and sheer silks are just as important, and they also feature many new textures.

We've sketched four new afternoon or daytime dresses all fashioned of gray. Typical models, all of them, that can be worn immediately. All are new—just unpacked. They are featured in a large collection of other, similarly high fashion gray clothes.

The large figure, No. 1, shows a two piece dress. The straight skirt is of dark gray. The exceptionally well designed tunic blouse is long and has thinning insets and drapings around the waistline, wide, loose, long raglan sleeves, and a softly draped high neckline held in place with a pair of decorative clips. This tunic blouse is made of a light, harmonizing shade of gray and could be worn with other skirts.

Lace Makes Delicate Neck Bands and Cuffs.

No 2 . . . delicate lace resembling double rows of fagoting is used in bands around the diagonally shaped neckline and as cuffs to the long, fitted sleeves of this frock. Plaits in the front skirtline assure freedom. The high neckline, softly plaited in front, is held in position with a double pin of pearls and rhinestones. The tone is a medium gunmetal and the material is a moderately heavy dull crêpe.

No. 3 . . . another one piece dress of gray crêpe, made with an unusual neckline. All the fullness in the front of the blouse is gathered into a circle, which is covered with the material. Then across the circle is the glittering double bar pin combined with simulated sapphires. The sleeves are long and fitted and the skirt discreetly plaited in front. The narrow belt has a matching rhinestone and sapphire buckle to accent the neck pin.

No. 4 . . . a dove gray sheer, two piece outfit, made with short plaited sleeves, a high neckline, and a peplum on the blouse top. White pique is used for the vest, the collar, and the accenting trim on the belt.

All dresses sketched are from a large collection of high fashion new clothes in all shades of gray to be found in a Chicago shop.

Mergings of Family Groups Grow Fewer

By Gladys Huntington Bevans.

I AM glad that through the coming year I am going to get fewer letters of a certain kind. Glad, not for myself, but for all the parents and grandparents and uncles and aunts who write me asking for help in a situation that is, of necessity, without a solution. At least without a solution until recently.

The doubling-up of families as a consequence of the depression has resulted in countless distressing situations—ranging from mild, and perhaps annoying, difficulties to really serious and disrupting conditions.

There are so many tensions that develop when families consolidate, not from choice but from necessity. There is the strain due to the lack of money. There is the strain due to many people being crowded together, often in a too confined living space. And—perhaps worst of all—the strain of differing "temperatures."

In addition there is the strain that always comes with a clash of ideas on child training and methods of housekeeping. Differing ages or generations, forced to be too much together, rub each other the wrong way—April and November may have trouble getting along—but even more so do December and January.

Some Combinations Happy Ones, but Majority Bring Trouble.

That these situations of tension and discord do not always result from doubling up we must mention. There are cases where a young family takes in the grandparents with delight—and others where the older generation giving shelter to the younger one welcomes the opportunity to come to know grandchildren and to renew the old, affectionate daughter-mother or father-son relationship which marriage interrupted, as it must, perforce. More often, however, it is a hardship to be forced to combine forces.

So many mothers have said, when asking for help for an acute "multi-family" situation: "If we were by ourselves—if we only had one room—things would not be like this. I know they wouldn't. And I know it is difficult for my parents as well as for me. But that knowledge doesn't solve my problem."

Too often I feel the same way in my attempts to help. But happily, many of these problems are being gradually solved in the best way of all. And that best way is, of course, by the earning of more normal incomes, which makes it possible for families to go back to living each under its own roof, no matter how small that roof may be.

Increase in Sale of One-Family Houses Reported.

The actual evidence of this encouraging state of affairs comes from, as just one source, the development companies. They are reporting great increases in sales of small, one-family houses. Real estate agents are in their turn reporting a smaller percentage of apartment vacancies.

All of which means, to you and me, that many families will now be going back to their own homes. And this change will mean much more than just getting their furniture out of storage, renewing acquaintance with the big, shabby, old sofa that the children can sprawl on and that the puppy need not be chased off of, trying to find a space in which to store the ironing board and the mop and vacuum, and wondering why painters will come and leave their ladders and a lot of smelly paint pots and then not show up again for a week.

When families go once more into their own homes the changes that take place, the readjustments that are necessary are not just these obvious ones. A move like this means that relationships will be remaking themselves into their predepdession designs and that the real love and affection that underlay all the overlay of tightened nerves and differing methods of household management and ideas of juvenile conduct will shine forth once more. It means that the visit to grandfather's and grandmother's and Aunt Molly's and Uncle John's will take on again a pleasant tinge of excitement—and that husbands and wives and children and parents will relax into a more easygoing and less complicated way of life.

In connection with this subject it is interesting to note what the president of one of the biggest savings banks in this country said recently. A large proportion of savings bank funds, he said, are invested in mortgages on small homes. He remarked that one of the bright spots in the depression has been the homeowner's deep attachment for his home and the lengths of privation to which the family will go in order to keep up payments on the mortgage.

The French have a proverb: "God often has a great share in a little house." How well some of us know that. It makes one think of what Owen D. Young said not long ago, to the effect that a home actually needed only three rooms—a kitchen, a bedroom, and a sitting room.

Don't Expect Children to Outgrow Faults Over Night.

All this doesn't look as if family life were on the decline in these United States. So let's wait until the presidents of savings banks begin to worry about the non-payment of mortgages and until garden seed companies begin to discontinue the publication of their enticing catalogs and go out of business before we begin to worry about the future of the family in this country of ours.

To those upon whom fortune has begun to smile again and who are once more setting up housekeeping, I would like to offer a suggestion. I have been in the confidence of many of these doubled-up families, and I know the sort of troubles that have in some cases arisen with the children—troubles resulting from too much attention and too great indulgence, or from too much fault finding or too much discussion of their behavior.

The suggestion that I have to offer is that you do not expect the children to change with magical speed as the result of your now living by yourselves. Remember that certain behavior and attitudes have become habits—perhaps of long standing—and that you cannot expect them to change overnight.

You've got to have patience—you've got to persist until you have put over your own, uninterfered-with way of managing them. You've got to stick to your guns—and then, quite suddenly, one fine day, you'll find things beautifully smoothed out. But you must not look for miracles—human nature isn't made that way.

During January we are sending out specially printed copies of the Mothers' and Fathers' Litany. To obtain it please send your address and postage—no envelope, please, unless it is a large manila one.

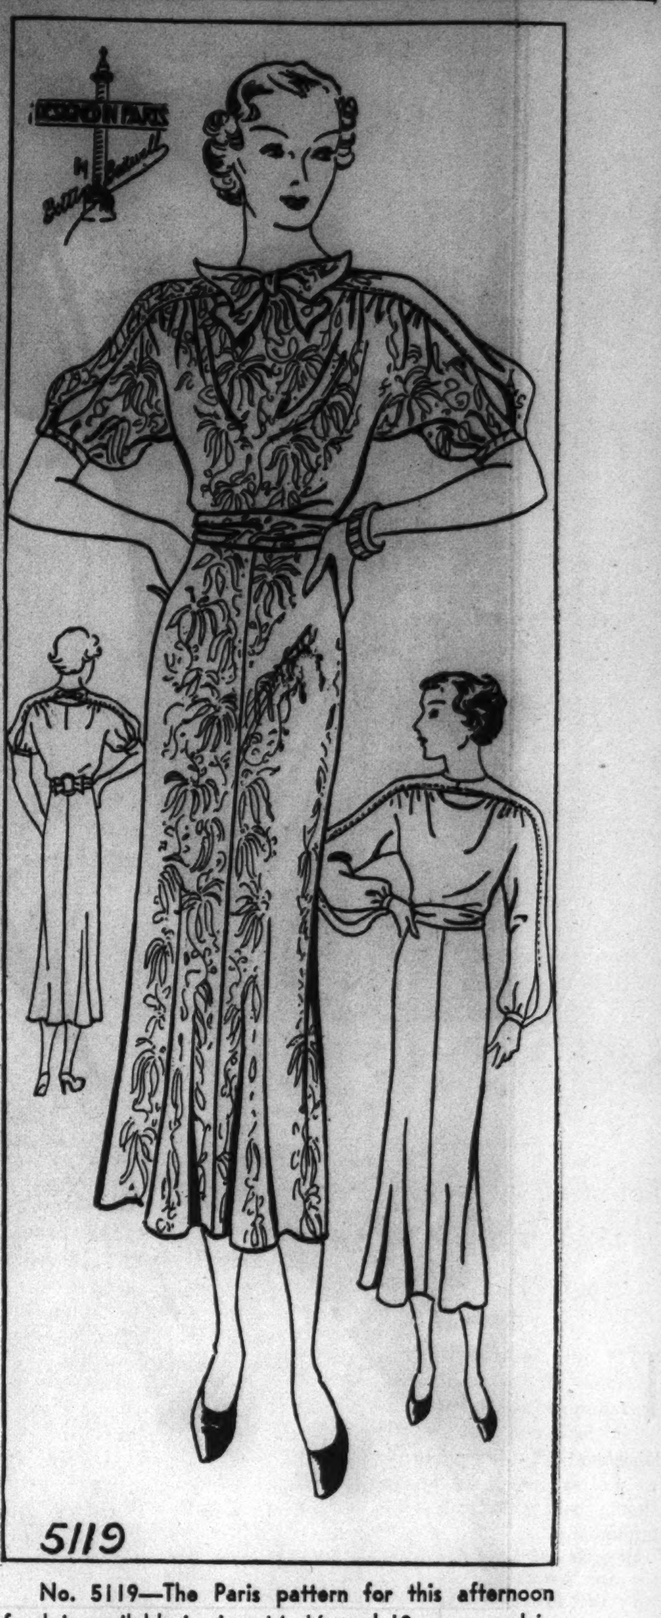
Paris Pattern Frock Shares Popularity of Gay Prints



No. 5119—The Paris pattern for this afternoon frock is available in sizes 14, 16, and 18 years, and in 36, 38, and 40 inches bust measurement.

By Bettina Bedwell.

PARIS.—[Special.]—Couturiers in the French capital have spring in mind and prints have a goodly share of prominence in Parisian modes of the moment. Bright colors are the rage, and the lovely printed fabrics display gay tints splashed over one another, or the alternate choice of bright hues on dark backgrounds.

This attractive frock for afternoon wear, pattern No. 5119, like many of the foremost French models, has a slim skirt and soft fullness in the bodice. This charming little dress is youthful in every line, and the graceful little bow at the neckline has a distinctive charm of its own. The sleeves have saucy slashed openings through which the arms of many smart Parisiennes are revealed, for chic women in the capital have taken to this dress in a big way.

The original of this frock was fashioned of a gay print, fuchsia on a coral red ground. This little frock has a carload of charming formality, and yet is entirely wearable. It's the sort of dress any woman would prize for its adaptability now, under winter coats, and for dash later when spring arrives.

Sheer wool crêpe in beige or gray, and plain crêpe silk are other suggestions, in case you don't share the present craze for prints.

A.P.W. Satin Tissue

THROUGH THE LOOKING GLASS

By Eleanor Nangle

One of the secrets of youth is relaxation. Why not resolve for 1936 to get as much sleep as you need every night and to unkink your nerves daily? You'll thwart the onslaught of age and prevent slow ruin of the beauty you possess.

[TRIBUNE Studio Photo.]

IT'S our pleasant duty to tell you about all the beauty and all the feminine satisfaction that comes in jars and bottles and beauty treatments. But every once in a while we feel as though we, as well as you, should be checked up a bit on the fundamentals.

Beauty lies in these jars and bottles and treatments all right, but this isn't the age of miracles. You have to observe a few rules, principally the plain, old-fashioned rules of health, or you won't get to first base.

Sleep and Relaxation Are "Magic" Beauty Formulæ.

One rule is tremendously important from the beauty standpoint, and it seems to us one which we violate all the time. How many of us get enough sleep? Or how many of us can curl up and relax when we've a few spare minutes? Losing sleep or permitting yourself to stay frazzled and frantic all the time is a sin against beauty that takes a heavy, permanent toll. You can't recover the lost ground.

The tired woman can't look her best. Not all the makeup, the hair-do, or the freshening up stunts in the world can serve as a substitute for sleep. Lack of it shows in the eyes, AND around them [of course lack of sleep will give you lines in your face!] and in the skin and in the set of the head. You droop, and nowadays you must be vital or you and your looks are lost in the shuffle.

Young and Middle Aged Women Alike Fail to Get Sleep.

The young ones are the worst offenders, but plenty of middle aged women who could take more rest, thereby storing up beauty for themselves, are just as shortsighted as the girls who tear around nights.

You couldn't make a better New Year resolution than to promise yourself solemnly that you'll get lots of sleep. Eight hours a night, at least.

And then there's the matter of unkinking your nerves. Set faces, down drawn mouths, and a strained look around the eye never were attributes of the good looking woman or the one who looks younger than her years. Nothing could be more ageing. Promise yourself that, beginning today, you're going to relax, to let go in every muscle, to turn off your mind and to help yourself to beauty every single day of the year by mastering the art of relaxation.

If you get enough rest, 1936 should be just another year. It won't be marked as the one in which you began to show your age.

Eleanor Nangle, "through her looking glass," sees everything that is new in the fascinating realm of beauty aids, and tells you about them daily in the Chicago Tribune.

Relief Designs Used in Ceilings of Wall Board

Simple Material Takes the Complicated Patterns as Effectively as any Plaster

THERE are new types of ceilings which are of wall board, handsomely designed to resemble expensive modeled plaster. The designs are raised in relief against the background.

Ceilings strongly affect the "light character" of a room, and these ceilings in relief designs afford a soft, mellow light. They are not expensive, and they are excellent in remodeling work.

Colonial Patterns Accent Early American Decore.

Some of these ceilings of wall board are in colonial relief pattern with just enough design to give the early American touch to the room. The size of the squares in the design may be varied to suit the size of the room, so that such a ceiling may be applied to living room, dining room, or bedroom.

Other wall boards have a Greek pattern which is simple and severe. A more elaborate pattern is the classic type, which is particularly suited to large rooms.

Strips Can Be Fitted Into Irregular Corners.

These ceilings come in strips, so cut that they can be fitted into those irregular shapes and corners which rooms in older homes frequently possess.

When a wall board ceiling of this sort has been painted its textured surface takes on a velvety smoothness which can add much to the charm of the entire room. No joints are visible and all cracks, are, of course, eliminated.

This Week in the Garden

Monday, Jan. 13.

If snow covers the ground, gardening operations must be confined to indoors, although on bright, warm days some pruning may be done. Many plants are best pruned while at rest, or dormant. Grapes, currants, and gooseberries are among these. Never allow an inexperienced workman to do any pruning, or the result may be disastrous. Pruning shade and fruit trees is usually done in late winter or early spring. Shrubs may also be pruned early in the spring. Shrubs attended to every year will keep in a healthy condition and produce sufficient new wood each season to supply abundant bloom.

Tuesday, Jan. 14.

Spraying fruit trees and shrubs for scale should be done during the winter or while the plants are dormant. Lime sulphur, which is widely used for this purpose, may be obtained ready mixed at the supply house. San José scale and blister mite may be controled with this spray. Now is a good time to force twigs of flowering shrubs into bloom. Be sure there are buds on the branches. The easiest to force are pussywillow, golden bell, and Cornelian cherry. Try them.

Wednesday, Jan. 15.

Do not neglect to redesign the garden now, if changes are to be made. There is a world of fun working over the plan until a final plan is made. A plan saves time and money. Indicate each plant on the plan, get the order ready, and be all ready for a good start in the springtime. Give the asparagus fern plenty of water and keep it in a warm room. Toward spring, when growth starts, give it some plant food.

Thursday, Jan. 16.

Many home gardeners have the idea that castor oil, coffee grounds, and tea leaves are good fertilizer for plants, but it is far better to use a commercial fertilizer, for the former have little or no food elements to commend them. Many persons use castor oil for wiping the leaves of flat leaved plants, such as the palm, aspidistra, and corn plant, for it leaves them glossy and clean. Washing the leaves with clear or soapy water is sufficient and effective.

Friday, Jan. 17.

A small microscope is handy for the gardener to distinguish insects on the leaves of house plants. Often red spiders appear in great numbers before they are noticed, but if an observation is made with a microscope occasionally they can be eliminated before serious damage is done. Syringe the foliage frequently to rid plants of this pest. Give the corn plant plenty of water, especially if it has grown quite large, with the pot full of roots.

Saturday, Jan. 18.

Now is a good time to buy a few amaryllis bulbs, for they make fine house plants. Plant the bulb with about half the upper part exposed, the lower part being placed in the soil. Provide good drainage. Water sparingly until the plant shows signs of activity, then increase the supply. The flower appears first, followed by the foliage, when more water should be given. Do not overpot.

Simple Frock in Beige Wool Is Attractive Basis for Varied Gay Accessories.

By Clotilde.

A DRESS which lends itself to a variety of accessories is an asset in any wardrobe. Being a "basic" dress is only one of the virtues of this simple yet attractive model, pattern No. 2876. What is, perhaps, more important, from the standpoint of the woman who enjoys making her own clothes, this delightful little frock may be made in a jiffy, since its lines are adapted to the skill of even the most amateur dressmaker.

Other suggestions in the way of accessories are the following: Collar and belt of black, bright green, wine, brown, or dark blue.

Style No. 2876 is designed for sizes 14, 16, and 18 years, and 36, 38, and 40 inches bust measurement.

Size 16 requires 3¼ yards of 39 inch material, with ½ yard of 35 inch contrasting.

Clothes conscious? Of course you are! And the winter edition of the Chicago Tribune Book of Clotilde Fashions is right on time to guide your seasonal wardrobe to the latest in style. Coats, day and evening frocks, indispensable tips on fabrics and colors, and fashion news for the youngest set, all are presented in this fascinating volume, now on sale for 15 cents, 10 cents, when ordered with a pattern. THE STAMP COLLECTOR

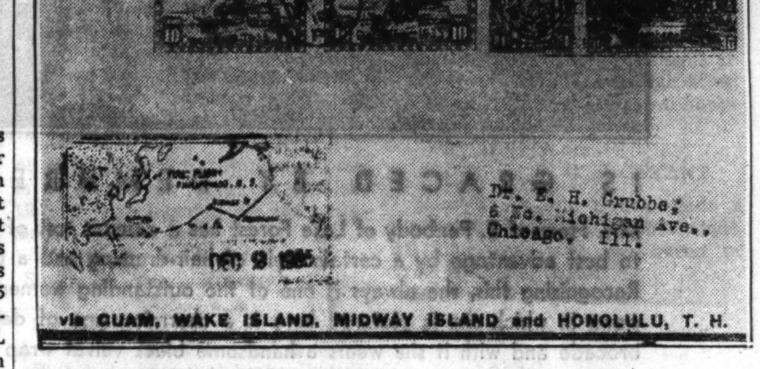
By Richard McP. Cabeen

Mr. Cabeen will answer questions about stamps, except concerning value. Do not ask where stamps may be sold as the Postage Stamps and Coins advertising section adjoining contains offers to buy and sell. Enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope for reply.



This cover was carried from the Philippine Islands to Alameda, Cal., on the return flight of the China Clipper. The stamps are mentioned in an adjoining column. The cover was loaned by Dr. E. H. Grubbe of Chicago.

THE principal illustration in this department today shows a cover carried on the China Clipper on the return voyage of its first trip. The new Philippine government prepared stamps for use on this flight by surcharging the 10 centavos and 30 centavos values of the 1935 pictorial set with a three line inscription reading, "P. I. U. S. — INITIAL FLIGHT—December 1935." Between the second and third lines of the inscription is a drawing of the China Clipper.

This surcharge is printed in gold ink and does not show clearly on these stamps, which are rose carmine and orange red. The postage paid upon this letter amounts to pesos 1.50, or 75 cents American, although the rate from the Philippine Islands was announced at 78 cents.

Complete figures show that 110,865 covers were carried from San Francisco on the first flight of the China Clipper. Hawaii received 46,561 of these; Guam, 19,958, and the Philippines, 44,346. At Hawaii 13,398 covers went on board the plane, 6,430 for transmission to Guam and 6,968 to Manila. At Guam 5,700 covers were taken on board for distribution through Manila.

From these figures it would appear that the least common variety would be the cover bearing the postmark of Guam for the first western flight, and that not more than 5,700 complete sets of "point to point" covers exist for this flight. While figures for the first eastbound flight are not now available, it is understood that fewer than half as many sets were handled.

Commonwealth of the Philippines have been sent in by Maj. W. F. Magill Jr., U. S. A., now stationed at Manila, but for several years in charge of the R. O. T. C. at Waukegan, Ill., and by Dr. E. H. Grubbe of Chicago. The new set contains 5 values, 2, 6, 16, 36, and 50 centavos, all in the same design, which appears to be an allegory representing the new Philippine state taking her place among the nations. The stamps are of very large size, measuring one and seven-eighths by a little over one and one-eighth inches, approximately as shown in the accompanying illustration.

The administrative board of the free port of Matanzas, Cuba, announces that the Republic of Cuba will issue a set of stamps to commemorate the establishment of the Free Zone in the port of Matanzas.

No stone has been left unturned in the attempt to provide philatelic material for the collectors. The complete set includes eight values of regular postage, totaling $1, four values of airpost stamps, totaling 85 cents, a 10 cent special delivery and a 15 cent, special delivery-airpost. In all, the complete set amounts to a face value of $2.10.

The numbers to be printed range from 1,000,000 one cent stamps down to fifty thousand 15 cent special delivery-airmail stamps. The announcement states that 20,000 copies of each value will be issued imperforate.

Club Notes.

The Illinois Valley Stamp club has been reorganized and will meet on the first and third Friday evenings of each month in the basement of the postoffice at La Salle, Ill.

For the first time the exhibition will be competitive with a silver cup for the outstanding entry and three prize ribbons each in a dozen classes. Tables for the bourse were taken as soon as offered and buyers will find a complete line of their favorite stamps on sale.

Poster stamp of the Chicago Philatelic society for the 1936 open house held Jan. 17, 18, 19.

B. L. Voorhees will hold an auction sale in connection with the open house on Friday evening, Jan. 17, and another will be held at 3 p. m. Saturday afternoon by the auction manager of the Chicago Philatelic society. Every one is invited. South clubrooms, La Salle hotel.

Members of the society are not required to pay the customary forwarding fee, others must include 1c with each cover submitted. The director suggests a trial by sending in 10 to 15 self addressed, stamped envelopes. First class postage only.

Edward E. Bryan, P. O. Box 304, Albany, Ore., will sponsor a series of six cachets covering the Battle of the Alamo. Covers will be postmarked on board the battleships Texas, Houston, and Dallas, on dates coinciding with the investment and capture of the fort. Drunken Mother Brings Tragedy Into the Home

Every day there is presented, in the feature columns of the Chicago Tribune, a stimulating article by Miss Blake, who lends friendly counsel on a wide variety of common problems.

By Doris Blake.

THAT the mother was in a liquor-inflamed condition when she aimed a bullet at her young son is one of the charges in the recent sensational shooting incident which colored our front pages the country over. The boy was reported as taking a bottle and draining it before the eyes of the mother in a bravado attempt to show her that he could take it as well as she. Again, it was told that the young son was disgusted with the goings-on of his feminine parent and an outraged fury drove him to the drinking that ended in a bullet in his body.

The truth of what happened in the Livermore shooting incident is not known, but much conjecture has been inspired in conversational quarters as to what an excitable, impressionable young son might do under the circumstances. No matter what his character, of which we know nothing at this writing, the boy appears as tragic a figure as ever developed out of a warring parental environment. However, he is not the object of today's discourse. It's the drinking mother at whom today's objective is aimed. Not this one drinking mother alone, but all drinking mothers.

When a sensational case is developed in print, with private conversation turning upon it frequently, instances are reported of similar tragedy. Maybe not of police record sensationalism, but tragic just the same for those concerned. An instance of a young boy suffering only that hideous suffering that a boy knows when his mother fails him shamefully before his friends, grew out of one of the post-Livermore table conversations and thus reached our ears. The boy was almost nineteen and had recently become enamored of a charming girl. His mother had asked him why he didn't bring Elise, we'll call her, home to meet her. Acting on the spur of the moment one late afternoon after a game, the youth persuaded Elise to come on home and meet "Mother." Mother's liquored condition was such that the boy turned and fled with the girl, threatening himself to come home so dead drunk that night that he'd teach his mother a lesson. Only Elise's good influence persuaded him against carrying out his threat.

Personally, we think that the drinking feminine parent is enough the exception to prove the rule that mothers do not often cause their sons or daughters much humiliation on this score. But where the vice exists, it is horrible for the children. Whatever a father's weakness on this score, and humiliating as it is to sons and daughters, it never is so stabbing in its humiliation as the sight and conduct of a mother under the influence of drink. Whether said children have to confront it alone or in the presence of others, it still is the most humiliating experience a young person can undergo, doubly painful when one outside the family is witness to the disgrace.

Another Case Causes Children to Lead an Abnormal Life.

We know of a case in which the grown son and daughter have become practically isolated from their contemporaries. They do not dare bring a friend into the home for fear of their mother's condition. The son would not need to adopt this isolation except that through sympathy with his sister he voluntarily chooses to remain with her and share the family sorrow. The young man is popular. Girls call him up and invite him places, but something has happened to the chap to prevent a normal, wholesome relationship with girl contemporaries. We don't know whether sons are more sensitive on this subject of erring mothers than are daughters. Being of the opposite sex it is more than probable that they idealize a mother more. It's true that the mother songs all have emanated from the masculine idealists. So, it is reasonable to assume that the blow to a young man who idealizes his mother is a bitter one.

Not that daughters can take their mother's peccadilloes with light grace. But we are speaking of the disillusion of a son when a mother fails him, and fails him in such a vice as drunkenness. That vice, in the masculine mind, is a male prerogative if any one is entitled to it, although, in a father, it never is looked upon with indulgence by even the hardest boiled of sons. Men never will accept the woman who loses herself in liquor for anything but the lower type of woman with which the vice has always been associated. No matter how smart and sophisticated it may seem to the cocktail drinking feminine contingent, the circle that looks upon her drunken antics with tolerance never includes the members of her own family, especially the masculine representatives thereof.

IS GRACED BY DEMURE BEAUTY

Antiques from Orient Have a Strange Beauty

COINCIDENT with the famous exhibition at Burlington house in London, a large Chicago store is showing a magnificent collection of Chinese, Japanese, and Persian antique fabrics, porcelains and objets d'art. It covers the widest range and offers more unique treasures than any other grouping of its kind in the country.

Prices range from a few dollars to many hundreds, depending on the age, workmanship, and history of the item. There are fascinating little netsuke, the carved ornaments used with inro [medicine cases] to delight the heart of anyone who loves objects in miniature. One, smaller than a fifty cent piece, is in the shape of a scarlet dragon's head. This opens to disclose a marvelous little ivory carving of a child, seated.

Another is of a Chinese house boat. The roof can be lifted and inside is a minute family group, complete in every detail. A third is an ivory sculpture of a child eating a melon. The tiny head bends forward and the tongue comes out of the scarlet mouth. The name of the artist is painted on the bottom of each netsuke.

Small Shrines House Buddhas or Goddesses.

The collection of small shrines is also remarkable. These, in ancient days, were given as gifts from one friend or relative to another. They are not quite the size of a woman's hand, frame and all. In each is a buddha or goddess, exquisitely carved, seen against a gold lacker background and with a pair of little lacker doors that close in front.

In a glass case is a set of eighteen Lohans, disciples of Buddha, carved in soapstone for the emperor Chien Lung, who reigned from 1736-1795. Each is an example of almost miraculous skill in minute carving and attention to detail and each is curiously and beautifully colored by the passing of the centuries.

Then, there are the twelve gilt-brass Thibetan buddhas, each representing a sign of the zodiac, each highly decorative. And there are precious snuff bottles, elaborate boxes, many, many other tiny items.

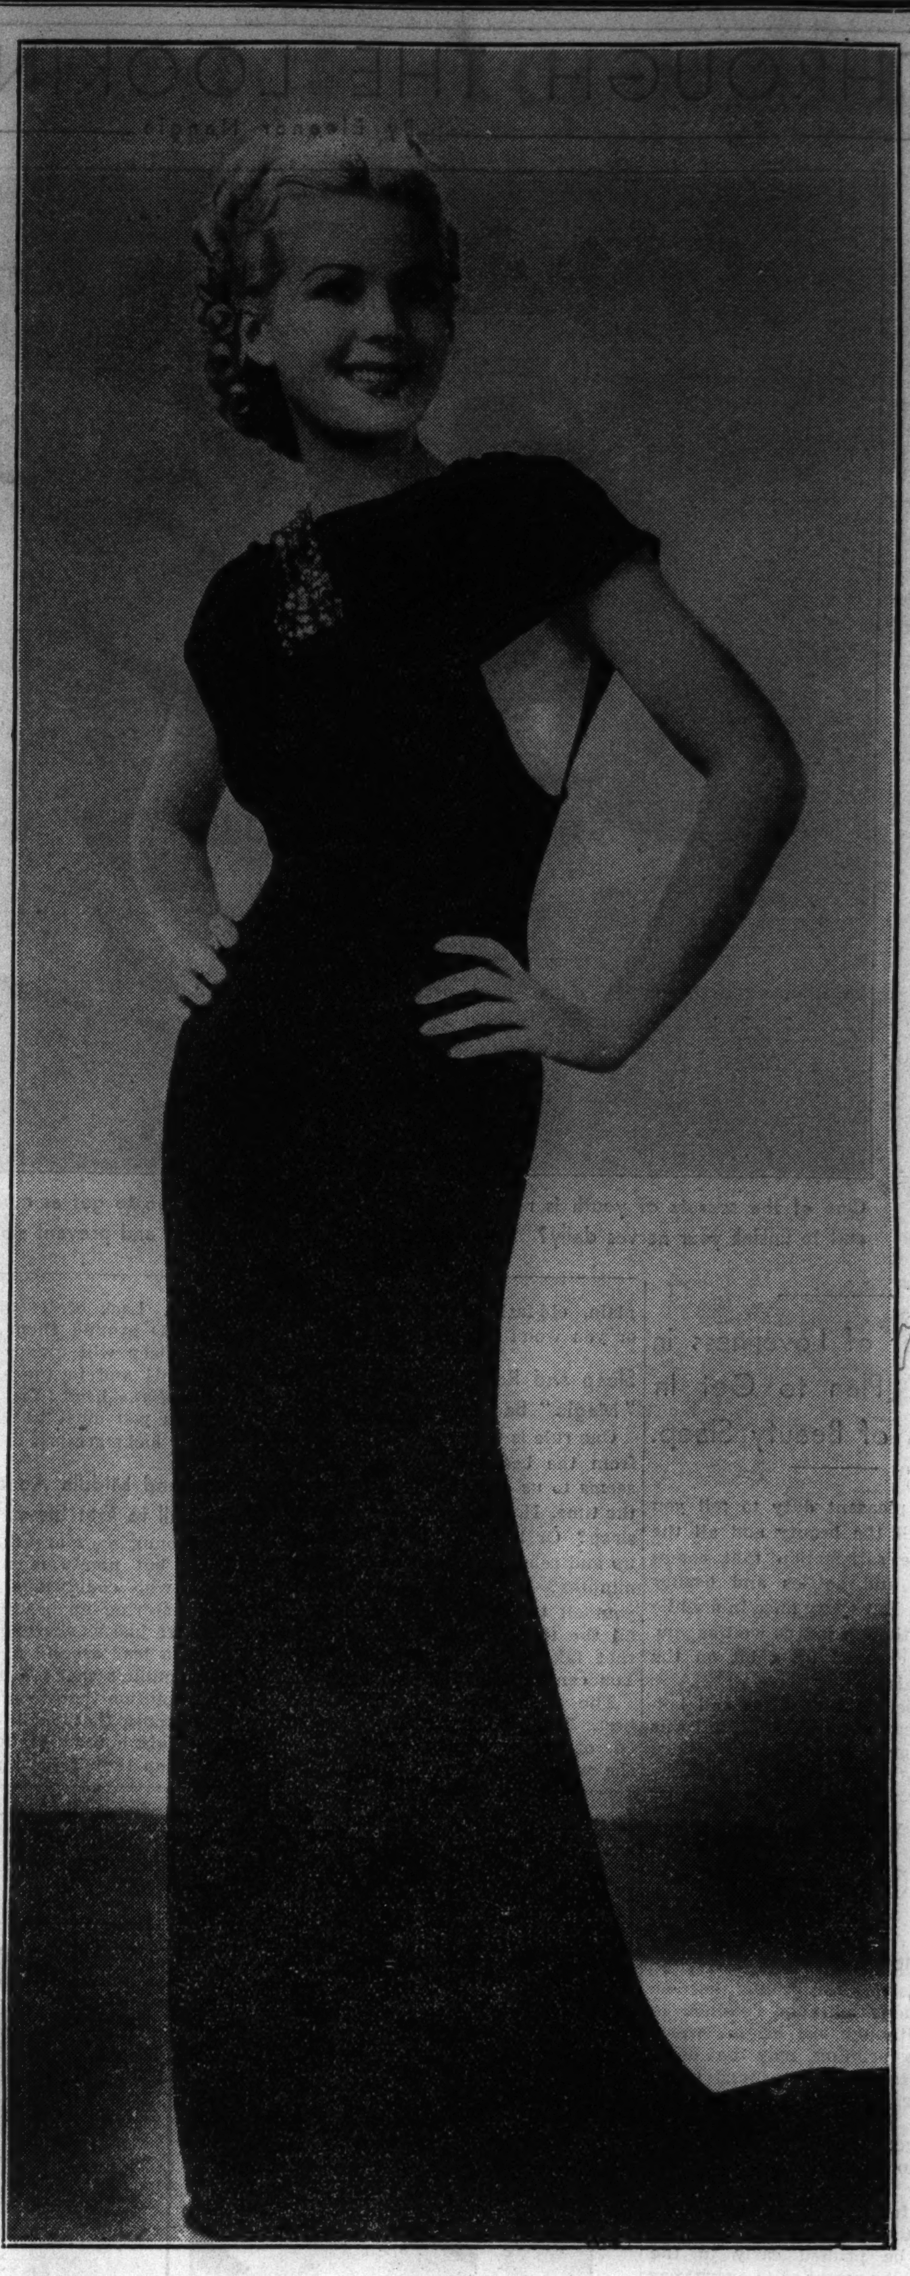
Two huge mirrors are framed in elaborately worked gold lacker. There are panels of a curious palace screen decorated with bas-reliefs in jade, coral, carnelian, and cloisonné depicting bowls of fruit, incense jars, and vases. There are gorgeous porcelains: large and small vases, figures, and covered jars.

Most interesting to anyone who loves beautiful, soft colors and fabrics are the elaborate priest robes, squares, long obi pieces and brocades. An imperial yellow throne cover is so lovely it takes the breath away. A huge, magnificent robe once worn by the Delhi Llama of Thibet is really a museum piece, as are some of the gorgeous kossu [woven cut silks].

These textiles are bought for use as wall hangings, as table covers and runners, as scarfs for grand pianos, etc. They vary in price from a few dollars to hundreds. They are carefully protected from dust and handling.



GOWN OF BROWN VELVET

Safari brown fashions this formal gown of velvet. There is a clever introduction of gold pailette banding on the shoulder and a graceful sweep of train.

Linen or Cotton Yarns Make a Frock for Casual Wear

By Jean Macdonald.

ON many occasions one has felt the need of a simple, two piece dress to "fill in," yet not wanted to spend many weeks knitting such a frock. But there are many smart models which possess the maximum of style and require a minimum amount of knitting time.

The two piece dress illustrated today has a clever, one sided opening at the shoulder with three decorative buttons across the front. The entire dress is made in the good old stockinette stitch. The sleeves are slightly puffed, with a band fitting tightly around the top arm. A belt of contrasting suede matching the buttons may be used instead of a felt to match, if desired. Linen, both nubby and plain, will be in the front rank of yarn favorites for summer for those knitters who do not desire to spend a great amount of money yet have the time and inclination to knit. A delightful new cotton with a pretty nub which is on the market for summer wear is most inexpensive. An entire dress may be made for less than five dollars. And one joy of this dress is that it may be made on a large needle.

HOW TO ORDER

If you wish instruction for knitting the short sleeved two piece "fill in" dress illustrated today, send 10 cents in stamps or coin to Jean Macdonald, CHICAGO TRIBUNE, Chicago. Be sure to send name and address with your letter. Be sure to include the following measurements:

Harmony of Colors Creates Distinction in American Quilt

By Nancy Cabot.

"Venetian Net" is one of the quilt patterns about which one cannot find a sufficient number of adjectives to describe it—especially in the completed coverlet. The rose and green scheme, with a touch of blue in the rose flower, creates a perfect French touch in a thoroughly early American quilt design. Each block measures 15 inches square, and 42 applique blocks comprise a whole quilt.

For a limited period Nancy Cabot offers 10 quilt patterns of her own choice at a price of 10 cents for the group (12 cents by mail). Address Nancy Cabot, Chicago Tribune, or call at one of the Tribune Public Service offices: One South Dearborn street or Tribune Tower.

Soybean Scores Again in Brand New Confection

By Virginia Garberson.

ANOTHER score for the soybean! And this triumph is one to endear it forever to questing hostesses and between-meal munchers.

By a curing and roasting process the increasingly versatile soy bean has become a crunchy, nutlike confection with a distinctive flavor that is wellnigh irresistible. In appearance these munchables are about the size of a pistachio nut and of a toasted golden color. [No artificial coloring or flavoring here—just the natural goodness of the soy bean.]

Not only the hostess who's looking for something new as a beverage accompaniment but the homemaker who is sincerely interested in the nutritional angle of the food she serves welcomes this new product. The latter knows that the soy bean is high in both protein and energy giving fat and low in carbohydrate—sugar and starch—and for that reason accepts the confection for its undeniable nutritional value.

This soy bean triumph can stand on its own merits as a beverage companion, or add its rich flavor and crunchiness to a great number of "made" dishes. In place of croutons in soup, stirred into homemade candy, or tucked into stuffed dates, as a decorative sprinkling for cake frosting, in place of nuts in cookies or cake batter—it's delightfully at home.

Or the small nutlike bits may be coarsely crushed with a rolling pin and blended with homemade ice cream or the batter for pancakes or waffles.

The cost of the new product, put up in two sizes of glass jars [another note: it refuses to become rancid upon storage despite its resemblance to the nut family] is surprisingly low. It's available at a number of large food shops in the city.

Devotion

By Eleanor Jewett.

A doll came for Christmas,
All shining and bright,
With pink cheeks and ribbons
And shoes buttoned tight.

The little old doll
Of last year was laid
In the cradle to sleep
While the new dolly played
With her little girl mother.
Then she took a rest
And I heard Helen whisper:
"I like both my dolls best!"

Vienna Congress Dance Highlight of London Season

The outstanding dance of the season was the Vienna Congress ball, given at the Austrian legation by the Austrian minister, Baron Frankenstein, one of the most successful of the London "hostesses." He has no wife to help him, but his parties are known for all the small but unforgetable niceties that charm his guests.

LONDON

Among his guests were Mr. Henry and Lady Honor Channon and the Baroness Ravensdale. A great many of the guests wore the actual costumes their ancestors had worn at the famous ball of more than a century ago. Others wore exact duplicates copied from the original and still others wore just dresses of the period or fancy dress. Lady Ravensdale wore a blue velvet riding habit, which is a most becoming costume for her and one in which she is extraordinarily happy. It had a white frill high up to the neck, and a plumed bonnet of blue velvet.

One of the most striking figures was the host, Baron Frankenstein, dressed as Prince Metternich in a dark green uniform with touches of scarlet and much gold lace. He carried a lorgnette. Another gorgeous uniform was that of Lord Gerald Wellesley, who represented his ancestor, the great duke of Wellington. He wore his ancestor's original tunic and the Garter ribbon, the blue of which has faded to the palest shade. The golden fleece hung around his neck.

Extra Bedroom May Serve as Rumpus Room

Ingeniously Furnished, It's a Constant, Convenient Source of Recreation.

If you want to make a small dining room seem larger, if you wonder how to furnish it to best advantage, send for "Making the Most of the Dinette," a booklet by Edith Weigle. It is 3 cents by mail, 2 cents at the Tribune Public Service offices, 1 South Dearborn street, and Tribune Tower lobby.

By Edith Weigle.

MANY people with small homes are turning a bedroom into an extra living room or rumpus room. After all, it's pretty nice to have one spot in the house where you can always find a game or bridge table set up, ready for fun; where you don't have to rummage around to find the backgammon board—where everything is at hand. Parents will enjoy this room, and certainly the children will, for here they can be by themselves and have a jolly evening without disturbing the comfort of the rest of the family.

A Chicago store recently set up such a room to show how smartly and how reasonably it could be done. A picture of it is shown today. One of the most important items in its furnishing is the studio coach, showing that, after all, the bedroom need not be entirely sacrificed. To convert the place into a guest room all one needs to do is pull out the couch into the double bed or twin beds into which it transforms itself.

This studio couch has extremely comfortable inner spring mattresses. You may select the upholstery from a number of colors and fabrics. In the photograph a green, nubby homespun is used.

The wall paper is green and white with a silver star pattern, the Venetian blinds are all-white, and the effective, sweeping draperies are of black glazed chintz trimmed with black and white cotton tape. A zebra skin rug is placed on the carpeting in front of the couch.

All the furniture in this rumpus room was selected from the unpainted furniture section and was painted in black and white. The card table chairs have white letherette seats. Glassware is green and white, and black and white.

A large, circular, unframed mirror is hung above the couch. On either side of it are decorative, black ceramic masks. Between the windows is a cabinet offering ample space for bottles and glasses. The lower shelves, behind solid wooden doors, hold games, books, and magazines. In the rear corner is a small portable bar.

In another model room in this display another studio couch solves the problem of making a young girl's bedroom also her living room. It is placed against the prettily papered walls with a round lamp table at one end and a convenient nest of tables at the other. There are a comfortable lounge chair in the room, a modern chest of drawers with circular mirror above, and a modern, asymmetrical dressing table with accompanying bench. The color scheme is powder blue, dusty pink, and white.

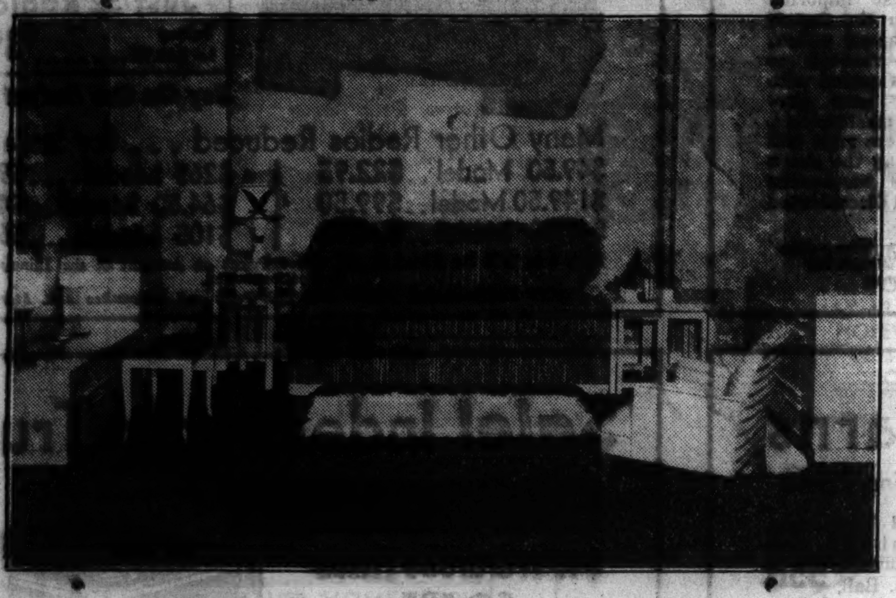
DECORATED FOR A DUAL PURPOSE

This rumpus room is furnished in pieces from the unpainted furniture section of a large Chicago store. They have been painted black and white. A comfortable studio couch can transform the room into a guest room, if necessary. The color scheme is black, white, and green. An ideal furnishing plan for the limited budget.



Any young girl would enjoy her bedroom more if it looked like a living room, as well. Here a studio couch is the bed. Modern furniture is painted a charming, soft pink. Walls are done in a powder blue and white paper. The armchair is covered in a satin striped eggshell tinted fabric. Again the furniture is from unpainted pieces.

New Trends in Decore Seen at Furniture Shows

Maple goes modern. . . . A dining room suite has interchangeable pieces, a three unit sideboard, chairs with stunning blue and white upholstery, a table with extensions at either end, concealed when not in use. . . . A comfortable living room armchair is equipped with an attached magazine and book receptacle. . . . In the line of another firm a round table has a top that revolves, lazy Susan fashion, and is lighted by a lamp which is permanently fixed to the frame. . . . A small bedroom couch shows graceful lines, is nicely upholstered, and has a table for books at one end. . . . Mirrors are made to look like small windows with overhanging maple cornices. . . .

For southern use or for the terrace next summer, a gorgeous long table of glass and black metal, reminiscent of the delicate black iron grillework still to be found on old New Orleans houses. . . . A smaller round table with glass top and a frame of delectable sky blue metal. Two types of chair to match. . . . Unusual, extremely decorative wall decorations by a Chicago artist, some framed in gilded wood, others in natural wood, others in deep shadow box frames. . . . All the frames made especially for the pictures. . . . Some of the pictures done on linen and other fabrics. . . .

Gun metal mirror glass appears in the tops of some of the newest coffee and cocktail tables. . . . It is seen in a square ultramodern walnut living room table, and again in a beautiful small mahogany coffee table that has been given a finish to make it resemble an eighteenth century antique. . . .

"Parliaments" of English Provinces Novel Societies

LONDON

One of the most distinctly English institutions in this country, with no imitators anywhere, so far as is known, is the "old men's parliaments" in the provincial towns.

These are the debating societies maintained by the village veterans of 60 or over. Some of them boast an average age of 75 years.

Many years ago an Englishman told about them. He declared roundly that they were the most remarkable institutions in the country, that the speeches were short, pungent, whimsical, surprisingly original, and "pig-headed and thoroughly delicious."

And ever since then one is reminded of what he said by the little announcements appearing in the provincial newspapers, to the effect that "the old men's parliament of Heckmondwike is entertaining its friends this week."

There will be songs by the veterans and a favorite recitation or two, speeches, food, and another year will have rolled around.

RED FRINGE

Long, deep fringe accents the simplicity of this red evening gown. Red fringe to match the red crepe drips down the front and from the edge of the shoulder cape. Hair ornaments are of pearls.

Gay New Cloth Transforms the Kitchen Table

Miss Winslow will be glad to help you plan your kitchen color scheme. Remember to inclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope for your reply.

By Claire Winslow.

KITCHENS aren't the dull, drab things they were a decade ago, before color came dancing through the door. Now walls, ceiling, woodwork, linings of cupboards, even sinks and drain boards, are gay as the tints in an old fashioned garden.

A prominent feature of the color scheme just now is a new kind of tablecloth for the kitchen table. It transforms its workaday appearance at once and makes it a most inviting place for breakfast or a snack at noon, or for sandwiches and hot drinks after the movie in the evening. And it's immensely practical, as well as decorative, for it is a lackered fabric, requiring no laundering. It is NOT oilcloth. Because of its sealed surface it is easy to clean with a wet, soapy cloth.

Resists Cracking, Impervious to Stains.

This material resists cracking and even a warm iron won't hurt it. For instance, you can dampen the back and then press it, if you wish. You can spill ketchup, jam, or other foods, liquid or solid, on it with no damage whatever. Stick it into a pan of hot water and the bright colors will not fade or run. In other words, this table cover is a grand thing to have for hard wear in the kitchen, or in the breakfast nook or dinette.

Our favorite pattern is a morning glory design in bright yellow on a brown lattice against a pure white ground. Or you could have a red ground with the flowers in white, or a light green with white. Then there are solid white and solid blue cloths, the latter a delightful, soft, powder blue.

Accompanying the cloths are fifteen inch wide, scalloped edge strips for the shelf, as well as the regular pretty edging that you attach to the shelf with colored thumb tacks. You also can get the tablecloth fabric itself by the yard, if you prefer. It comes fifty-four inches wide. And it's not at all expensive.

Can Be Used for Window Valence.

Besides the delightful morning glory design there are plaids in various light colors and there are numerous polka dots. The dots vary in size, some being as large as a twenty-five cent piece, and they appear on cloths of red, of green, of orange, and of yellow.

The photograph today gives an idea of how attractive a set of this lackered fabric can be. On the dinette table is the morning glory cloth; the shelf edging to match is seen ornamenting the cupboard, and at the window clever use was made of the fifteen inch wide shelving, one piece forming a valance and two other strips making panels at either side.

All of the items mentioned today are sold in the household utilities section of a large Chicago store and elsewhere in towns all over the country.

LACKERED AND WEAR-RESISTANT

The gay curtains, tablecloth, and shelf edging used in this attractive dining nook are made of a new lackered fabric in morning glory design. This material is not oilcloth. It is easy to keep clean, requires no laundering, resists cracking, and won't be damaged if you spill the ketchup or jam on it. Sold in a large Chicago store.

Decoration Queries

Query: "Will you please advise me about a chair? My living room has cream stippled walls with dark woodwork. Walnut end tables. White accessories. The settee is mulberry with pink and pale yellow floral design and the chair is the same. An occasional chair is in green with the same floral pattern. I want another chair but do not know what to purchase.—Mrs. G. K."

Answer: Either a gold damask upholstery or one in a rosy-beige would be most attractive with the furniture you describe, so I suggest you look for this when you go shopping for your new chair.

Query: "I have two doors on the inside wall space of my living room. One is the stair door. What kind of hanging can I use here?—A. C. A."

Answer: You do not tell the color of your rug, walls, draperies, or upholstery, so it is almost impossible to advise you. However, you could safely use a neutral tone such as sand or beige. Monk's cloth in natural color [a gray-beige] would be suitable.

Old Bookcase Can Be Changed to Wall Niche

MANY a room in many a middle aged house has the old fashioned type of bookcases, one which is extremely low or extremely high and fitted with glass doors. It isn't a difficult nor an expensive matter to have these bookcases changed into wall niches which will add a modern and attractive touch to your room.

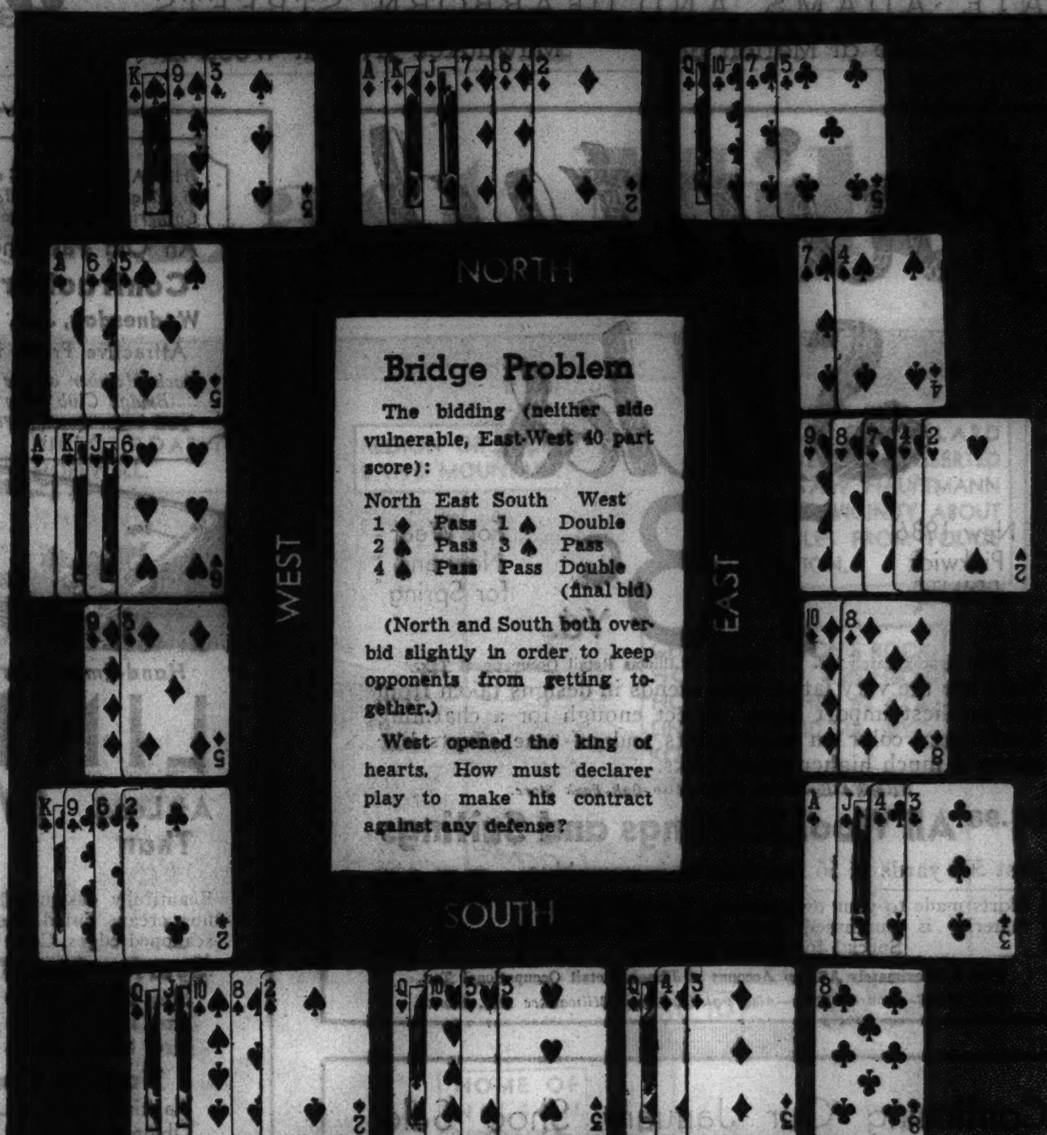
Contract According to Culbertson



Bridge Problem

The bidding (neither side vulnerable, East-West 40 part score):

North	East	South	West
1 ♦	Pass	1 ♠	Double
2 ♠	Pass	3 ♠	Pass
4 ♠	Pass	Pass	Double (final bid)

(North and South both overbid slightly in order to keep opponents from getting together.)

West opened the king of hearts. How must declarer play to make his contract against any defense?

SOLUTION: North ruffs and leads any club. If East wins and returns a heart (best defense), dummy ruffs with king and leads trumps till ace is taken. East can never regain lead, and defenders win only three tricks—one spade, one heart, and one club. East's club entry must be removed before trumps are drawn to prevent his leading hearts through South when dummy is out of trumps.

By ELY CULBERTSON

THERE are many terms in bridge that are freely used by millions of players but really understood by very few. Since the advent of contract such glib phrases as sign-off, cue bid, interference bid, and forcing pass have become the stock in trade of players who still should be wrestling with the fundamentals of the game. This is unfortunate. There can be no great profit in learning to be a parrot, whereas true understanding is bound to be rewarded.

Let us take up the case of the average player's bête noir, the forcing pass.

Like every other valuable bidding or playing weapon, the forcing pass is nothing more than the application of pure logic to specific situations. Here is one.

The bidding has been:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	3 ♠	4 ♥

South holds:

♠ A Q J 8 6 ♥ 4 2 ♦ A Q 8 ♣ Q J 5

It is quite true that he has better than a minimum bid and is entitled to contract for game after his partner's jump bid. But if he exercises this right he is showing an abysmal ignorance of correct bidding procedure. He has only one proper bid at this point—a forcing pass! Bridge terminology aside, is it not supremely logical to suppose that North, having already given a game force, will take appropriate action over the opposing four heart bid? Such action may well be a penalty double, paying a splendid dividend. But if South, who cannot himself double, bids four spades, obviously his partner is robbed of the privilege of choice between four hearts doubled and four spades.

South	West	North	East
2 ♠	Pass	2 N.T.	3 ♦
Pass!

South's first bid instructed his partner to keep the bidding open to game. His pass over three diamonds cannot alter or withdraw those instructions; he simply wishes North to make a choice that he himself cannot make. North may have a hand more suited to a three diamond double than to any other contract; he must not be deprived of the opportunity for voicing his choice.

There are other subtle variations of forcing passes, but the player who thoroughly digests the reasoning which governs them will be equipped for any emergency.

I take pleasure in presenting an interesting letter from a bridge enthusiast in South America:

Mr. Ely Culbertson, New York City.

Dear Sir: In the Phœnix Club of Lima, where we Americans and English play bridge daily—and with frequent hot arguments about "playing Culbertson"—the hand I am inclosing was dealt recently, and the outcome was so startling that I have thought it worth while sending to you. After looking at the hand you can imagine the ragging I got.

Very truly yours,

C. E. GUYANT.

Players Often Ignorant of Terms

How North and South made a small slam in hearts doubled, with all four aces and the queen of trumps against them.

Both sides vulnerable.

North: ♠ K Q 10 8 7 ♥ K J 6 5 4 2 ♦ 5 3 ♣ —

West: ♠ J 9 3 ♥ A Q ♦ K J 9 8 6 ♣ Q 9 6

East: ♠ A 6 5 4 2 ♥ — ♦ A Q 10 7 4 ♣ A 4 2

South: ♠ — ♥ 10 9 8 7 3 ♦ 2 ♣ K J 10 8 7 5 3

Mr. Guyant's explanation:

"South started the bidding with a pass.

"West, a notoriously weak bidder, bid one diamond. North then bid one spade, and East (myself), knowing his partner, bid one no trump. South came out with two clubs, West kept on with two diamonds, and then North told his partner of his second suit: two hearts. I had to forget no-trump in view of the heart bid, so I jumped my partner to game in diamonds, thinking that would end the bidding. South, however, thought his freak distribution was worth a chance and bid five hearts. West went crazy and bid a small slam in diamonds, and North, figuring that a one or two down was better than losing the rubber, bid the slam in hearts. Naturally I doubled, and the rest passed.

"The play: I had to lead, and, as it turned out, if I had led the ace of my partner's original bid (diamonds), I would have set them one trick, but I figured from the bidding and the apparent distribution that North probably had no diamonds, so I made the fatal lead of the ace of spades. This was trumped in dummy, a small club was then trumped in the bidder's hand, and the king of spades led for a discard of the lone diamond in dummy. After the trumps were cleared there was nothing to it, as the spades were all good (the jack falling to the queen), and the only trick lost was the ace of hearts."

All the way from California comes the latest tall tale of bridge.

It seems that a certain club in Los Angeles specializes in supervised games for players who wish to "brush up." At one of these games an elderly lady appealed to the supervisor for his advice as to her best opening lead. He politely said, "Lead the top of your partner's bid," and hurried away to another table, where he was needed.

Several minutes later he saw the lady trying to attract his attention by means of frantic gestures. He sped to her side and to his amazement perceived that she still had not made the opening lead.

"Why, Mrs. Blank," he said, "I told you to lead the top of your partner's bid suit."

"Yes, I know," she answered, "but you forgot to tell me which of these gentlemen is my partner!"

Today's Questions

Question: My partner and I were vulnerable, the opponents were not. Partner opened the bidding with one spade, next hand bid two hearts. My hand was: ♠ 9 8 7 5 4 3 ♥ 9 6 ♦ 7 5 2 ♣ Q 4. Should I have bid two or three spades?

Answer: You should have passed! Without even one-half honor trick, any bid you make at this stage is sure to confuse your partner as to your holding and will almost certainly end disastrously. An immediate free raise must be based on honor tricks plus distribution—not on a string of trumps alone.

Question: In playing a four spade contract I had to finesse for the queen of trumps. I led the jack from the dummy, and the player on my right half drew a card, replaced it, fiddled around, and finally followed with a small trump. I finessed and lost to the queen. Later it developed that my right-hand opponent had a singleton. I accused him of unethical conduct, at which he became very angry and maintained he was privileged to play his cards as he saw fit. Was I wrong in my accusation?

Answer: You most certainly were not wrong. From your description of the play it is obvious that you would have lost to the trump queen in any event, but that does not condone the conduct of the player who "fiddled."

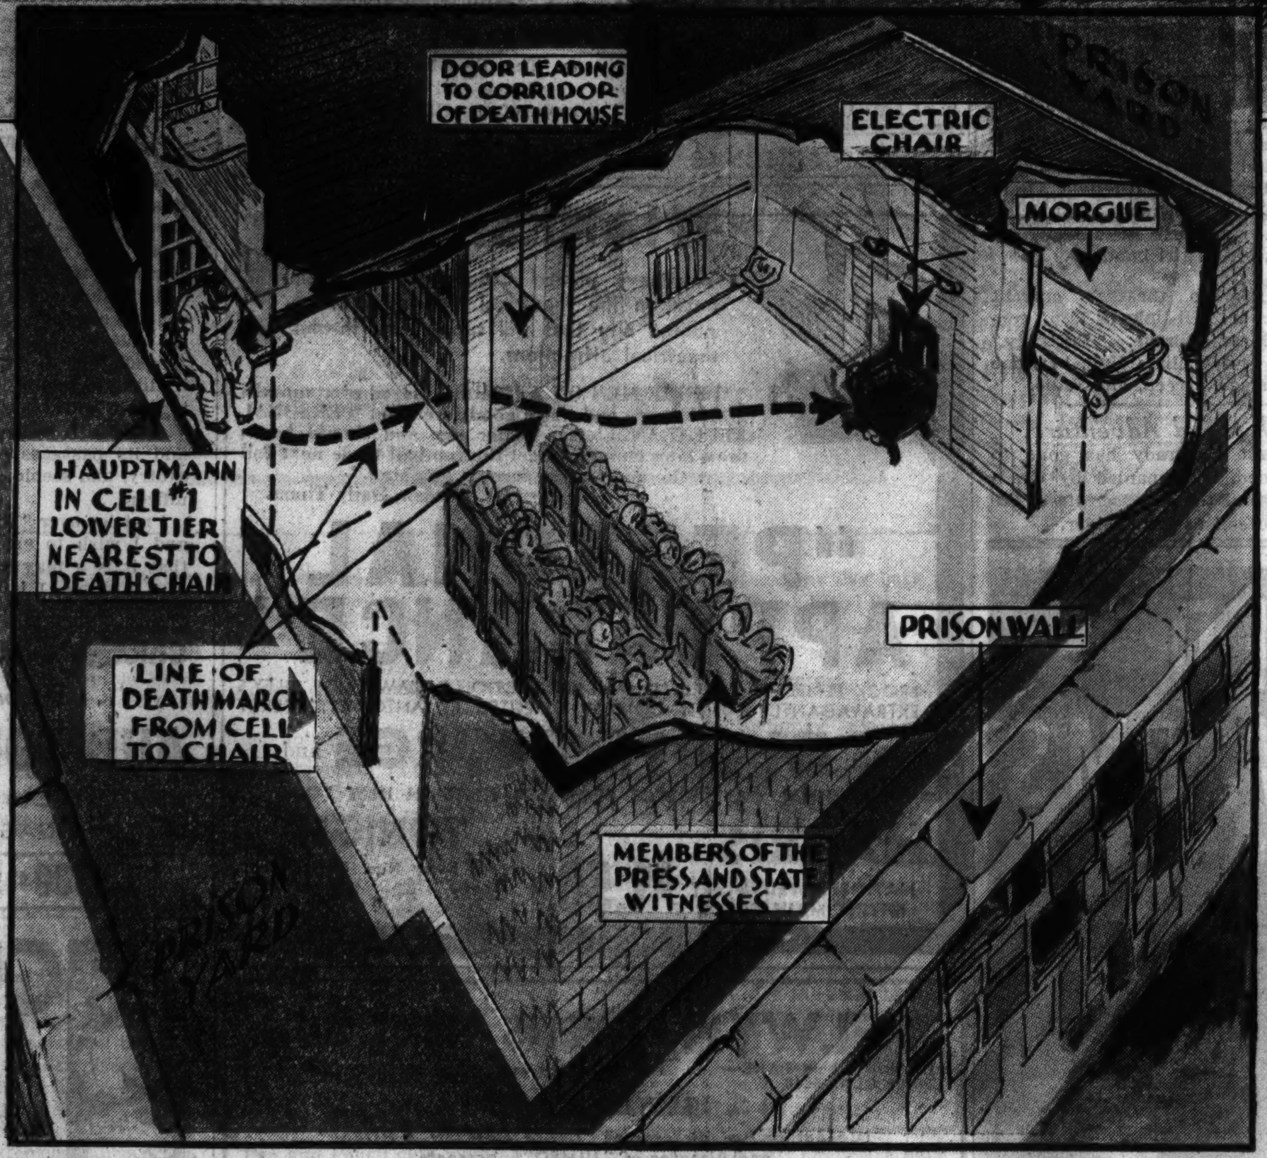
Bruno Hauptmann's Last Mile!



Above: Scene of kidnaping, the Lindbergh home near Hopewell, N. J. Below: Death house in New Jersey state prison at Trenton.

Bruno Richard Hauptmann

$1,000,000 Expended in Man Hunt

By JOSEPH U. DUGAN

WHEN and if Bruno Richard Hauptman walks the few feet from his Trenton prison death cell to the execution chamber, jus around the corner, the cost of bringing him to justice—paid by the state of New Jersey, the federal government, the state of New York, Colonel Lindbergh, and other private individuals—will have been approximately a million dollars.

The final cost to the state of New Jersey will be the executioner's fee of $150, perhaps another $50 for expenses attendant on disposition of the body, and the nominal cost of the electricity which will bring Hauptmann to the end of his "last mile."

The search for Bruno was the most intensified and the most costly man hunt in the history of the United States. An army of police and a huge staf of special investigators, representing New Jersey, New York, and the government were directly in charge. Indirectly concerned were the police forces of every community in this and other countries and scores of experts in various fields of investigation who volunteered their aid. The cost of the special investigators for the two states and the government alone amounted to $284,000. It would be conservative to add another $100,000 to that figure to arrive at the approximate total cost of the search for the slayer.

Next came the exhaustive preparations for the trial under the direction of Attorney General David T. Wilentz of New Jersey, chief of the prosecution staf. The state's bill on only one of a dozen expense items, the cost incident to the services of investigators for the prosecutor and witnesses, amounted to $32,250. The fee of a special assistant prosecutor was $10,000.

The trial lasted forty-three days, during which the state paid the jury $1,500 in cash and paid another $2,000 for the jury's board. Handwriting experts cost $25,000. Twenty special courtroom policemen cost $4,300. The stenographic record came to $8,000. Because the salaries of the judge, the prosecutor and his assistants, and state and other police officers would have been paid anyway, it is unnecessary to include them in the total.

Such incidental expenses as telephone calls, telegrams, cables, and trips to Europe by investigators cost about $50,000. Investigation of the hoax perpetrated by John Hughes Curtis early in the investigation cost $15,000. The investigation of the wood expert, Arthur Koehler, cost $10,000.

Even after Bruno's conviction the costs of the case continued to mount. On a showing by his attorneys that he was unable to finance an appeal, the state of New Jersey assumed this burden, which, added to the cost of fighting the same appeal, amounted to approximately $80,000. The appeal was first denied by the New Jersey Court of Errors, and the United States Supreme court refused to review the case.

Heading the list of private individuals who spent huge sums in aiding the various investigations is, of course, Colonel Lindbergh. First he paid a $50,000 ransom, of which only $15,000 was recovered. It was reported he spent at least an additional $75,000 in investigations. His friend and counseler, Col. Henry Breckenridge, spent $10,000. Dr. John F. Condon spent $5,000. It was estimated by Assistant Attorney General Joseph A. Lanigan of New Jersey that the unlisted miscellaneous expenses of the two states involved and the government and police departments and private individuals throughout the country amounted to at least $200,000.

Thus the total cost of the country's most celebrated criminal case reaches the huge total of close to a million dollars. The final enactment of the tragic drama, the execution of Hauptmann, will be by comparison an inexpensive procedure.

Executioner to Get a Fee of $150

The final fee of $150 will go to Robert G. Elliott, official executioner for New Jersey, as he is for the states of Massachusetts, New York, Delaware, and Pennsylvania. Elliott, whose hand will officially avenge one of America's most frightful crimes, is not the least of the many interesting figures which have appeared in the Hauptmann case.

Elliott is 61 years old, married, and the father of two children. When not engaged in the grim occupation of closing the switch to send a deadly current of electricity into the occupant of an execution chair he lives quietly with his family in Richmond Hills, N. Y., where he conducts an electrical supply business. Elliott was appointed official executioner of the five states mentioned following the suicide ten years ago of his predecessor, John Hilbert.

Elliott's bearing is dignified and reserved. He shuns publicity. For several years his identity was kept secret, state officials fearing that friends of criminals he executed might seek revenge on the executioner. Strangely, Elliott first received wide publicity because of just such an act of revenge. In 1928, a short while after he had officiated at the executions of Sacco and Vanzetti, who were convicted of murder in Massachusetts, gangsters learned where Elliott lived and bombed his home. The attack apparently did not shake his nerve, for he was back on the job as soon as his services as executioner were needed again.

The only time he has suffered a "case of nerves" at an execution, according to his own admission, was when he turned on the current which sent Ruth Snyder to her death in New York several years ago. It was the first time he had been called upon to execute a woman. Otherwise his job has never bothered him. He looks upon it as no more than a job, feeling that the responsibility for taking life is completely that of the state by which he is employed.

Elliott will not admit how many persons he has executed, but the number undoubtedly is well over a hundred. Of these many were celebrated criminals, but none of them more so than Bruno Richard Hauptmann. Because he never publicly expresses any opinion about the cases of the persons he is called upon to put to death, Elliott has not and probably will not express his views on the case of the Lindbergh baby kidnap slayer. For that reason he is probably the only principal figure in the case who has not been called upon or volunteered to make a statement.

Only a little less taciturn concerning his fate has been Hauptmann himself. In spite of reports in recent weeks that the convicted slayer was "cracking under the strain," persons who have observed Bruno in his death cell have expressed the conviction that he will go to the electric chair with the same cold, unemotional attitude he has shown since his arrest.

His principal occupation as he sits in his 12-by-12 cell, just ten paces from the death chamber, has been reading, chiefly the Bible.

Col. Mark O. Kimberling, the prison warden, commented on the stolid German's attitude.

'Squaring the Circle' Satirizes Bolshevik Customs

Russ Humor in Moscow Play at Blackstone

Chicago Theater List Loses "The Old Maid" and Draper's Sketches.

By Charles Collins.

THE six playbills with which the Chicago stage decorated itself for the celebration of the holidays were reduced to four with last night's departures of "The Old Maid" and Ruth Draper. These offerings did not desert us because of discouragement, but merely because they had fulfilled their contractual arrangements as to length of engagement, and other bookings summoned them elsewhere.

"The Old Maid," which is spending the first half of this week in Milwaukee, has a 12,000 mile tour on its schedule, and thus it will contribute nobly to the rehabilitation of the drama in the vast, mysterious region known in theatrical argot as "the road." The entire nation outside of New York City is included in that designation of provincialism.

This play, incidentally, was the innocent cause of much annoyance among the dramatic critics in New York. The fact that it was selected as the blue ribbon work of the last year by a committee of Columbia university professors threw the Broadway literati into such a state of peevishness that they decided to choose a prize play for themselves in the future and to give the award an official aspect with a certificate of honor and other appropriate symbols. Their choice for last year probably would have been "The Children's Hour." This play may not come to Chicago because its management fears the official frown and use of the license revoking power.

Russian Comedy at the Blackstone.

The Russian comedy called "Squaring the Circle" puts the Blackstone theater back on the playgoing map with pleasant effect. The piece is a novelty; it gives curious Americans a whiff of bolshevik atmosphere in a Moscow tenement without obvious propaganda for the questionable joys of communism. It is acted, moreover, in good professional style.

The customers who have been vexed by some of the odd lots of drama that have crept into the Blackstone of recent years need not shy away from this offering. They will find, among other things, an excellent character study by Muriel Kirkland of a Gracie Allen of the Russian proletariat; an authoritative portrait by Hugh Buckler of a jolly commissar, and Glenn Hunter, telescoping his words in the way that made him famous as an actor of emotional boys ten and fifteen years ago.

Light Satire of Soviet Customs.

"Squaring the Circle" is said to be the only play written and sanctioned for staging during the history of the soviet republics that was not top heavy with propaganda for communism and pompous with that reformatory, Marxian attitude toward life which I have nicknamed "ze great beeg social significance." This claim is inaccurate to a certain extent; it contains the usual propaganda, communicated, however, with a light satirical effect, and I have no doubt that many Russians have swallowed it without knowing that their depressing Utopia was being kidded by an expert.

Experts in contemporary Russian literature inform me that the author of "Squaring the Circle," Valentine Katayev, was born in 1897; that he was a lively young left wing journalist when the bolsheviks chased the mensheviks into Siberia, and that he has published successful novels under the titles, "The Embezzlers" and "Time—Forward." His other plays include "The Flowered Path," "A Million Torments," and dramatizations of his novels.

Past Performances of Muriel Kirkland.

Miss Kirkland, who acts the quaint little bride of the "bourgeois swamp" [a communist sneer at home comforts] deserves identification. Her career began in 1923 in Cincinnati with Stuart Walker's stock company; she made her New York debut in 1924 as Maria in a revival of "The School for Scandal," and she has had leading rôles in two notable hits—"Strictly Dishonorable," in 1929, and "The Greeks Had a Word for It," in 1930. She has also had her fling in the movies, in "Cocktail Hour," "Hold Your Man," "Nana," "Little Man, What Now," and The White Parade."

DANCE STARS SAYING GOODBY

Veloz and Yolanda, who ended their long run in the Empire room of the Palmer house last Wednesday, are now the stars of the stage show at the Chicago theater. This will probably be their last appearance here for a long period. [Bloom Photo.]

Veloz-Yolanda Say Good-by at the Chicago

THE Chicago theater's current stage show features the famous dancers, Veloz and Yolanda, in a farewell engagement. They have bookings which will keep them away from Chicago until late in 1937. With them appear Shep Fields and their orchestra, and a juvenile juggler, Boy Foy. An added attraction is Red Hodgson, former trumpeter in the Earl Burtnett band, now famous as the originator of the current song hit, "The Music Goes 'Round and Around." Veloz and Yolanda are giving a dance to the song.

The Palace theater presents on its stage the Weaver Brothers and Elviry, rural comedians, with a score of "home folks" assistants. Their antics require the best part of an hour. The colored singer, Ada Brown, and the dancing acrobatics of the Five Reillys are other items of entertainment.

Ed Lowry, master of ceremonies, offers a musical revue at the State-Lake theater with a company of thirty singers, dancers, and comedians. He has a strong Chicago following. As star of his own show, Lowry sings, dances, and introduces the other performers, who include: Elaine Arden, comedienne; Rita Royce and Reese Brothers, dancers; Joyce Brothers and Sylvia Dean, dancers; Lillian Dawson; and Helen Compaton and her Bryn Mawr orchestra, an all-girl band.

The Marbro theater's current stage revue, "Hi-Jinks of 1936," contains Mme. Nirska, "Butterfly" dancer, and William Hall, baritone of the stage, screen, and radio.

Hollywood Adventure.

Empire Room Launches New Cabaret Show

TED WEEMS and his orchestra opened the new "Palm Beach Revue" in the Empire room of the Palmer house last Friday evening. Weems has returned after nearly a year touring the country's motion picture houses and ballrooms. The new floor show, the first wholly new revue in the Palmer house since last May 30, contains: Harald and Lola, who appeared in the first French Casino show eighteen months ago; the Lime Trio, also graduates of the French Casino Folies Bergere show; George Andre Martin, an importation from Europe; and Freddy Zay, cyclist and juggler. Bob Mascagno, a ballet dancer, appears with the Abbott Dancers.

● At the close of his record breaking engagement in the Walnut room of the Bismarck hotel, Leonard Keller, orchestra leader, can look back on an outstanding accomplishment. He started on March 1, 1935, what developed into the longest entertainment engagement in the history of the Walnut room. He will close next Thursday, to be replaced by Phil Levant and his orchestra. Keller plans a schedule of theater engagements in Chicago and the middle west.

● Will Osborne and his orchestra will appear at the Blackhawk tomorrow to succeed Joe Sanders. This will be his Chicago debut. His orchestra was founded in 1924. The vocalists will be the Rogers, brother and sister.

IN SHOW AT RIALTO THEATER

● Charles Gaylord's orchestra, with Jack Fulton, vocalist, and the new Continental Revue featuring Ballantine and Pierce, dancing duo; the Marvelle Dancing trio and Dale Sherman, singer, are the cabaret entertainers in the Continental room at the Stevens hotel. Jack Fulton, tenor, sings "Sylvia," "Sweet Sue," "Trees," "With All My Heart" and "Together." Ballantine and Pierce, dancers, offer "Blue Prelude," "Let's Take a Walk Around the Block," "How's Chances," a flirtation from "As Thousands Cheer" and "Heat Wave." The Marvelle Trio offer tango-rhumba-acrobatic dances.

● Harry's New York cabaret will launch a new floor show tomorrow. The Beatrice Gardner Girls are headed by Miss Tex Morrissey. Jack Irving is master of ceremonies, and Austin Mack's orchestra remains.

● The De Marcos, Antonio and Renee, will open in the Mayfair room of the Blackstone hotel next Friday. They come from the Persian room of the Plaza in New York, and have been seen in the film, "In Caliente." The stage experience includes "Hot Cha" and "The Scandals."

● George Olsen, band master, and his troupe have a new set of numbers for the cabaret show in the College Inn. Star of the show is vivacious Ethel Shutta, whose latest comic song is "So He Wooed Her and Wooed Her and Wooed Her." Ranking members of the ice skating company are Valerie Fink, Le Verne Busher, Ruth Mack, and Bess Ehrhardt, who support Premiere Danseuse Gladys Lamb in a "Scarf Dance"; Eddie Shipstad and Oscar Johnson in a number called "On a Bicycle Built for Two," and Bobby McLean and Everett McGowan, world's record holders for fast ice work.

● Henry Busse and his orchestra returned to the Chez Paree, where they once made music for ten consecutive months, last Friday. The band has been on tour and has appeared in the Ambassador hotel in Los Angeles, the Adolphus hotel in Dallas, and the Netherland Plaza in Cincinnati, and the Mayfair club in Kansas City.

● Dale Sherman, instead of Mary Jo Stroud, is Charles Gaylord's new vocalist in the Continental room at the Stevens hotel, but Dale and Mary Jo are the same person. Mary Jo entered Gaylord's audition contest recently under the name of Dale Sherman. When she won over fifty other contestants, she decided to discard her real name. In 1933 she was chosen "Miss Des Moines" in a personality contest and won a trip to Hollywood. Then she joined Sosnik's band in Denver.

● The policy of a complete change in floor shows weekly at the Edgewater Beach hotel with the dance music of Herbie Kay's orchestra brings in Dick Hoshi and company of Japanese acrobats; Earle, Fortune and Pope, dance trio of two girls and a man. Shirley Lloyd, singing star of Kay's band, continues as the favorite of each bill.

CHARLES COLLINS, CHICAGO TRIBUNE, SAYS

"The Great Waltz"

Called Richest Show in Years

PERFECT TASTE ADDS VALUE TO GIANT OPERETTA

By CHARLES COLLINS

"THE GREAT WALTZ," now displaying its richness of song and decorative stagecraft in the Auditorium theater, is a subject to which I return with enthusiasm. Fine operetta is a pleasure for which my appetite has never become jaded, and this production is a masterpiece in that branch of the theater arts. Its score is a happy arrangement of selections from the brilliant catalog of the Johann Strausses, father and son; its singing has values of which the more august institution of "grand" opera might be jealous; its libretto tells a light and charming tale of a romantic period in Viennese life with graceful effect; and its passages of dancing, pageantry, and scenic display are magnificent.

I rejoice over "The Great Waltz," and I wish to emphasize the fact that it is a play-going opportunity of a lifetime. I have never seen a happier demonstration of theatrical spectacle than the last hour of "The Great Waltz" affords, beginning with the admirable exhibition of classic ballet and ending with the ballroom scene with its galaxy of chandeliers and its revelry of waltzing to the "Blue Danube."

The show has great charm as well as great size, and is perfectly co-ordinated in every department. In costuming, in its adroit light effects, in the rhythm and precision of its smoothly running performance, it makes the groping and fumbling of the typical grand opera spectacle seem like amateurism.

The presence of "The Great Waltz" in Chicago at this time is an extremely happy event. It restores to a generation which was being weaned away from the living theater a superlative illustration of the stage's power to entertain richly, brilliantly, and gayly. Any one who sees it will remember it happily for years.

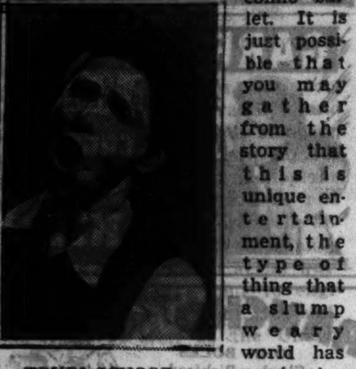
Everyday Life Schoop Ballet Theme

Her Troupe Dances Here Next Sunday

Humor, Pathos of John Doe and Mary Jones Themes of Danseuse.

By Edward Barry.

IF YOU are a faithful reader of the music reviews you will find in the Monday paper, a week from tomorrow, an account of two Sunday performances at the Studebaker theater of Trudi Schoop and her comic ballet. It is just possible that you may gather from the story that this is unique entertainment, the type of thing that a slump weary world has vainly awaited for a great many years. There will be nothing to do about it, then, except swallow your disappointment—or follow the troupe to their next stopping place.



TRUDI SCHOOP.

To avoid being the cause of such sorrow or expense, and to forestall your writing to the papers about the absurdity of announcing a good thing after it has taken place instead of before, I shall attempt to set down here this morning as accurate a description of the comic ballet as a person who has never seen it can give. Also I shall summarize the opinions of other parts of the world on Trudi Schoop and her people, and throw in for good measure some material on the Jooss ballet, vaguely similar in type, which is coming here soon afterward. If you decide after reading the article that this is the type of show you want, there still will be time to do something about it.

Briefly, this new and different ballet aims to wean the art form away from its long preoccupation with the fantastic and the ideally beautiful and to adapt its technique to the affairs of everyday life. It transfers the scene from the-land-that-never-was to Chicago, to bring before you not Columbine but Mary Jones.

Trudi Schoop takes her men and women through the adventures of living, mostly the small adventures that can come to every person every day. She tells the human stories behind the want ads, emphasizing the poignant as well as the comic. If you had seen the amount of advance publicity on her that I have, you would be just as tired by this time of the inevitable comparison with Charlie Chaplin, but, since both of them achieve their effects through the use of pantomime, assisted by continuity and music, the parallel seems a good one.

The ballet must distort every sort of material, of course, to bend it to its own peculiar purposes, and you are justified in suspecting that Mary Jones will not be the girl you know but Trudi Schoop's choreographic conception of her. She may lean as far to the left as Columbine does to the right, although the consensus seems to be that she will have some slight core of reality—more, certainly, than the ballet characters of yore.

Stories More Complex than Berta Ochsner's.

A big "hush" to those quibblers who will rise at this juncture and say that Berta Ochsner and other excellent dancers have used this technique for a long time. Your point is so sound that a "hush" is the only adequate reply, but, to avoid spoiling half the idea of this story, may I say that Trudi Schoop uses her forces to unwind lengthy and fairly complex stories, in contrast to the almost photographic briefness of the others, and that her sponsors claim her idiom to be new to America but not to the world? She has had Europe laughing for six years, and that small continent is notorious for the influence it wields over the inhabitants of ours. Perhaps some features of her technique crossed the ocean long before she did.

This Swiss miss is said to have reversed the usual order of things by making her debut first and arranging for systematic instruction afterwards. She was born in Zurich less than thirty years ago, and had some sort of regular dramatic training early in life. We learn that she went mountain climbing with her father to avoid the stuffy auditions that climaxed her studies, and that the sight of a tree curving in the wind gave her the idea of becoming a dancer. The yarn continues with an account of three months of intensive self-teaching, a successful debut recital, and a trip to Vienna for study.

Schoop Ballet Launched in Berlin in 1929.

She had toured Germany with satisfactory results and settled down in her native Zurich to teach before her growing dissatisfaction with conventional dancing and her ability at living room mimicry suggested to her the idea of a comic ballet which should take its inspiration from life rather than dreams, whose choreography should be simple and true [but not too true] rather than bizarre.

Trudi Schoop had both vitality and financial backing, and it did not take her long to plan her tragi-comedies and to recruit and reherse a company of twenty-two. Berlin saw the launching of her second career in September of 1929, and for six years the squad romped through Europe.

Hurok decided to bring her to America, and this canny impresario booked the troupe into the Majestic theater, New York, for a run that started two weeks ago Friday. It was a ten day engagement, but the hard boiled metropolis decided that Trudi Schoop should linger, and six days were added. The show closed there last night, unless there has been another extension since press time.

Paris Compares Trudi to Walt Disney.

The various estimates of her work that follow here are written from hearsay, and I reserve the right to strike fire from the typewriter next Sunday night in a scorching denunciation of Trudi Schoop and her ballet and all its works and pomps. What is good enough for the rest of the world may not be good enough for Chicago—but here is what some of the rest of the world thinks.

A Prague paper found that poetry blossomed from the boards. Another publication in the same city announced that the company is frolicsome and full of life and hilarity, and added anti-climactically that "every member delights us." Oslo compared her to Greta Garbo and The Hague to Isadora Duncan and the Ballet Russe! Paris brought Walt Disney into the picture and Vienna said that columns would not suffice, etc. Brussels called "Fridolin" [one of her principal offerings] "refreshing and seductive." In Berlin, the house "raved."

Nearer home is a New York reviewer whose account of Trudi Schoop's American debut appeared in the Dec. 28 paper. The story is extremely favorable, stressing the technical virtuosity of the troupe and the excellence of its pantomime. I have seen no unfavorable reviews, so do not believe that there have ever been any. There is no reason to think that her managers in various parts of the world would not be as assiduous in collecting and forwarding such pieces as they are in the monotonous task of clipping the other kind.

Kurt Jooss Brings His Ballet Here in February.

So much for Trudi Schoop and her comic ballet. The second Saturday in February brings another European outfit to the Civic Opera house for a two day stand. Kurt Jooss, a Dane, is captain and choreographer both, and this is his second venture in the United States. His ballet played six weeks in New York in 1933. Most of the countries of northern and western Europe have seen it since the day back in 1932 when the Jooss ballet rocketed into world skies by winning first prize at the Paris session of the International Congress of the Dance.

The prize winning piece was "The Green Table," which is a not too gentle picture of Geneva goings on. It will be played in Chicago along with "The Big City" and "A Ball in Old Vienna." You can easily imagine what this last named ballet is like; the other, "The Big City," is evidently a European idea of American life, for the musical accompaniment is Tansman's "Sonata Transatlantique."

New York called the Jooss ballet's work a milestone in theatrical dancing. Foreign capitals found it sharply thrilling and capable of an impression of grandeur, whatever that may mean.

Jooss and Schoop Groups Not Like Ballet Russe.

Just a word of warning, in case any reader may possibly profit by it and save himself a lost evening or a lost dollar or two. Neither the Schoop nor the Jooss ballet has much in common with the kaleidoscopic Russian troupe that visits here except the loose generic name that covers the whole art form.

The methods and the ideals of the two types are so radically different that the fact that you liked the one is no indication whatever that you will like the other. The Russian ballet is romantic and colorful; these two to come are more austere in a way, despite their comic elements. They count realism as an important virtue, where the de Basil group strives for an eye and ear filling ensemble of fantastic costumes and settings, opulent dancing, and sonorous music. Trudi Schoop's hands are said to be insured for $300,000. This item may indicate more vividly than a dozen paragraphs something of the essential difference between the two forms.

ACTS IN COMEDY AT THE BLACKSTONE

Actor Calls Hollywood a Prosaic Town

Lionel Barrymore Maintains 'Wild Parties' of Filmland Are Fictions.

By Rosalind Shaffer.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal.—[Special.]—Lionel Barrymore, now working in the "Voice of Bugle Ann," is being supported by a company of thirty hounds, of which Bugle Ann herself has proved to be the most ardent admirer of Lionel. The last few days he has been taking the pooch home with him at night, and the studio gateman sees the early morning entrance of the elder Barrymore with Bugle Ann proudly riding in the front seat of his car beside him. Wondering from this if the gruff Lionel might not be in the mood for conversation, we waylaid him in one of the purlieus of the publicity offices, with results as follows:

"I understand that you think Hollywood is purely a state of mind, Mr. Barrymore."

"Hollywood is all right. I like the place. It's so different from any place else. Sometimes I think it's a vastly overrated place so far as color and excitement are concerned. I only see my own friends, anyway."

Bear Provided Excitement for Coolidge.

"Well, if you had friends coming out here for a visit where would you take them to see the sights?"

"Ah, there you have me. I often wonder about that sort of contingency myself. People are so misinformed about Hollywood that they come here expecting to see a great deal of excitement. I'd try not to disappoint them, but it would cost a great deal of money because I'm afraid I'd have to frame a wild party for them so that Hollywood would live up to its reputation. I've never been fortunate enough to see any of the exciting things outsiders say take place here.

"They tell about the time Coolidge came to this [M-G-M] studio to see the sights. There wasn't anything except of the most routine sort going on, and it began to look like a flat visit, indeed. Then a trained bear that was in a cage on the lot broke loose and began chasing folks around. It saved the situation. Mr. Coolidge went away smiling."

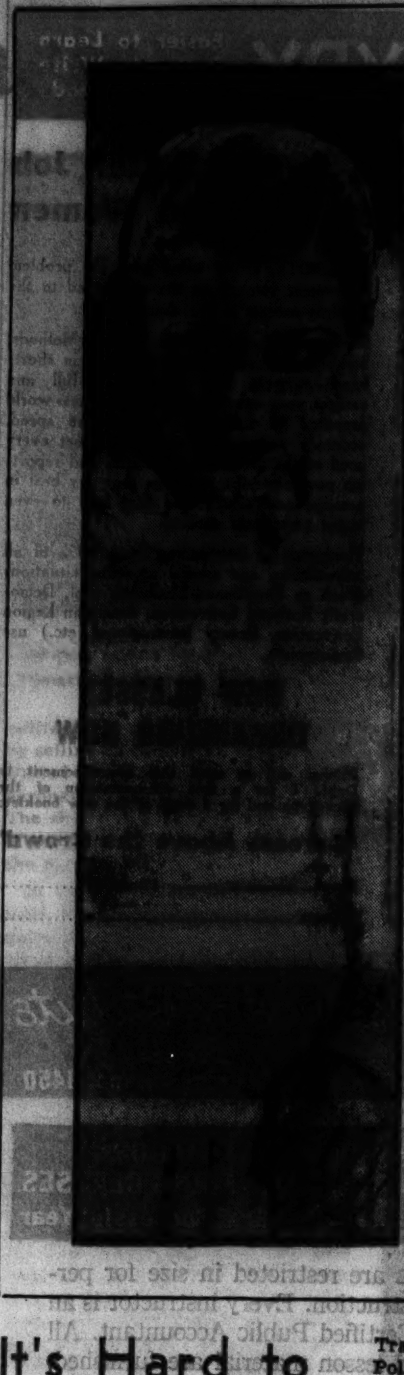
Lionel Barrymore is difficult to interview chiefly because he has a modesty that is rather rare with actors. He doesn't want to talk about the fact that several of his etchings have been included in the 100 best of the year, as selected by the Society of American Etchers. He doesn't think it good taste to secure publicity as an actor on the basis of his art work. He doesn't like to talk about his music, either, for the same reason. He is not only a fine pianist and organist but a good composer. In the old days he used to sit and argue counterpoint with his friend, Ernest Torrence, who was a concert pianist and composer as well as an actor. At the moment Lionel is under promise to Ernestine Schumann-Heink, also under contract at M-G-M, to write the music for a poem of Heine's which madame will sing for her next picture.

Asked about his early prowess as an athlete, Lionel deprecates all the stories told of him. "I think I could take care of myself in a pinch, but I go about hoping for no pinches," he says with a whimsical air. Yet when Zybyszko, the wrestler, came on the lot some time ago he and Barrymore rushed for each other with outstretched arms and reminisced over the days when Lionel used to wrestle with the famous Pole at a gymnasium in New York. Lionel practiced boxing, too, as a young actor around New York. He was a great follower of the then famous John L. Sullivan, who finally did a bit of sparring about with him and knocked the young Barrymore out.

Physical Disability Never Keeps Lionel Off Set.

Lionel had a recent visitor who remembered him from the old days through a double connection. She was Mrs. Edward Hughes, the former Mrs. Thomas A. Edison, widow of the late famous Thomas A. Edison; her daughter is married to the son of a Prof. Sloan, who taught Lionel physics at Seton hall in East Orange. The Edison family has been friendly with the Barrymore family for many many years. The reminiscing that Mrs. Hughes and Lionel had at their reunion on the set was quite considerable.

Studio nurses know Lionel Barrymore as their most difficult patient. He doesn't want to be taken care of. Due to a cracked knee sustained years ago in a gymnasium wrestling match which he followed with a lot of active work in making a picture, Lionel is subject to spells of pain. But he resents any sympathy and refuses to take proffered layoffs from work. Not long ago he hobbled painfully onto a set to take some tests with a young actor. He was scolded for it, as it was obvious that he should be resting. But he indignantly waved the lecturer aside and growled: "How'dya think I'd feel if that young fellow lost his chance at a job which he needs because I couldn't help him out with this test?"



HAS FEATURED ROLE

Doesn't Irene Dunne look sleek and luxurious here? She has a featured role in "The Magnificent Obsession." Robert Taylor also is very, very much in evidence in this, the Palace's current photoplay.

GOOD Morning!

Just try and do it! Try and spend $1,000 a minute for twelve hours.

On tangible assets only! Without investing anything. Without letting anybody in on what you're endeavoring to do or your reason for doing it!

Just try and do it!

"Easy!" you say—offhand—like that!

Well, that's what young Wally Jones of this opus said. And he starts out right blithely on his spending jag. For—IF he spends one thousand dollars a minute for twelve hours, he's to be paid $10,000. And O, boy—does he need that money . . .!

For a time things go swimmingly. Then the snags begin to catch in his trousers and barbed wire fences bob up to obstruct his way.

Tradesmen think he's a lunatic. Police immediately connect him in their minds with recent robberies. And, worst of all, his high enthusiasm becomes dampened with despair.

But there comes a finale which is as the finale of such a comedy should be.

"One Thousand Dollars a Minute" is gay, if highly improbable divertissement. The story starts and ends with a bang. True, it sags a bit in the middle—but not badly, because it has the sort of cast and direction that would never let a yarn down completely.

Roger Pryor is splendid as the hectic buyer. Leila Hyams is pretty and understandable as his long suffering sweetheart. Some good comedy is turned out by those expert laugh producers, Herman Bing, Edgar Kennedy, Edward Brophy, Franklin Pangborn, and Sterling Holloway.

What started this one thousand a minute business? O, a couple of bloated millionaires made a bet. That's all.

See you tomorrow!

GINGER ROGERS recently purchased a movie camera and has gone in for directing in a "small" way. She's shooting her own miniature version of "Follow the Fleet." Her leading man, FRED ASTAIRE, and other members of the cast, have been lending their talents to the picture, which she is cutting and editing herself—ambitious young thing. . . . MARGARET DUMONT, who has been seen as the dignified leading lady in all of the Marx brothers' films and two of their stage productions, says that "working with the Marx brothers is an art. It requires a great deal of study and concentration to remain at perfect ease when they spring surprise lines." Miss Dumont started playing with the Marxes nine years ago, and even now she finds it hard to keep a straight face when the three of them start clowning.

LLOYD NOLAN, one of Hollywood's newest leading men has gone "air-minded." In his latest picture, "One Way Ticket," the part called for a parachute jump and he refused to permit a double to do the stunt for him. Now he's considering buying his own plane. . . . William J. Jamison of the Museum of Modern Art film library went rummaging in ash cans in the Bronx and says that he salvaged one of the most IMPORTANT "FINDS" to date. It was a fifty-foot piece of celluloid showing the FAMOUS KISS administered with due reserve by the bewhiskered John C. Rice upon the plump cheek of May Irwin. He believes it is the only existing film of this event, which was photographed in 1897 and was one of the first motion pictures ever taken.

When PAUL MUNI is on tour and wants to avoid autograph seekers, he usually goes to some secluded hotel and tries to pose as a musician by carrying an empty violin case. He fools some of the people some of the time, but his fans always know him. . . . W. C. FIELDS is almost completely recovered from his recent illness, which has kept him away from the studio for several months. He's resting at his Encinco ranch now, but will return to Paramount in a couple of weeks to start work on a new picture. . . . PATSY KELLY, popular screen comedienne, will make her debut as a star in "Kelly, the Second" for Hal Roach studio. It was Mr. Roach who induced Miss Kelly to give up the stage several years ago in favor of the screen.

Airplanes and Air Transport

Martin Maker of Aircraft Since 1908

This is the third of a series of articles on great engineers and manufacturers of the country's military and commercial aircraft. Among those whose biographies will appear are Donald Douglas, Chance Vought, and others.

By WAYNE THOMIS

THE man who built the China Clipper, the giant four-motored flying boat which carried the first air mail over the Pacific from San Francisco to Manila, is Glenn L. Martin of Baltimore. Martin is one of the country's outstanding aeronautical pioneers. He has been building exceptional airplanes since 1908.

In 1918 Martin built the world's best twin-engine bombing plane. In 1933 he duplicated this feat, doubling speeds, maneuverability, and range of the best previous bombers, when he produced the now famous B-10 and B-12 series of monoplane fighting machines. The B-10 and B-12 series of bombers forced the air corps stafs of the world to change the entire conception of aerial warfare and provided a spur to engineers of Germany, France, England, and Italy, as well as the United States.

The 25-ton China Clipper, which at the Martin factory is known as the Martin 130 ocean transport, not only is the largest flying boat ever built in the United States but also is one of the most efficient airplanes ever flown. It actually carries a load greater than its weight empty, an achievement which for years was considered by airplane designers as impossible. Now Martin is working on plans for a 50-ton air boat for nonstop North Atlantic service.

Glenn Martin was born in Macksburg, Ia., on Jan. 17, 1886. He was educated at Kansas Wesleyan university and then moved to Santa Ana, Cal., with his family. It was about this time, while he was working in a garage, that Martin heard of the Wright brothers' successful flights. He had become familiar, through reading, with the work of Lilienthal, Chanute, and Langley.

Meanwhile he had been building kites, and shortly before he learned of the Wright brothers' success he had built and flown his first glider. In 1908, with his mother as his helper, he built his first airplane, and the only fact which a reader familiar with airplanes will want in proof that it was a superlative ship is this: Martin taught himself to fly in this plane. In those days it was still a miracle that even the trained pilots could fly.

From the day of his first flight in this Martin No. 1 Glenn Martin became a manufacturer. When the manufacturing business was dull—and that was most of the time—he was a stunt pilot, exhibition flyer, barnstormer, and pilot for the first motion picture cameraman who ever took pictures from the air. Among his passengers was Mary Pickford, and Martin turned actor, playing the villain in one of her first screen melodramas.

During this time Martin won his Federation Aeronautique Internationale license as a pilot. The federation was the only organization to give licenses in those days, long before the bureau of air commerce.. He also made a world's record by flying from the California mainland to Catalina Island, 20 miles over water, in 1912.

The first Martin company had been incorporated in Santa Ana in 1911. In 1912 he moved the factory to Los Angeles and one year later began his long association with the military air services of the country by selling a model TT trainer to the United States army signal corps, aeronautical section, at San Diego. The ship was a biplane tractor, one of the first of its type, since most of the previous ships had been pushers.

In the next four years Martin built 24 planes for the army and navy, for Holland, and the government services of the Netherlands East Indies. By 1917, with America's participation in the war, Martin was employing 150 men in his factory. In 1913 his crew had consisted of 15 automobile mechanics and his mother.

When America entered the war Martin merged with the Wright factory, establishing the Wright-Martin Aircraft Corporation of New York. He soon found, however, the new company was too interested in motors, so he resigned, went to Cleveland, and got backing of a group of Cleveland bankers. Before the year ended he had a new factory of his own.

At this time the great aircraft production board, entirely controled by automobile manufacturers of the country, was attempting to carry out its fantastic program to build 100,000 airplanes in a year and get them to the front. When this whole program collapsed in 1918 Martin got an order for six of a new type bomber which he had vainly attempted to sell around Washington during the preceding twelve months.

In seven months the bombers were completed and passed tests proving them better than England's best bomber, the Handley-Page. He got an order for twelve more on the strength of the first six, but before they were flying the war ended. Martin's bomber, however, had been pronounced the best flying machine of its type.

Just to show how interrelated this aircraft business is, Donald Wills Douglas, now head of his own Santa Monica, Cal., plant, was Martin's chief engineer at that time. Five years earlier Martin had taught William E. Boeing to fly his first airplane.

Martin, who by this time was becoming the organizer and director of his engineering staf rather than the engineering workman he had been in earlier days, continued to build bombers for the army and deck-flying torpedo-carrying planes for the navy. By 1926 he had become interested in patrol boats for the navy, building a series of PM flying boats. Then he sold his Cleveland plant to Great Lakes Aircraft, moved to Baltimore, and began building what today is the largest privately owned aircraft plant in the world.

By 1930 he had begun work, with the army air corps and the national advisory committee for aeronautics, on his monoplane bomber. A year later it was finished, just in time to rob William Boeing of a fat contract for the latter's own monoplane bomber, which was only a little less efficient than Martin's.

The bomber increased Martin's prestige, already considerable, until he was considered one of the best engineers in the world. The reason: Speeds of his bombers were increased from 110 to 220 miles an hour; the B-10s and B-12s could outfly and outfight any single-seat pursuit plane and were almost as maneuverable as the tiny fighters of those years.

The army success caused Pan American Airways engineers to consider favorably Martin's statement that he could build a flying Clipper ship of the type they wanted. He guaranteed the performance of his planes would exceed the demands of Pan American, although these were considered in 1932 to be extraordinarily high.

Early in 1935 the first of the Martin model 130 Clippers was completed. So certain of success had Martin been that he had simultaneously built two sister ships which had been included in the order. Most designers would have constructed one of the boats, tested and tinkered with it, then built the other two, sure, after full-scale tests, of his results.

But Martin went ahead, and the first ship passed all its rigid tests by wide margins. The stub-wing sponsons used to balance the craft on the water were strengthened after they showed signs of weakness, but no other changes were necessary. The first two of the model 130 now have been delivered and placed in actual service; the third is to follow soon.

Glenn Martin continues to work full stride. His new 100,000-pound ocean transport, and his new bombers intended to eclipse the B-10 and B-12, occupy him so that he is forced to keep an apartment next to his office in Washington so when he finishes work late at night he has no distance to travel to get home.

He is still a bachelor, and he still talks over the problems encountered in his work with his mother, who also lives in Washington.

Movie Stars Must Keep Fit

Work Calls for Physical Perfection

CONSIDER!

The lilies out in Hollywood,
They do both toil and spin!
Because they know they must keep fit
If they are going to win!

HERE'S where we stick a pin in another idea—the one that a movie actress lives the life of Reilly. That her work is really play and that when she isn't what she calls working, why, she is either lolling on a beach or going to a party.

It's a pretty notion, but a notion is all it is. The girl who really makes good in Hollywood is the girl who keeps in the pink of condition. And keeping in the pink of condition is a job all—by—itself!

See the pictures on this page? June Travis posed for them. Rather, she paused for them. For when the photographer got ready to snap her she was awfully, awfully busy in the gymnasium—getting in trim for her next picture, "Ceiling Zero," with James Cagney and Pat O'Brien. (June's a Chicago girl, you know—daughter of Harry Grabiner, White Sox vice president and secretary—who made her screen debut in "Stranded," with Kay Francis.) So—she said:

"If you want to take me as is, doing what I'm doing—why, fine! But I haven't time to dress . . ."

The gentleman with the camera was agreeable, and here you see Miss Travis as she appears when in training.

That she swims goes without saying—for there she is on a diving board. Handball and basketball come in for swift workouts. A rowing machine is in daily use to strengthen the muscles of the abdomen and keep it flat, and track and bar work give her necessary poise and endurance. Between exercises she relaxes utterly for five minutes or so—then back to the grind.

You think it would be fun—diet and all the rest of it? Well, try it day in and day out. The average woman, getting tired and disgusted, can stop. But the movie star goes on and on—because she must.

The aforesaid average woman, with few exceptions, is never called upon for the display of strenuous activity that is required of a movie star in the midst of making a picture. Oftentimes the screen actress is compelled by the requirements of her profession to spend tiresome hours under the lights and before the camera. Shots must be made and remade over and over again until they suit the producer in every respect. There may be a deadline set for completion of the production. Speed and more speed and wearying detail make the life of the film star not an easy one when she is busy on the lot. This all means that she must keep herself in the pink of condition.

The slim physical perfection of a Kay Francis, a Claudette Colbert, a Norma Shearer is not just "happenstance." Never! It's the result of good, hard work. Kay Francis and Claudette Colbert are tennis addicts. Norma Shearer never lets a day of her life go by without extensive bending and stretching exercises. Swims and tennises, too!

As for Eleanor Powell—will you ever forget her tapping in "Broadway Melody of 1936"? Well, you've got to be supple to dance like that!

No—it's not all beer and skittles for the lilies of Hollywood! In fact, it's no beer and remarkably few skittles. (Always supposing, of course, that the lily wants and intends to remain the sort of lily producers cull for their cast bouquets.)

Measure Light Waves by Ingenious Device

By DR. THOMAS M. BECK

THROUGHOUT the eighteenth century a fierce scientific dispute raged between the followers of Newton and those of Huyghens concerning the nature of light. The former claimed that it consisted of a stream of minute particles, while the latter believed it to be a series of waves moving through space. Either view was quite consistent with most of the facts known at the time, such as the straight path taken by light and its refraction by dense materials and reflection from mirrors.

But about 1800 the British physicist Young proved conclusively, or so it seemed at the time, that light was made up of waves. He did this by passing a beam of light through a couple of fine parallel slits cut in a sheet of opaque material and allowing it to fall upon a screen, where it formed bright images of the two slits. But close to each of these images, and running parallel to them, could be seen faint but distinct bands of light. Since it is not immediately obvious why such an observation proves the wave theory of light, let us first consider the way in which waves might be expected to act under such conditions.

In most respects light waves behave quite like waves on a body of water. Thus Figure 1 may be taken as a highly magnified diagram of a beam of light striking a hole in a sheet of metal, or as a bird's eye view of ocean waves striking a wide gap in a breakwater. In either case where the gap is very wide compared with the wave length the waves pass through it practically unchanged in direction. In each case there is a slight spreading to the side, but in the case of light these lateral waves are too faint to be noticed.

Figure 2 shows what happens when the dimensions of a hole are of the same order as the wave length. The waves spread out in concentric circles as though their origin were at the hole. In the case of light a hole the size of a wave length would be far too small to be seen, but this same scattering takes place to a lesser degree when a ray of light passes through a hole within our limit of vision.

To show this experimentally, look at a light through a piece of cloth. Tiny spots of light can be seen where a few rays have found their way through the pores in the fabric. But these spots appear to be larger than any pore in the cloth could possibly be. This apparent magnification is the result of the ray's being spread out after emerging from the opening.

The way in which these facts explain the results of Young's experiment is shown in Figure 3. The slits give rise to two concentric sets of waves which spread over each other. Now, in certain parts of the field (marked by the heavy solid lines) corresponding parts of the two waves always occur together. In such places the two beams reinforce each other, and where they touch the screen a bright band is formed.

On the other hand, the heavy dotted lines show where opposite parts of the waves come together. That is, the crest of one wave coincides with the trough of the other. And since the waves, having the same source, are of equal wave length and intensity, they cancel each other out and a dark band is thrown on the screen.

This phenomenon, known as interference, shows light to be made up of waves, since two groups of particles cannot be combined in such a way as to equal zero. It also explains a number of interesting facts, such as the iridescent play of color when light is reflected from a thin oil film on the surface of water. In this case part of the light is reflected from the surface of the oil and part from the oil-water interface. These two reflected rays can reinforce only when the thickness of the film is one-half a wave length, or some multiple of this distance.

But since different colors have different wave lengths, a given thickness of film can reinforce, and therefore show, only one color. However, the various parts of the oil film are continually changing in thickness, so there appears to be a constant shifting of the different colors over the surface. This same effect shows itself in other thin films, such as soap bubbles.

Since these interference bands, or fringes, are big enough to be seen and accurately measured, and since they are closely dependent upon the wave length of light, they provide an accurate means of measuring distances of the order of these wave lengths (about 1/50,000 of an inch).

Light waves themselves are measured by this method. A beam of light of a certain wave length is passed through a glass plate ruled with fine parallel lines numbering many thousand to the inch. This grating acts as a series of slits, sending off reinforced beams at a certain angle to the main beam. This angle, which we can measure, depends upon the distance between the ruled lines of the grating, which we already know, and the wave length of the light, which we wish to determine. Knowing two of the variables of the equation, we can calculate the third.

In order to make use of interference phenomena for accurate measurements, scientists have devised the interferometer. This instrument has been designed in a number of different forms, which, however, are fundamentally the same.

Suppose now that we move the mirror D slowly away from B. This change will affect only one of the two beams, and as a result the interference bands will appear to shift to one side. By observing a certain point on the screen and counting the number of bands that move past it we can express in terms of wave lengths the distance D has been moved.

This very method has been used in developing a reproducible standard of length. The present standard upon which all measurements are based is the international meter, which is a certain metal bar that is carefully guarded in Paris. There is always the possibility, however, that it might be destroyed by war or earthquake, and if such a catastrophe should happen it would be impossible to produce another one and know it was exactly the same length.

The late A. A. Michelson, great American physicist, who developed an ingenious method for measuring the diameter of stars. His is perhaps the best known form of interferometer.

Consequently it was felt desirable to express the meter in terms of some length that could be readily reproduced even if all the measuring sticks in the world happened to be destroyed. For various reasons the scientists finally decided to use the wave length of a particular red line found in the spectrum of the metal cadmium, and the meter was measured in terms of this length by the method outlined above. As a numerical curiosity, the meter was found to be equal to 1,553,163.5 of these waves.

It is sometimes necessary to know the extent to which light is refracted by a certain gas, but this quantity is too small to be determined by direct measurement of the bending. As a result an interferometer of the type shown in Figure 5 is needed for this work.

Light rays from A are made parallel by the lens B and then converted to two narrow beams by the perforated shield at C. These two rays are then focused by means of another lens on the screen at D, producing a pattern of interference bands. Two glass tubes from which the air has been removed by a vacuum pump are placed in the positions shown at E.

Now, the refraction of a material is dependent upon and proportional to the extent to which light is slowed down in passing through it. If the gas to be examined is allowed slowly to leak into one of the tubes, this gradually slows down the beam passing through this tube and throws its waves out of phase with those of the other beam. This in turn causes a shift of the interference pattern to one side. The amount of this shift can be measured for a number of different pressures of the gas. From this we can calculate the slowing down of the light by the gas, and hence the refraction.

The great American physicist A. A. Michelson developed an ingenious method of measuring the diameters of stars by means of interference bands. The present-day telescopes are useless for this purpose, since the stars are so far away that even the largest telescopes show them not as disks but merely as points of light.

The interferometer used for measuring stellar diameters is much the same in principle as that shown in Figure 5, except for the fact that the parts marked A and B are missing. The light from a far-distant light point is split into two beams which are then focused on each other, forming an interference pattern. Suppose now that light is coming simultaneously from another point close to the first one. It sets up an interference pattern overlapping but not coinciding with the first one.

If the distance between the two beams be changed, the interference bands shift. The beams can be set at a certain distance apart so that the dark bands of one pattern are covered by the light bands of the other, thus causing both patterns to disappear. When this occurs the angle the two points make with the observer can be calculated from the distance between the beams which is necessary to make the patterns vanish. A distant star shows much the same effect, since its disk can be considered as made up of a number of separate points of light.

As an example let us take the case of the star Betelgeuse, whose interference patterns vanish when the beams are about ten feet apart. From this data it has been calculated that the star subtends an angle of .047 of a second of arc, or .000013 of a degree. The star's parallax shows that it is approximately a million billion miles away from us. In order to subtend its particular angle at this distance Betelgeuse must have a diameter of 240 million miles. To understand this figure better, it is about 300 times the diameter of the sun, or about 30,000 times that of the earth.

Question: Several days ago I saw a part of a rainbow fairly close to the sun during the early morning. Is it unusual for rainbows to be in the same part of the sky as the sun?—R. S., Harvey, Ill.

Answer: What you saw was not a rainbow, strictly speaking, but a parhelion, or, as it is commonly called, a sun dog, because it follows the sun. This particular effect is similar in nature to the halos occasionally seen around the moon. It is due to the refraction of light by fine snow crystals in the air.

Mostly About Dogs

By BOB BECKER

Winter Dog Problems

ALTHOUGH "leading a dog's life" today is a pretty happy existence for thousands of dogs that are being kept in American homes—with owners giving more attention to the health and comfort of their pets—nevertheless some of the dogs do not have such a good time during the winter, for various reasons.

One of the main troubles of dogs in winter often is due to either mistaken kindness or carelessness. The problem is one of overweight, which often brings with it some minor illness, including skin trouble. It is easy to see why dogs often get too fat in winter. They do not exercise nearly as much as in summer. In this respect they take after their masters!

We were talking with a well known veterinarian a few days ago about winter dog problems. One of the first things he stressed was that many pets get too fat during the winter, due to the fact that they are not taken out for exercise during cold weather. Instead of getting a lively play period in the snow or being taken on long hikes by their owners, the pups are allowed to lie around in a warm room much of the time. But, in spite of this lack of exercise, the dog is fed just as much food as if it were taking a lot of exercise. And, as the veterinarian pointed out, many dog owners even increase the pet's food allowance during the winter months. So it's not surprising that these overfed, underexercised dogs have digestive disturbances and possibly develop skin trouble. Errors in diet or feeding often are reflected in skin eruptions.

Of course, this condition among our dogs often is the result of our own program in winter. When the snow comes and temperature drops, making walks outdoors rather vigorous exercise, many of us prefer the "exercise" of sitting close to a radiator. It's much more comfortable! Inasmuch as the only exercise that many dogs in the city procure is from walks with their masters, the dogs go on a program that stresses the sedentary rather than the active side. And just as many humans put on weight in the winter, due to lack of outdoor exercise, so then our dogs get fat because they have their daily exercise cut down.

As our friend the veterinarian pointed out:

"So many persons who own dogs worry too much about keeping their pets warm during the winter. They wonder if they should take them out on a winter day for a walk, and whether they should wrap them up to keep them from getting chilled. One even sees long-coated dogs, like chows, wearing winter outfits, as if they couldn't stand cold weather, when nature already has put a dandy overcoat on the chow.

"If owners would worry less about this angle of dog care, give the pup a chance to lead a more normal existence, and take their dogs out walking, the program would not only benefit the dog but also do the owners just about as much good."

So the midwinter urge to dog owners is simple. Watch the weight of your dog. Don't let him eat himself into sickness. If the pup gets so overweight that he is almost as wide as he is long (we saw one like that the other day!), cut down on the food, and exercise the pup so it can get rid of some of the superfluous flesh. If owners will keep this thought in mind, and also the fact that many minor but annoying skin ailments can be traced directly to improper diet, fewer dogs would need medical care during the winter months.

Long-coated dogs that sleep outdoors or in cool kennels during the winter, of course, need a reasonable amount of extra weight. Our Labrador retriever and Toby, the clumber spaniel, are good illustrations. Mike of Barrington, the Labrador, has an unheated, insulated outdoor kennel filled with straw and fragrant cedar shavings. He knows that he must sleep out there every night and doesn't mind it at all. Naturally we do not want him down to hunting weight right now when he needs some extra "insulation." So just as soon as we brought him home after the hunting season we started to add to his poundage. The objective was not a too-fat, sluggish dog, but one with a few extra winter pounds. He now has reached the desired weight, so he gets just enough food to keep him there. His coat is thick, glossy, and healthy looking—indicating his fit condition. He gets his daily exercise of walks, and whenever any of us hike along the beach he even runs into Lake Michigan for a dip, a stunt that gives one chills just to watch it. The point of this program is simply this: Here is a dog that sleeps outdoors, has been accustomed to cold weather, is kept at a reasonable weight, is given ample exercise, and is not allowed to spend hours every winter day hugging a radiator.

This program involving outdoor kennels isn't one that many dogs kept in the city can follow. But the dog owner can watch his dog's weight, not overfeed him, and give the dog exercise during the winter. This combination will prevent a number of dog ailments due to too much food and too little exercise.

Tribune Dog Book Published

"The Dog Book," a 96-page beautifully illustrated handbook on dogs, has just been published by The Tribune and now is on sale at the loop public service office, 1 South Dearborn street, Chicago, and also at the Tribune Tower office. The cost is 30 cents by mail. If purchased over the counter at either of these public service offices the book will cost 25 cents.

This guide for dog owners contains more than sixty illustrations. The book contains scores of tips to dog owners on the care of their pets. One whole chapter is devoted to feeding problems. How many times a day a pup should be fed, the foods that are good for puppies and grown dogs, the question of feeding meat to a young dog, foods not to give dogs, the use of prepared foods in a feeding program for puppies or mature dogs, why dogs will eat grass when they have the opportunity, and many other important subjects are discussed in the chapter on feeding.

House-breaking a puppy is another subject treated at length in "The Dog Book." Other topics taken up in the handbook are worming dogs, distemper, the dog and automobiles, and the importance of proper grooming. More than thirty pages of the book are devoted to large illustrations of various breeds, with brief descriptions of their origin, weight, color, and characteristics, as an aid to those puzzled about what kind of a dog to buy.

Readers are advised (if they wish to order a copy of the book by mail) to send their order with remittance direct to the public service office of The Tribune, 1 South Dearborn street, Chicago.

THE QUESTION BOX

I have a black-and-white cocker spaniel female born Nov. 12, 1935. What I would like is some very good advice on training this dog for field work on pheasants, rabbits, and quail.

Since I have never hunted behind a trained dog, I do not know just how they should work. Somebody told me that a cocker spaniel that is all black is a better dog than one black and white. Is his true?—A. Y. W.

If you have not seen a trained spaniel work in the field you will not only have to start from scratch in your training program but even from below scratch. It will be impossible for you to train a dog unless you know what the dog is supposed to do. Therefore the first thing on the program is to go in the field with the owner of a trained spaniel, not once, but several times, so that you (not the dog) will get several lessons.

Another practical thing to do is to join a spaniel training class, where you learn how to train a dog. You'll get more out of such a class than out of many books, inasmuch as you do not know how spaniels work. A. P. Moecher, secretary of the Springer Spaniel Field Trial Club of Illinois, had such a class for more than twenty owners last year. We believe he is going to conduct another during 1936. Suggest you write him at 41 Island avenue, Aurora, Ill., about the class and other matters concerning training of a spaniel for field work.

A black spaniel is no better than one that is red, pink, purple, green, heliotrope, or any other color. It's merely a question of what color you like best. No spaniel of any one color has a corner on brains, tractability, endurance, or disposition.

THE fare is seven cents on the street car, a dime on the bus or the "L." But 1,200,000 or more people pay it twice a day to ride in Chicago. Their fares totaled more than $60,000,000 even in such a depression year as 1934—a prize worth fighting for.

One of the great politico-technical battles of the times is brewing over the division of that yearly fortune in pennies and nickels and dimes. Both the Chicago Surface Lines and the Chicago Motor Coach company are grooming new mechanical shock troops for the street.

The new street car and the new bus shine with chromium and stainless steel and modernistic lighting. They are swift, streamlined vehicles, almost noiseless by comparison with the clattering, roaring equipment they will replace. They are modernity itself in the field of mass transportation.

They represent something more, however, than improved service for car and bus riders. Chicago is ready to modernize, perhaps to unify, its whole local transportation system. Both the bus and street car companies will be negotiating new franchises with the city in the near future. During those negotiations the country-wide fight over the desirability of street car as against bus transportation undoubtedly will be fought once more. And in that fight each side will present its new equipment as exhibit A.

To regard the new equipment merely as shock troops in a cutthroat battle for each other's trafic, however, is to do a grave injustice to the imagination and business foresight of the street car and bus officials. Both of them are after bigger game. That game is the fellow who drives his automobile to work.

Here are some figures. In a rough way they tell the story. On a midweek day in last May city trafic authorities counted all the people who rode in and out of the downtown business district. The "L," street cars, and buses carried 550,934 persons. Private automobiles carried 197,215.

Leslie Sorenson, city trafic engineer, believes, although he has no exact figures to prove it, that the ratio of people riding automobiles to work in the city at large is somewhat larger than the 26 per cent shown by the downtown survey. That means a minimum of 700,000 riders a day—1,400,000 fares.

It is with this transportation market in mind that the bus people are spending an extra $1,000 to dress up each of their new buses—such items as chromium plated window sash and seat coverings of gay plaid mohair at $4 a yard (wholesale). It was with the hope of cracking this same market that the designers of the new street car included physiologists and psychologists as well as engineers.

Chicago's transportation problem can be monumentally dull—if you start mulling over such items as security setups and statistics on annual earnings and peak loads, with which traction experts harry themselves. But it also can be one of the most fascinating subjects on earth if you listen to men such as Frank H. Shepard, consulting engineer for the Chicago Surface Lines, and the company's own engineers, who had leading parts in designing the new street car. Mr. Shepard is not a fanatical partisan in the street car-bus controversy. He agrees with Guy A. Richardson, president of the Surface Lines, that both trolley and gasoline buses have their place in modern local transportation. They argue, however, that the trolley car, with the "cleared channel" furnished by its rails, is the most efficient vehicle in congested areas.

The new street car is a $500,000 baby of the depression. Twenty-five street car companies contributed the half million, and the research which they financed has been going on for five years. Two experimental models, since improved, are running today in Chicago. The Surface Lines want to buy 100 of the new cars at a cost of $1,500,000, but are currently at loggerheads with Mayor Kelly over the purchase, due to the broader problems of the franchise negotiations.

Except that it draws its power from the same trolley wire and runs on the same track, there is scarcely anything about the new car which is to be found on present Surface Lines equipment. It is radically different even from the front-entrance Clark-Wentworth cars, which were the last word in design when they were installed in 1929.

Begin with the question of speed. Speed in local transportation means quick starting and stopping—acceleration and retardation, in the words of the engineers, rather than sustained high speed. Speed can be increased by increasing the power applied to a body or by decreasing its weight. Both methods have been applied to the new car.

Use of recently developed high-strength alloys has cut its weight to 34,000 pounds. Cars now operating in Chicago weigh as high as 54,000 pounds. It has four 60-horsepower motors running up to 4,000 revolutions a minute, a considerable increase in power over present equipment, and the motors themselves weigh only about a fourth as much per horsepower as do older types.

But street cars haul human beings, not merchandise, and you can't bang passengers about with quick starts and "stone wall" stops as you would a load of coal. That was where the physiologists entered the picture. They found that when a car is increasing its speed five miles an hour each second, the passenger must overcome a horizontal push against his body, due to inertia, of a quarter of his weight.

They conducted thousands of tests, using all sorts of devices to measure the reaction of a passenger, standing or walking in the aile, to acceleration. They found that he could stand an acceleration of 4.7 miles an hour a second without discomfort. That finding, rather than the mechanical possibilities of the car, fixed the rate at which the new car gathers speed.

The investigators also found that the passenger's ability to stand acceleration is greater when the car speeds up at a constant rate than when it goes ahead by jerks. The jerky acceleration of present equipment is due to the controler which feeds the current to the motors. Present controlers have a dozen notches at most. That means that speed is increased by steps instead of along a smooth upward curve. A new controler was designed with fifty or more notches. This multinotch controler feeds the power smoothly and evenly. Jerky starts are eliminated.

The new car, then, moves faster. To be safe it must stop quicker. It has three sets of brakes. In emergencies they can cut down its speed at the rate of ten miles an hour each second.

The first brakes are the motors. Any direct-current motor, if you turn it instead of using it to turn something, acts as a generator. Used as generators, the motors get their energy by braking the forward motion of the car. And here enters one of the most fascinating mechanical details of the new car.

The motors, used as dynamic brakes, generate electricity. Why not use it? It can't readily be fed back through the trolley, because its voltage varies with the speed of the car. But it can be run through a rheostat, or resistance box, and dissipated as heat. And a fan, blowing air over those heated coils and through a system of ventilating ducts, warms the passengers on winter days.

"We did the stockyards one better," chuckled Mr. Shepard as he described this artifice. "We took the squeal and canned it."

The limiting power on braking is the adhesion between the wheel and the rail. If air brakes are applied too suddenly the wheels lock and slide along the rail. The second of the modern braking trio gets around this difficulty by presenting a separate friction surface to the rail, the track brake.

This is a long electromagnet slung between the wheels on each truck. When the motorman turns current into the coils of this magnet it is clamped down against the rail with a force of 13,000 pounds. The effect of the four track brakes is equivalent to hooking a weight of 26 tons on behind the car when the motorman has to stop in a hurry.

The air brake, applying a shoe to the moving wheel, is relegated to a subordinate position on the new car. It is used to "spot" the car after the generator and track brakes have cut its speed almost to zero. And while the motorman has three brakes at his disposal, he operates them all simultaneously with a single lever.

The controler and brake lever provide one instance of the contribution of the psychologists to the new car. To get the maximum efficiency from the improvements in the car they must be handled differently from the present controls. But Chicago motormen, many of them, have been using the old controls for twenty or thirty years. The old motions are ground deep into their subconscious minds. And so where the old controls were operated in a horizontal plane, the new ones move up and down. The veteran motorman is freed at the outset from his old habits.

The body of the new car is streamlined, of course. It has greatly improved ventilation through the duct system which, in Mr. Shepard's phrase, "cans the squeal." Those ducts provided quite a problem for a time. Space inside the body is precious. Already part of it had been cut down by widening the ailes.

It seemed for a time that the ventilation ducts would make the walls of the car so thick that they would be impractical. Then a young engineer had a bright idea. "Why not," he suggested "use the ducts as structural members?" His suggestion solved the problem. Fabricated of light, strong alloys, the ventilating ducts form the body framework.

Speed in movement, in starting and stopping, is wasted unless the car can load and unload its passengers quickly. It has three sets of doors—wide ones at the front for loading, and two sets at the center and rear for unloading. The doors are of a new type. They are pivoted in the middle on a vertical post. In opening or closing the door rotates about the post and the post itself is pulled back to the side of the entrance.

They are called "blinker" doors. They take up less space inside the car than the present collapsing type, and they open and close more quickly, due to their double motion. Here again the psychologists enter. The doors, "blinking" swiftly open before the passengers, will influence them unconsciously to speed up their own movements in entering or leaving the car, the designers reason.

Inside the car are numerous features which the engineers call refinements and which a layman might classify as gadgets. They are all there for a single purpose, however—to persuade the automobile owner to leave the car at home and ride to business or shopping on the street car. The seats are of the automobile type. The lights are brighter, but shielded by grilles which eliminate glare and throw the light down on the rider's newspaper. Window frames are stainless steel, the first ever fabricated of that material, and so are stanchions and hand rails—not merely because it is bright and shining, but because it won't rust and therefore won't soil women's light gloves.

Most of the things which have been described are the things which you can see about the new car. Its fundamental importance, however, lies in features which do not stand out on casual inspection. They are concentrated largely in the trucks on which it runs, for it is there that the designers have fought and won their battle against noise and vibration.

They assert that their new car gives its passengers "a boat-ride on wheels." Being engineers, they are prepared to back their assertion with proof—oscillograph tests which show an almost complete absence of vibration in the car. This is due largely to the use of rubber in the springs and wheels.

The springs are entirely new. The cars are literally hung on rubber bands. The rubber bands, however, are thick concentric rings, and their springing action is a shearing motion, utilizing the stretching instead of the compression of the material to absorb shocks.

The springs are also placed differently, between the axles and the trucks which carry the motors and support the car body, instead of between trucks and the body, with the result that a larger proportion of the vehicle is insulated against vibration than in the present types of cars. And the wheels themselves are revolving springs. The tire, which rests on the rail, is of steel, but inside the tire are rings of rubber, also "in shear," to absorb the vibrations arising from irregularities in the track.

While all vibrations do not cause noise, almost all noise in the street car arises from vibrations or the impacts which cause vibrations. So in stopping vibrations the engineers are also stopping noise. And in so far as they have done this they have answered the greatest objection which the street car has to face in the modern city—the objection of citizens to roaring wheels, crashing trucks, and screaming motor gears running in the street past their homes or offices.

Those are the three principal sources of noise in the present street car—the wheels, the trucks, and the motor gears. The wheels are noisy because they're not round. They don't have to be flat. A deviation of one two-hundredth of an inch from a perfect circumference, far too slight to be measured with any but the most delicate instruments, gives rise to a mighty roar when the wheel turns at high speed.

Wheels get "off round" because brakes lock and they skid along the rails. But neither the dynamic brake nor the track brake can make the wheels slide. One reason the air-applied brake shoe is retained for auxiliary service in the new car is that it scrapes from the wheel tar and dirt picked up from the track, which might cause it to rumble.

The trucks of the new car don't clatter and bang in the traditional fashion, for two reasons. The first is that they are doubly protected against shocks, first by the rubber in the wheels and second by the rubber springs. The second is that the trucks are precision machined, like the parts of an automobile motor. Their parts fit so accurately that there's no room for them to bang together.

A new gear—new to street car construction—takes care of the motor noise. It is a hypoid gear, of the type used in the costliest of hand-built automobiles. Gears of similar type are used in The Tribune's newest presses to cut down noise and vibration there. Hypoid gears are expensive—it takes a good engineer several days to figure out their tooth ratios—but they are virtually noiseless.

"It is actually true," said a Surface Lines engineer, "that in the new car the loudest noise is one we never noticed before—that of the trolley wheel on the wire."

All of the enthusiasts are not in the street car business. Benjamin Weintraub and W. E. Sherwood, vice president and superintendent respectively of the motor coach company, can become just as ecstatic over the new buses as the trolley people become over the new street cars. And, as is the case with the new street car, the new bus bears little resemblance to the thundering herd which now rolls over Chicago streets.

Many of the new principles are embodied in buses already on the streets—the 49 new single-deckers which run on loop routes and some of the more lightly traveled outlying bus lines. They have the motor in the rear, and the "dressed up" interiors are designed to woo the automobile trade. But more radical improvements are embodied in the new double-deck buses.

There is one of these, an experimental model, No. 104, running on a south side route of the bus company. A hundred like it are being built by the General Motors Truck corporation at Pontiac, Mich., and will be on Chicago streets early in the spring. Their most radical mechanical improvement is the placing of the motor in the rear. This has affected the whole design of the bus and has made possible a dozen improvements in its comfort and efficiency.

The motor itself is a new design. It can barely be heard inside the coach, and from the curb outside its passing is scarcely more noticeable than that of a middle-aged private automobile. Its position in the rear puts it outside the body of the coach itself, which thus is completely insulated against motor fumes.

Moving the motor to the rear, however, was only a means to an end. That end is the more efficient utilization of space within the body. Although the body is only two feet longer than the present double-deck bus, it seats 72 in place of 56 passengers, at no increase in the weight of the vehicle.

And the passengers ride much more comfortably. For one thing, a man of average height can walk down the aile without crushing his hat on the ceiling. This is a direct result of the motor-in-rear principle, which makes possible the lowering of the floor of the bus.

As in the case with a street car, one of the important factors governing speed of bus operation is the speed of loading and unloading. The loading door at the front is double the size of those on the present buses, and a treadle-operated exit door is provided near the rear.

In tests the new bus has loaded 72 passengers in 34 seconds and unloaded them in 59 seconds. Loading and unloading are speeded up by placing the stair to the upper deck immediately behind the driver instead of at the rear of the coach.

The designers of the bus made a virtue of necessity in their arrangement of the seats on the lower deck. Because of the high wheel wells and the motor compartment in the rear, the seats are on three levels and face forward, backward, and to the aile. The effect is somewhat that of a club car, but the more important point is that every seat has adequate foot room and head room.

The third company in the Chicago transportation picture—the "L" lines—isn't buying or thinking of buying any new equipment this year. It is in receivership, and its officials are happy at present to make operating expenses and something toward bond interest.

But in any plan for a comprehensive local transportation Chicago must take the "L" lines into account, for there is general agreement that with the exception of a possible subway to afford additional terminal facilities in the loop, the "L" lines are the most logical agency to give the city rapid long-haul transportation.

When the time comes that it is possible to revamp the "L" lines, vast improvements over their present rolling stock will be found available. The most advanced types of rapid transit equipment are two experimental trains being operated by the New York Rapid Transit corporation, the subway and "L" division of New York's B. M. T. system.

Engineers prefer to call them multisection or articulated cars rather than trains. They consist of five coach bodies mounted on six trucks—a truck at each end and four pivot trucks at the junctions of the car sections.

Mechanically and electrically they include many of the improvements built into the new surface cars, including multinotch controlers, dynamic brakes, and generous use of rubber for insulation against vibration and noise. At the same time engineers hold that the "L" lines are probably lucky in being forced to defer their equipment purchases for a time. Research on rapid transit equipment is not nearly so far advanced as that on either street cars or buses, and within a year or two still greater improvements are anticipated.

Not all of the new ideas in mass transportation are embodied in the new Chicago street car and bus and the New York articulated car. In London, where all of the city's bus, street car, subway, and railroad suburban transportation was unified in 1933 under the London passenger transport board, a $550,000,000 corporation, more than 800 buses are already operating with Diesel engines.

London is also operating double-deck street cars, or trams, and is even experimenting with triple-deck buses. Another bus novelty, now in operation in New Jersey, combines electric and gasoline motors in the same vehicle, operating in downtown sections as a trolley bus and in outlying districts on gasoline.

With mohair upholstery, chromium trim, and modernistic lights, the Chicago Motor Coach company woos Mr. and Mrs. Chicagoan to leave their automobile at home and ride to business or shopping by bus.

noticed," he said, "that Hauptmann either must be very confident or else is completely philosophical about his fate. The man certainly doesn't seem to be worried. His appetite has been good since he entered the death house last Feb. 16. He has not had a moment of illness. He gets a reasonable amount of exercise and has gained weight. He shaves regularly and fastidiously under the watch of guards."

Prison officials base their belief that Hauptmann will not "break" largely on Bruno's reaction to other executions which have occurred since he has been a death house inmate. One man was the closest friend Bruno has had in prison. He was Kurt Barth, German born, who was executed for murder. When Barth passed Hauptmann's cell, No. 9, on the way to the death chamber, Bruno stood at the cell door smiling. He reached through the bars and grasped Barth's hand. "Have faith in God!" said Hauptmann.

On three other occasions Hauptmann showed unusual calm as fellow inmates of the death house walked past him into the death chamber. Reports that his nerve might be cracking arose from his reaction to the most recent execution at the prison, that of Romaine Johnson, Negro slayer. Guards said that Bruno lay on his cot for an hour before the time of the execution and afterward appeared to be shaken.

Aside from the widely publicized visit paid to him by Governor Hoffman of New Jersey, Bruno's only visitors have been his wife, Annie; his spiritual adviser, the Rev. D. G. Werner, Seventh Day Adventist pastor; his attorneys, and one or two investigators.

The chronology of events in America's most celebrated kidnap-murder case, barring discovery and prosecution of possible accomplices of Hauptmann, today is all but complete. The chronology to date is as follows:

March 1—Charles Augustus Lindbergh Jr. kidnaped.

April 2—$50,000 ransom paid by Colonel Lindbergh through Dr. John F. (Jafsie) Condon in the Bronx, New York.

Oct. 8—Hunterdon county, New Jersey, grand jury indicts Hauptmann for murder.

Oct. 9—New Jersey asks Hauptmann's extradition.

Oct. 19—Hauptmann loses fight against extradition; is removed to the county jail at Flemington, N. J.

Jan. 2—Hauptmann's trial begins.

Feb. 13—Jury finds Hauptmann guilty of murder in the first degree. Justice Trenchard sentences him to die in the electric chair.

Feb. 16—Hauptmann is taken from Flemington to the death house at state prison, Trenton.

June 20—Hauptmann's appeal from the lower court verdict is argued before the Court of Errors and Appeals, the state's highest court.

Oct. 9—Court of Errors and Appeals upholds the guilty verdict.

Nov. 12—Defense files request for review before United States Supreme court.

Dec. 10—United States Supreme court declines to review case.

Dec. 13—Justice Trenchard sentences Hauptmann to die in the electric chair the week of Jan. 13.

When and if Hauptmann dies in the electric chair he will be the most notorious but not the first principal figure in a kidnap-murder case in this country to pay with his life for the crime. Of recent memory, for example, was the case of William Hickman, who was executed in 1927 for the brutal kidnap-murder of 12-year-old Marion Parker of Los Angeles.

Of the many child kidnaping cases which have shocked the nation three are outstanding for the public interest they aroused. One of these abductions occurred as long ago as 1874, but speculations concerning the case have been recurrent through the years in newspapers and magazines. This was the kidnaping of Charlie Ross, who was stolen from his home in Germantown, Pa., and never returned.

Another case which became a world sensation was the kidnaping and murder in Chicago in 1924 of 14-year-old Bobby Franks by Richard Loeb and Nathan Leopold, members of well-to-do families. The slayers were given life prison sentences.

The third and most shocking of any of the crimes of this nature was, of course, the murder of the Lindbergh baby. Because of the prominence of the victim's parents, because of the brutality of the murder, and because of the cold cruelty of the criminal in extorting a $50,000 ransom from the father on the pretense that the baby was alive and would be returned, this crime stirred America and the world as no other in history.

Including the famous Charlie Ross case, there have been seven celebrated child kidnaping cases which never have been solved. The six others were:

1919—Billy Dansey, kidnaped in New Jersey. Body found in swamp.

Other famous child kidnaping cases, in which either the victims were returned and the kidnapers captured or escaped, or were captured after the bodies of the victims had been found, follow:

1909—Billy Whitla of Sharon, Pa. Returned after $10,000 paid. Kidnapers captured.

1911—Baby Hencks, kidnaped in Chicago and believed slain. Kidnapers captured and sent to prison.

1928—Billy Ranieri, 10, kidnaped in Chicago. Returned and kidnapers captured.

1931—Marian McLean, 6, kidnaped and slain in Cincinnati. Slayer captured.

1935—George Weyerhaeuser, timber magnate's son, kidnaped in Tacoma, Wash. Released after $200,000 ransom paid. Two of kidnapers captured.

Raised Money to Finance Revolution

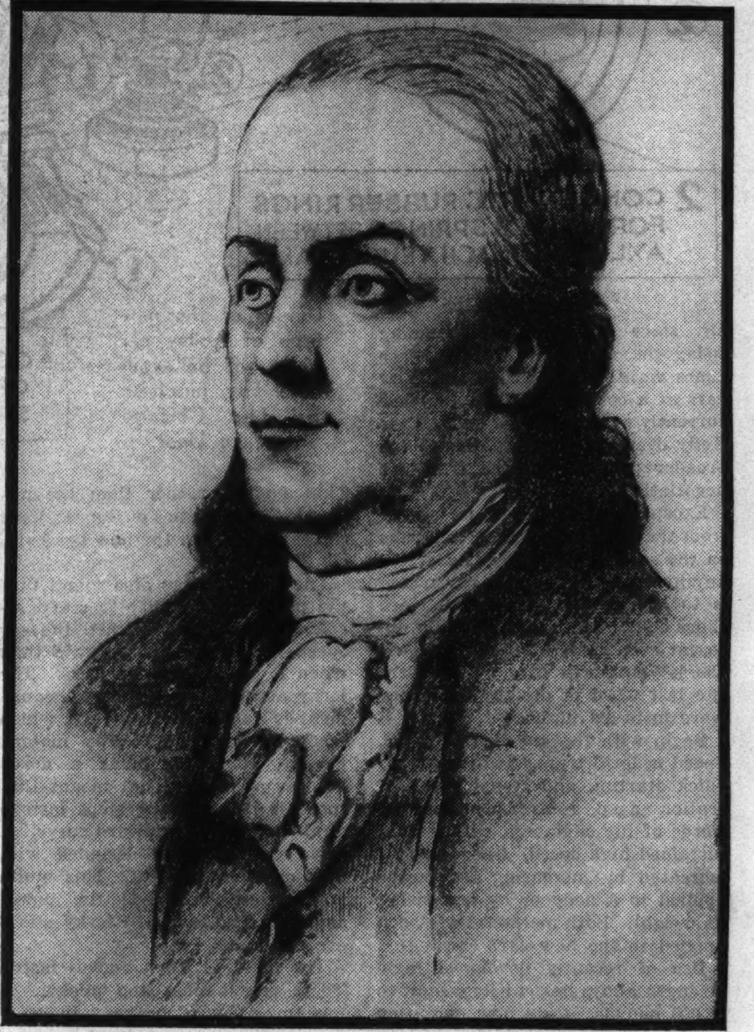
By GUY MURCHIE JR.

JOHN PIERPONT MORGAN'S weighty frame and words now loom in the national news. A senate committee is investigating the effect of his financial doings on the entry of the United States into the world war.

Financiers and public men with the heavy problem of finances on their minds have been, since the very beginning of nations, highly important figures in wars and threats of wars. As important as men and guns to the success of wars have been bags of gleaming gold and the credit which has stood in their stead. So it was in the days of our revolutionary war that financial backing was necessary. So it was that the great Benjamin Franklin, inventor, philosopher, and printer, turned financier to negotiate loans abroad to keep our ragged continental armies in the field. Franklin and Morgan, of course, do not present parallel cases, although both were instrumental in raising vast sums for war.

A chronicle of Franklin's doings from 1765 on shows clearly his rôle in the revolution. In 1765, as a representative of the people of Pennsylvania, Franklin was sent to England to ask that the king make Pennsylvania a royal province in order to end the "unfair privileges and influence" of her traditional proprietaries, the Penn family. But the 59-year-old ambassador who came to place his homeland in the arms of the king was embarrassed to find that the king's ministers had just imposed on the colonies a Stamp Act, the very idea of which was hated and resented throughout America.

Franklin was now forced to combat the ministers at the same time he was treating them as chosen patrons. But, after a trying year, he was rewarded by seeing the Stamp Act repealed in 1766, largely through his efforts. His popularity in America naturally increased, and he was soon the most widely known of all Americans on both sides of the Atlantic.



This drawing of Franklin was done by Rembrandt Peale's father and colored by Rembrandt Peale himself.

During these years, though loyal to his king, Franklin's admiration for England abated and his love of America deepened. His conception of American rights became increasingly liberal and precise. After the Townshend duties were enacted in 1767, he wrote, on the subject of England's right to tax America: "The more I have thought and read on the subject the more I find myself confirmed in the opinion that no middle doctrine can be well maintained, I mean not clearly with intelligible arguments. Something might be made of either of the extremes: that parliament has a power to make all laws for us, or that it has a power to make no laws for us; and I think the arguments for the latter more numerous and weighty than those for the former."

In 1774, as a result of his pro-American (hence, inevitably, anti-British) views, and also because of some intrigue against him on the part of enemies in Massachusetts, the king's ministers dismissed him from the office he had held since 1753 as deputy postmaster-general for America. He sailed back to Philadelphia with the prestige in the colonies of having lost a high position and discarded a brilliant career for the sake of his country.

Almost immediately he was made a member of the second continental congress and elected postmaster general of America. Conciliation seemed to him now no more than a vain hope. But, in order to justify himself with the moderates, he supported the petition to the king which gave Britain "one opportunity more," adding, however, "I think she has not sense enough to embrace (it), and so I conclude she has lost (her colonies) forever."

Further activities of Franklin, as Britain's "one opportunity more" was spurned, were sketching a "plan of union for the colonies," organizing the postal service, and serving on the commissions sent to induce the Canadians to join the colonies, to advise George Washington on defense, and to listen to Howe's peace proposals.

By this time the war was well under way and the British forces had possession of New York while Washington with his ragged recruits and farmers had retreated up the Hudson valley. The Americans were sorely in need of assistance, and the congress on Sept. 26, 1776, half in desperation, appointed Franklin one of three commissioners to seek aid in France. The other two were Deane and Jefferson, but Jefferson declined in favor of Arthur Lee. Franklin, then almost 70, agreed to do what he could, saying: "I am but a fag end, and you may have me for what you please." Intensely devoted to the American cause and feeling heavy responsibility for his country's desperate situation, his last act before sailing from Philadelphia on Oct. 26 was to lend congress some three or four thousand pounds. He arrived in France on Dec. 4.

Won Support of French in War

The French people, who had heard much of Franklin's inventions of the open Franklin stove and the lightning rod and had read his translated writings, gave him a rare welcome. Many remembered him also from his previous visits in 1767 and 1769. But the French government, an absolute Catholic and traditional monarchy, not yet willing to recognize the democratic and Protestant colonies, could not now openly receive him. He was faced with the delicate problem of promoting the cause of his countrymen who had been for 150 years the bitterest enemies of France in America. He wanted money, while France was in wretched financial shape herself.

With little intelligent assistance from America, Franklin proceeded step by step to win the French government to his cause. France already had secretly sent over a million livres' worth of arms, munitions, and food supplies to America in order to help Britain's enemies. But outwardly and officially she refused to deny her absolute neutrality, which naturally greatly limited the aid she could give the Americans. Franklin's aim, therefore, was to win official French support. His popularity as a backwoods philosopher and inventor did much to further this end. And his countenance, "shrewd, placid, benignant," his simple dress and unpretentious manners, his fur cap covering unpowdered gray locks, his knifelike wit and flexible homely wisdom—these qualities in the aged man soon made him more than an ambassador.

Presently Franklin was making regular trips to Versailles and was "able to keep in touch with the French administration."

He easily persuaded it to lend more money to the "United States" and even to make outright gifts, but secretly and unofficially. It was not until Feb. 6, 1778, that Franklin at last won complete success when the official treaties (a treaty of commerce, and a treaty of "defensive alliance . . . to maintain effectively the . . . independence absolute and unlimited of the United States") were signed.

Perhaps more for his securing the full support of the French government than for any other of his many services to his country do we owe gratitude to the great Benjamin Franklin, born in Boston to a humble tallow chandler and his wife two hundred and thirty years ago next Friday.

JAMES HENRY LEIGH HUNT, better known as Leigh Hunt, famous English essayist and poet, was born at Southgate, Middlesex, in 1784, and died at Putney in 1859. The son of a barrister father who had practiced his profession in Philadelphia but who had returned to England because of loyalist sympathies, Hunt grew up to become one of those unfortunate individuals always pursued by misfortune. As an editor he was imprisoned for an attack on the prince regent. As a critic he displayed a caustic style that frequently got him into trouble. As a judge of splendid poetry he was one of the first to recognize the genius of Keats. As a writer of narrative verse he turned out a number of shorter examples that have been accepted as minor classics. Among these are "Solomon's Ring" and "Abou Ben Adhem."

ABOU BEN ADHEM

Abou Ben Adhem (may his tribe increase!)
Awoke one night from a deep dream of peace,
And saw within the moonlight in his room,
Making it rich and like a lily in bloom,
An angel writing in a book of gold:
Exceeding peace had made Ben Adhem bold,
And to the presence in the room he said,
"What writest thou?" The vision raised its head,
And, with a look made of all sweet accord,
Answered, "The names of those who love the Lord."
"And is mine one?" said Abou. "Nay, not so,"
Replied the angel. Abou spoke more low,
But cheerily still, and said, "I pray thee, then,
Write me as one that loves his fellow men."
The angel wrote, and vanished. The next night
It came again, with a great wakening light,
And showed the names whom love of God had blessed,—
And, lo! Ben Adhem's name led all the rest!

THE SHIELD OF SILENCE

By Edwin Balmer and Philip Wylie

And So Comes to Its End the Amazing Story of a Man Who Slew to Guard the Secret of a Great Romance Which Befell When He Was War Prisoner and Fugitive

CONCLUSION

"I NEVER thought of myself as returning to Ursula," Alice read. "I did not know even that Ursula had remained in France. It was nearly a year since I had heard from her and since I had written to her from the German prison camp. It was nearly two years since we had been together. I had never seen her in Paris. She had landed only after I was captured.

"I succeeded in returning to France, but no one who has read this far will picture me returning to Ursula, now that Magda was dead. I never thought of myself marrying again or even living at all.

"The one circumstance which I should have expected, and yet never reckoned upon, occurred. I was wounded again just as I succeeded in passing the last German line and in reaching the French outpost. Helpless, I was picked up by the poilus and sent to the rear; from the field hospital I was moved to Paris.

"When first picked up I made the mistake of identifying myself. So news spread among the Americans in Paris, before we entered the war.

"Ursula arrived at the hospital one morning at an hour when I was asleep. I opened my eyes to see her bending over me. Her lips pressed down on mine.

"She and I know what she said, and neither of us will ever forget it.

"Every one knows what I did. I married Ursula, believing I was then to be returned to the front to fly over the lines and, fighting, die. But this the French refused me. The doctors declared me unfit for combat work; they kept me at the rear. At the end of this year my wife bore me a daughter.

"I no longer desired to die and I was still further removed from opportunity. America had entered the war, and our flying fields wanted officers of French training to teach combat tactics. A year here, then France again, and flying, the guns and the 'lines' below me, the black-crossed Fokkers about me.

"The god of battle gave me two; one for Magda, one for our baby. Then it was November eleventh.

"One oath I swore before I married Ursula and that oath I kept. The year of which she did not know should never, through me, bring harm to her.

"A single action only I reserved to myself. I wrote Karolina Dveunik at the address in Switzerland which she had given me two years and a half before. After a little delay I had an answer. She told me that Magda's brother had been killed fighting in Russia nearly two years ago and that Magda's father and mother were reunited but were in great poverty. The doctor had been blinded by a bullet in 1917. She was taking care of both of them.

"I went to a bank in Paris and inquired if they had an agent who could negotiate an extremely confidential matter. Paris banks, and other banks also, are provided with such people. I arranged with the bank to receive funds which would be forwarded from Chicago and put the money in the hands of Karolina Dveunik. She was to communicate, when necessary, with the Paris bank, never with me.

"It was Ralten, of all people, who put in an appearance."

For the moment Alice could bear no more; yet she could not put down the last pages. Ethan had been watching her read.

"What is it, Alice?" he asked.

"He's back in Chicago now. It's in a time I can remember. Serge Ralten's just come to Chicago. That was when I was ten years old. Read this with me, Ethan." And now they held the pages between them.

"I was not sure," they read, "that Ralten had survived the attack of that night."

["The night he means," Alice explained hurriedly, "when Magda was killed and he thought the baby was killed, too."]

"Cenek had not seen Ralten," the written words proceeded. "Cenek did not know whether Ralten had been killed or had saved himself. I learned it was the latter when, a little more than a year ago, he sent in his card to me at my office.

"'Serge Ralten.' I did not know him or any one by that name, but near the edge of the card was a tiny mark, an identifying scratch that Louis had devised for our party. ["He means," said Alice, "the party of Czech patriots who were harassing the Germans."] Odd ideas seized me. I could not help thinking of Louis. I tried not to show my excitement. 'Show Mr. Ralten in,' I said to my secretary and cleared my room for him.

"I wanted to help him. I was glad to be of assistance to him—and it turned out that he needed plenty of assistance. What I gave him and what I did for him was not to buy his silence.

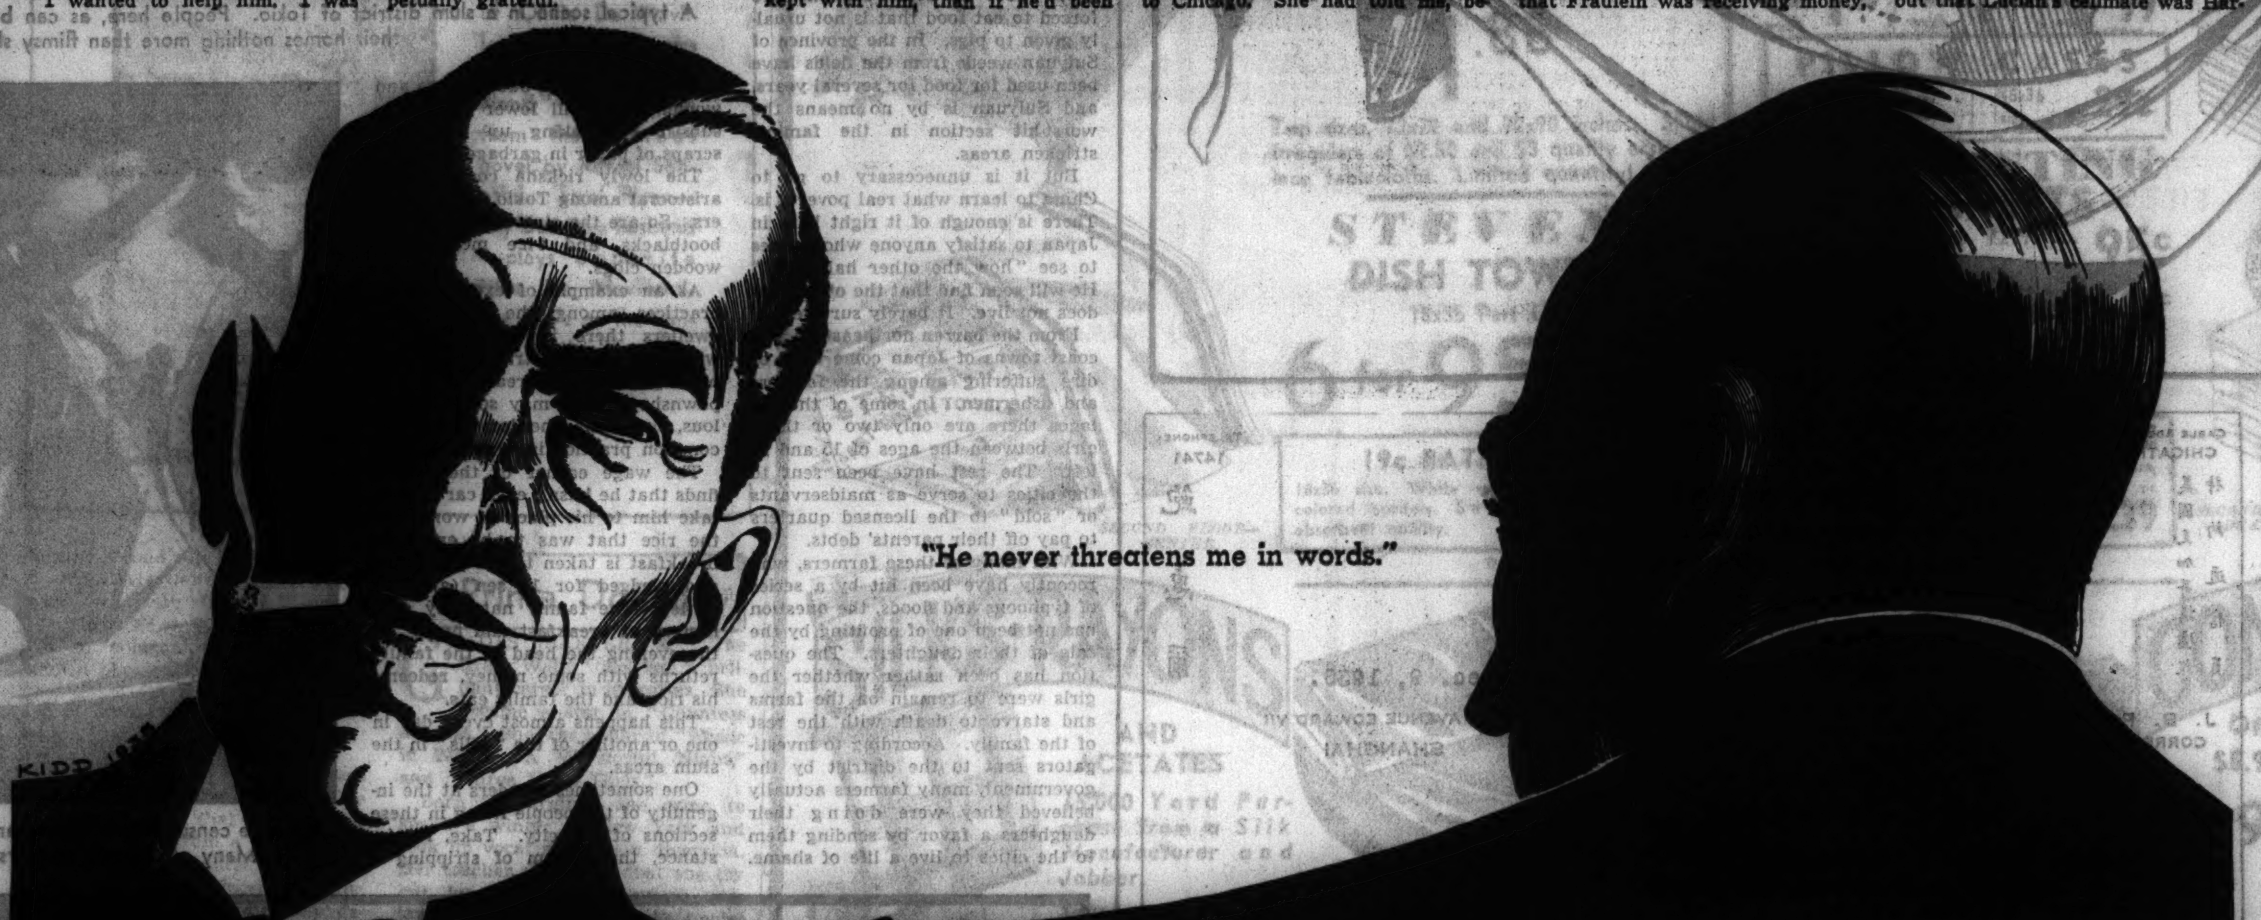
"But Ralten knew, even before he called on me, that I had hidden from my friends the secret of Magda and me—and of my year on that mountain.

"I made my mistake on the day of Ralten's appearance. I should have gone home and told my wife of Magda and me, and let it be told even to our friends. But I did not. For twelve years I had kept it within me and from them, and now it would seem that I told because I was forced to speak.

"I never asked Ralten to keep my secret. He offered to. He said: 'Lucian, I know how things are. I shall not disturb them for you.'

"So I took him to my home and to my friends, telling them half truths—that he had helped me after I escaped. I thought he soon would leave Chicago, but he had no idea of that. He established himself here, as my friend.

"I do not mind the money I have given him. It is the hold he has fastened upon me and which I cannot shake free. He never threatens me in words. He does not dare to or perhaps he is too clever for that. He merely remains here, as my 'friend' to whom I must be perpetually grateful.



"He never threatens me in words."

"I look at him and I swear to myself, 'I'll end this power of you over me.' I swear to myself that I'll speak to my wife, first, and then to my friends, and bare everything that I have done. But each time something within me stops me."

The last lines evidently had been added some time later. These were the only paragraphs which appeared to have been written in haste and without the greatest consideration:

"Ralten has been with me more than a year. He will not go away. The money I have given him mounts. I have never totaled it. Instead of putting him in my debt it has increased his power over me. He takes too many liberties; I must like them and I must like him. He must seem my closest friend, for whom I would do anything, whereas . . . whereas" The writing was broken. The final words had been dashed off as if spoken: "You keep yourself too close to me. Too close, I say!"

There was no more written.

"Something snapped in him at last," she said. "Father could stand it no longer."

Alice winked quickly to clear the tears from her eyes. "I'm glad we found this. O, since father is dead, I'm so glad we found this! For it shows, you see, that perhaps—perhaps he really was happier in prison and in his private world, which he kept with him, than if he'd been free and had Magda and the mountain taken away from him by being made base in people's opinion and common property."

"Read it all now, Ethan," she said, and at last she ceased her restless moving. She sank into a chair, and, as he read, she reached out a hand for each sheet that he finished and reread the record.

He gave her the last page and stood staring down at her.

"Have you noticed? When he was writing this he never knew——" Ethan began.

"About Johanna," Alice completed. "He still believed she was dead."

"Wasn't she? I mean, can we be sure she was that child?"

Now it was Alice who did not doubt. "All through when I was reading, I was feeling that . . . Remember, Ethan, he never saw the bodies. There must have been great confusion on the mountain, every one scattering who wasn't killed. Father merely was told they both were dead, and Magda surely was. . . . But Maria Karel was there, who loved Magda and hated him. I believe she saved the baby. . . . O, Ethan, I've been with Johanna. She's like her mother, but also, she's my sister!"

"Yes," said Ethan. "I thought so, too."

"We ought to take this to her, Ethan. You see, it's her life, too."

Ethan phoned a few minutes later to Johanna at her hotel, and they went at once to her.

Johanna did not read the pages in their presence. She begged both Alice and Ethan to remain, but she shut herself alone in her bedroom. And her reading took a long time.

At last Alice went to the bedroom door and tapped upon it.

"Come in," Johanna said barely audibly, and Alice entered. Johanna was lying on the bed, her face in the pillow. She did not turn, so Alice bent and kissed her cheek.

Johanna sat up, her cheeks wet with crying. Alice shut the door. This was for sisters, together.

"I'm glad," Johanna said, with Alice's hand clasped in hers, "that before you found this I told you of Maria Karel. Everybody knows of Fraulein Dveunik—that she brought me up. But no one knows of Maria Karel. She was, as I told to Ethan, peculiar.

"So many things more," said Johanna, "are explained to me. I always knew that I was not at first with Fraulein Dveunik. I was three or four years old when she adopted me. Dimly I can remember a time before Fraulein Dveunik. I can remember no time before Maria Karel."

"Probably—surely," said Alice, "she had you from infancy. She took you when your mother was killed on the mountain."

"I think so," Johanna said, very simply. "Maria Karel was very, very poor, but she was very intense in her feelings. She never really gave me to Fraulein Dveunik. Fraulein merely adopted me. Maria always was there, close to me."

"Where is she now?"

"In Vienna, I suppose. I left her there. Ah, this agrees, too! Never in my life did she let me go anywhere without her until I started to Chicago. She had told me, before, that the money that Fraulein Dveunik used had come from Chicago. She was willing that I go to Chicago, but she never asked to come here, too."

"Your grandfather and grandmother—Magda's mother and father, whom Fraulein Dveunik got the money for," Alice said. "Did you know them?"

Johanna shook her head. "There was a couple, and the man had been blind whom Fraulein had cared for before she adopted me. They both died in an epidemic, I believe, perhaps the influenza which was so bad soon after the war. I never knew them, only heard of them."

"What was their name?"

JOHANNA shook her head. "I do not know. I cannot remember, surely. I have heard talk of some friends, who died, called Havlicek. It may have been those."

"Where did you get the name Strang?"

"I chose it myself for the stage. I had gone by the name of Dveunik."

"Our father," said Alice, "never once mentioned Magda's family name."

"I think," said Johanna, "he wanted at least to prevent some merely curious person, into whose hands these sheets might fall, from finding—my mother. . . . And I think I know what Fraulein Dveunik did and why my father never heard of me.

"In the first place, at the time she wrote my father for money, she knew nothing of me. Maria Karel had me then, and Maria was not with her. It is probable that what Fraulein wrote was true. My mother's parents were living and dependent upon Fraulein. Your father and mine sent her money generously and without further question. Indeed, he says himself that he prevented direct communication from her, and there is no hint that the bank took further steps than faithfully to forward the money."

"Father always had a great deal of money," Alice said.

"So the five thousand of your dollars a year he sent——" Johanna continued.

"Was that it?"

"I believe that was it—it was little to him. He liked to pay it, perhaps, in my mother's memory. Well—Fraulein Dveunik's friends died, those for whom she had asked the money. She notified nobody; the money continued to come. In Austria—for she had taken to living in Vienna—five thousand American dollars a year would have been wealth. It would have made Fraulein conspicuous. Maria Karel heard of her, and she brought me with her to live with Fraulein Dveunik.

"O, so much to me becomes quite plain! I never could comprehend, quite, the relations between Maria and Fraulein—and myself. I told to Ethan—did he tell you?—that sometimes I liked Maria and sometimes I feared her. I said Maria hated Fraulein, and Fraulein, I thought, hated her; yet she kept Maria in her employ. And she had adopted me.

"It is quite clear. Maria knew that Fraulein was receiving money, in generous sums, for the care of a couple who was dead. Maria did nothing about that—I mean she did not notify the bank—because she also had to live on that money. To clear her conscience, Fraulein adopted me."

"Then she knew who you were?"

"She may not have. Maria may never have told her, but it looks as if she had. They were not without principle, Maria and Fraulein. They did not ask for more money. They simply continued to accept that which continued to come, and gave part of it to the care of me."

"But they did a more terrible thing to you—and to father," Alice said. "They never told him about you."

"That, too, has been tearing me. . . . But, from their side, why should they? Maria hated him, he said. Would she confess long afterward that she had concealed his child? She simply would lose me, and, you see, I am sure she did not want to do that."

A little later Alice brought out to Ethan, in the next room, the pages of the record.

She told him the circumstances which Johanna had related to her. She said:

"Johanna and I agreed that Peter Corondelet ought to read it. I shan't go with you. I'll stay here a while. You take it to him, Ethan."

Peter was at his office, but he had deputed to his partners the legal business of the day. Ethan found MacDuffy with Peter in Corondelet's big private room.

"You're a little late, Ethan," Peter said. "MacDuffy finished a few minutes ago. He's identified 'Otto.'"

"O!" Ethan said, remembering how they had attached "Otto" to the man murdered where, six years before, Ralten had fallen. "I've just come from Alice, sir," he said.

MacDuffy glanced at him curiously, but Peter appreciated that Ethan's errand was very private. He shook hands with MacDuffy, thanked him, and walked with him to the door.

He closed it carefully and turned back to Ethan.

"Well?" he said.

Ethan drew from an envelope Lucian Myrand's papers, and, briefly describing how they had been hidden, he handed them to Peter.

"You brought these right here?" Peter asked when he was well into the pages.

"No, sir. Alice and I took them to Johanna." And then, as Peter proceeded, Ethan added the explanations which Johanna had suggested.

Peter inquired: "What has Alice told her mother?"

"Nothing, yet. She felt that you ought to see these first."

"That's right," said Peter. "Tell Alice, when you go back to her, that I'll handle this business with her mother. Now as to the matter of the second murder in that room." Peter said more briskly and practically, "we've got to the bottom of that, too."

"Fallone," Ethan said.

"Fallone," said Peter, sitting back, "was a complex character. His front was reform, and I am willing to believe that he had his sincere moments in it. He loved the limelight, and he got it with his good deeds. In his other moments he was the directing genius of a gang equal to and unquestionably guilty of most of the crimes on the calendar.

"MacDuffy has a good start on tracking their trails, but he is nowhere near the end yet. Fallone's genius was in ideas amazing in their simplicity and boldness of conception.

"What simpler, if you want to be connected with criminals and have that connection unsuspected, than to engage offices in a respectable building backing upon a disreputable one—and run a tunnel between? Fallone got away with it for years. It enabled him to sit in with his gang whenever he wanted to.

"Crime held what proved to be a fatal fascination for him. When Myrand shot Ralten and went to the penitentiary, never saying a word, Fallone followed every phase of our investigation and made some of his own.

"He did one more exceedingly intelligent thing which MacDuffy has just told me about. Fallone found out that Lucian's cellmate was Harney Hamilton, and he got in touch with Hamilton's wife, and he paid her to report to him everything that Harney told her about Lucian, however trivial and unimportant it seemed.

"Hamilton, himself, of course, was much interested in Lucian. He watched him and listened to everything Lucian said—it wasn't much when Lucian was awake, but sometimes Lucian talked in his sleep. Hamilton would purposely lay awake to listen on some nights when Lucian was especialy disturbed. Hamilton could casually work into his interviews with his wife bits of information about Lucian.

"In this way Fallone learned two important things. One was the reason for Lucian's excitement on the day when his wife last visited him in the interview room.

"We now know that reason. It was the fact that on that day Johanna Strang's picture was in the newspaper that Lucian was permitted to read. Her likeness to Magda must have stirred Lucian greatly, especially when he read that the girl was an orphan born in Bohemia in 1916 and had been brought up by Fraulein Dveunik.

"At the time, we had no information to connect Lucian with that picture, but Fallone had. He knew that Lucian had cut out that picture from the newspaper and had concealed it in his cell.

"Fallone knew one further thing, which was that Lucian had said things in his sleep that convinced Hamilton that there was something of great importance hidden in Lucian's library. This was very much on Lucian's mind.

"Fallone was convinced, as many others were, that Lucian had been paying Ralten blackmail and finally had killed Ralten to save some secret. It therefore was a valuable secret—worth money to somebody else if it had been worth so much to Ralten. And the key to that secret was in Lucian's library.

"A practical consideration, therefore, reinforced Fallone's curiosity and his proclivity for meddling. He decided to make a visit to Lucian's library. Not being an experienced housebreaker, he enlisted the aid of 'Otto'—who has turned out to have been one Nate Schmidt, a housebreaker, recently arrived from New Orleans. Nate, as you observed from the contents of his waste basket, also did a little preparatory work on the case. Fallone tricked the caretaker and his wife and got them away for the night, then Schmidt and he went in.

"Now that was not a gang affair, MacDuffy tells me. It was a strictly private enterprise of Fallone in which Schmidt was assisting him. MacDuffy believes that Fallone regretted bringing along Schmidt. It gave the man too much 'on' him. Anyway, he shot Schmidt—an action which Fallone figured was perfectly safe because he thought nobody knew that he and Schmidt had gone to the house.

"I think MacDuffy is probably right, but I think, also," Peter said, considering, "that Fallone was struck by the sensation it would make to have another man found just as Ralten was found. So, after he shot Schmidt, he dragged the body around to the same position.

"Fallone had provided himself with rubber gloves, and for this job he added a touch of the weird and uncanny. At the time of the Ralten murder Ralten's thumbprints had been taken and published. Fallone had preserved them, and he had engraved the rubber of the thumbs of his gloves to make a mark like Ralten's. Of course, the experts were not finally fooled, but it made a sensation at first.

"But Fallone made one serious slip. Schmidt had told one of his pals where he was going, and with whom. So some of the boys at the other end of Fallone's tunnel knew that he had taken out Schmidt and double-crossed him, and they were going to do something about it.

"He tried to square it that night when you saw those lighted windows, but it just couldn't be done. Now no one knew better than Fallone that things that happen to double-crossers are not nice and also he knew that they happen.

"He had a heart that wasn't too good, and he decided to cheat the boys that were waiting for him, and go in a blaze of glory. So he staged his big speech, gave himself about fifty times too much aconitine and—you saw it, Ethan."

"When will this come out?" Ethan asked.

"About Fallone?" said Peter. "Some of it never. It'll be hard to prove. . . . For instance, they've cremated Fallone. After I got the chemical report on the amount of the drug in the drops you gave me, I was going to ask for an autopsy on Fallone, but Lucian was dying. I let it slip, and before I got around to it again, I found Fallone's friends had suddenly had him cremated.

"About Lucian," Peter continued, "nothing—nothing more whatever will ever be said if I can help it. Not a syllable outside, and in the family—leave Ursula to me, Ethan."

"I will, sir," and he gave Peter his hand. "Gladly."

ETHAN picked up Alice a couple of hours later and drove alone with her to Lake Forest.

"Peter Corondelet wants to take the responsibility of how much to tell your mother," Ethan said.

"He should," Alice agreed.

"He's in love with her, isn't he?"

"He always has been. And I wish now she'd marry him. Why not, after a few months? Father's been gone from her six years, and he was never really hers. I wish . . . I wish mother'd married Peter twenty years ago."

"I don't. Then where'd you be?"

"You'd have Johanna."

"She's wonderful, but she's not you, Alice. She's not half of you!"

"She is wonderful, Ethan. A strange woman came in. Mrs. Hamilton—the wife of father's cellmate. Peter sent her. Did he tell you about it?"

"Yes."

"She came to tell Johanna and me that she meant no harm, repeating to Mr. Fallone what she heard of father from her husband. She was sure Mr. Fallone was a fine man, only interested in the law. She came to tell Johanna, too, how father cut out her picture and how he heard her voice on the radio.

"Johanna broke down with happiness, Ethan. She said: 'So he saw me, and I spoke to him, too!'

"I'm never going to lose track of Johanna or let her drift away from me. I know she's my sister, and I know she feels it, too. Father certainly believed she was his daughter. Everything he did in the last days was an acknowledgment of her. She doesn't need money, but whether she needs it or not, I'm going to see that something substantial is settled on her from father's—and her father's—estate. There's an awful lot, you know, and if there are legal difficulties in giving her a share direct, I'll divide mine with her. . . . It's wonderful—isn't it, Ethan?—to find such a person as she."

"It's more wonderful, far, to find you, Alice. O, my dear, you're only a girl, and yet you're grown up!"

"Yes, I'm grown up, Ethan, and I'm glad I am. I'm quite grown up enough——"

"To marry me?"

"As soon," said Alice, "as soon as we can."

Dear Una: I don't know when I've seen more in a horoscope in the way of versatility than is to be found in yours. You're quite an exceptional person—not all honey and sweet, it is true, but with plenty of character and interesting all the way. These are the qualities of a great actress. You've been doing mighty well, but you can continue to rise in dramatic and character-portrayal greatness. Seek variety in your roles; you can do just about anything you start out to do. With best wishes,

For Bad Winter Coughs, Mix This Remedy Yourself

Saves Good Money! No Cooking!

If you want the best cough remedy that money can buy, mix it at home. It costs very little, yet it's the most reliable, quick-acting medicine you ever used. The way it takes hold of distressing coughs, giving immediate relief, is astonishing.

Any druggist can supply you with 2½ ounces of Pinex. Pour this into a pint bottle, and add granulated sugar syrup to make a full pint. To make syrup, use 2 cups of sugar and one cup of water, and stir a few moments until dissolved. No cooking needed. It's no trouble at all, and gives you four times as much cough medicine for your money—a real family supply. Keeps perfectly and tastes fine.

It is surprising how quickly this loosens the phlegm, soothes the irritated membranes, helps clear the air passages, and thus ends a bad cough in a hurry.

Pinex is a compound of Norway Pine, in concentrated form, famous for its effect in stopping coughs quickly. Money refunded if it does not please you in every way.

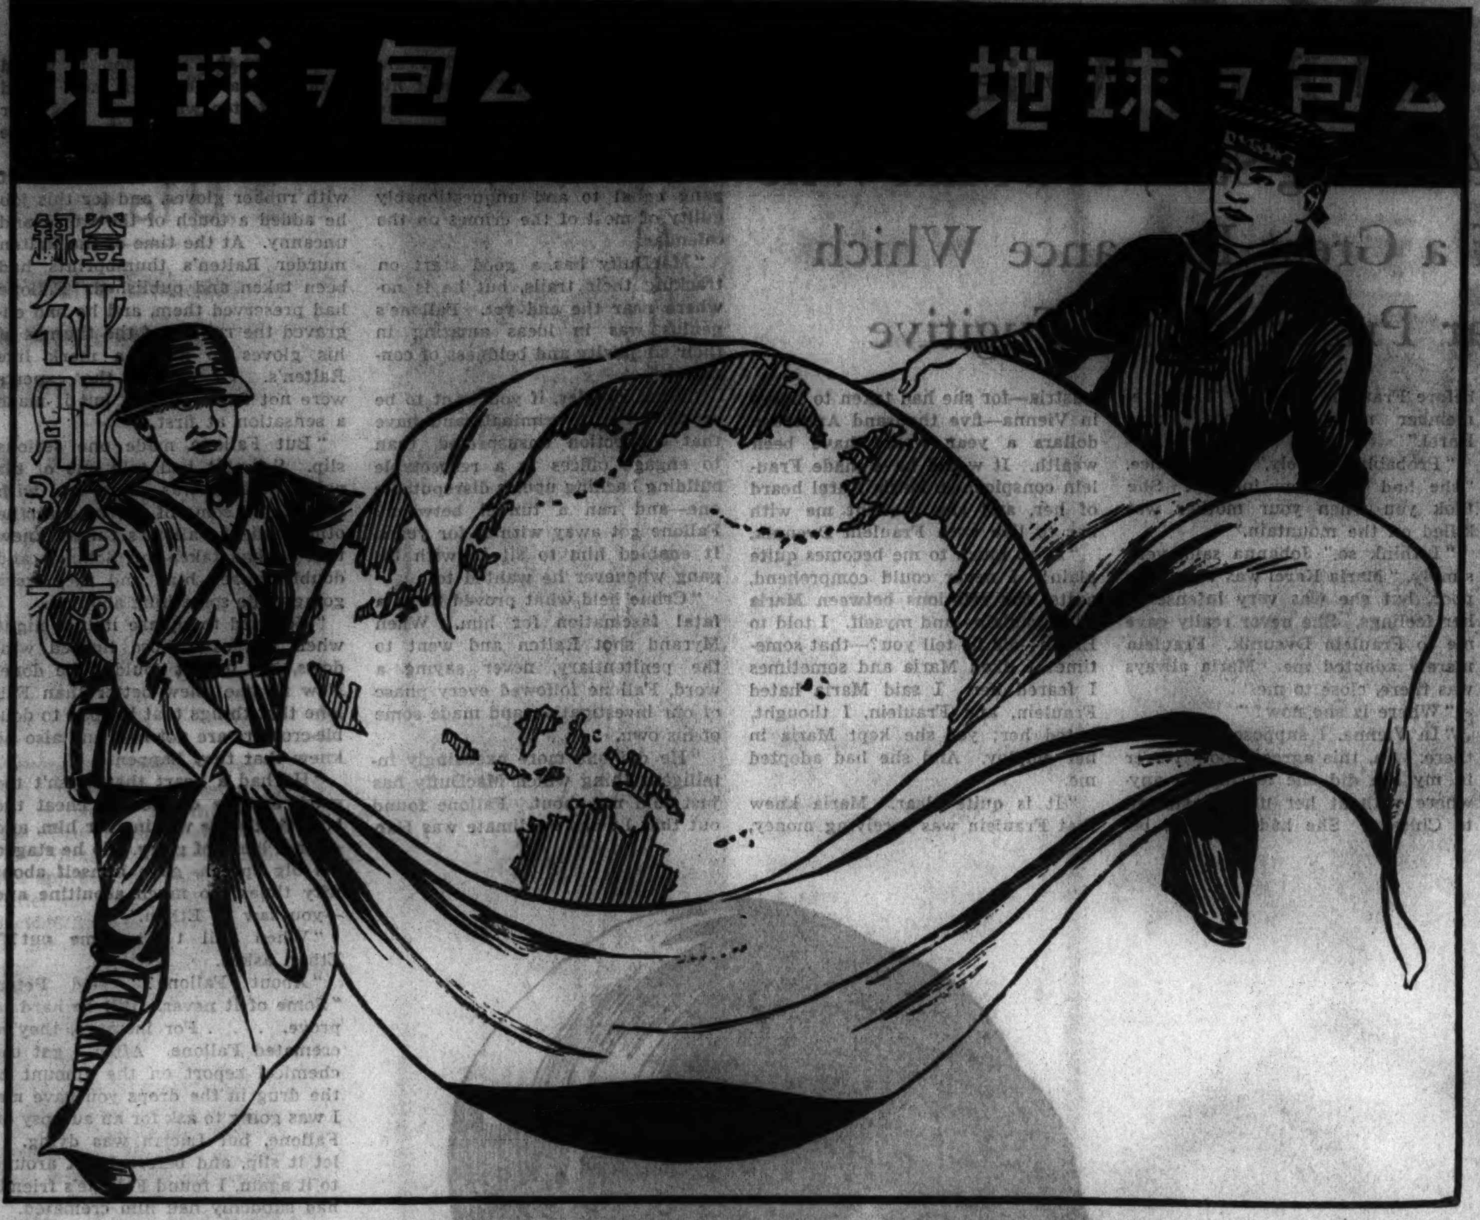
Propaganda for World Empire



Japan's Idea on Wrapping Paper

TO WHAT lengths the imperial Japanese government will go to spread propaganda for world empire among its citizens is revealed in the illustration printed at the top of the page and in the accompanying explanatory letter from J. B. Powell, Chicago Tribune correspondent in Shanghai, China.

What the attitude of the Chinese government is toward Japan is shown in the following paragraphs received recently from the Shanghai correspondent:

"Four hundred million Chinese are told by official proclamation that they must not say or do anything that might hurt the feelings of 70,000,000 Japanese. The official proclamation of the Nanking executive yuan (Wang Ching-wei, chairman) tells the Chinese they must refrain from boycotting or making speeches and comments likely to cause ill feeling. Furthermore, no organization of a 'patriotic' or anti-foreign nature may be formed, and those in existence must be dissolved. Finally, the decree declares that the 'adoption of an intimate attitude of friendship toward "friendly" powers is of foremost importance.'

"Anyone disobeying will be severely dealt with.

"A Chinese editor, Tu Chung-yuan, whose magazine published an article entitled 'Gossip About Emperors,' which the Japanese regarded as disrespectful of their emperor, was arrested by the Chinese authorities and railroaded to jail for fourteen months by Judge Yu Hua of the Kiangsu court at Shanghai.

"A Japanese military officer in uniform sat in the courtroom during the course of the trial, which almost broke out in a riot when the decision was handed down, the crowd crying, 'Japanese imperialism has captured our courts!' 'Down with Japanese imperialism!'"

Dear Col. McCormick:

I just received your note of Dec. 4 referring to cartoons and I shall send along a collection shortly.

In the meantime I am enclosing herewith a remarkable example of Japanese domestic publicity designed for the purpose of keeping the war spirit alive. This is an exact reproduction of a Japanese circular which is being used by merchants in Japan as wrapping paper for merchandise. The cartoon, or picture, showing the Japanese soldier and sailor wrapping up the world in the Japanese flag, was designed by an army officer and is being generally reproduced in colors by merchants in connection with their shop advertising. This particular circular was wrapped about a kimono purchased by a tourist in a shop in Kobe, Japan. The inscription on the left side of the circular is the registered trade mark of a shop which specializes in bathing suits. The Japanese characters at the top of the picture mean "The Japanese flag will envelop the world." The original appeared on a cardboard folder about two feet square, but the enclosed is an exact reproduction, in case you might wish to use it in the Tribune. It should be of some interest to those persons in America who do not think it makes any difference to us about what the Japanese do in Asia.

With best wishes and personal regard, I am

Very truly yours,

Tallow Their Fare for 15 Days

By WALTER L. SCRATCH

Honolulu, Hawaii.

THEY'VE been shipwrecked twice. They've been raided by pirates. They lived fifteen days on tallow until they drifted ashore on Molokai in the Hawaiian Islands. But—

Capt. Eric Bisschop and Joseph Tatibouet are organizing a new expedition at this port for another attack on scientific secrets of the South Seas.

Why? Because Captain Bisschop, of the French Geographical society, himself a noted ethnologist, thinks all the other ethnologists are wrong about the origin of the Polynesian race that inhabits the Pacific islands. He thinks they emigrated from the Americas, and nearly all the other ethnologists agree they came out of southern Asia.

Their long trail across the Pacific started in the fall of 1932 at Amoy, China. But on Nov. 28, 1932, their Chinese junk, Fou-po I., came to grief on Formosa. Pirates raided the wreck and left the scientists with only their clothes.

Since Captain Bisschop had been a French air corps officer and had been adviser to the Chinese, they were detained for questioning by the Japanese. But they went back and at Shanghai obtained the Fou-po II., that three years later was to be strewn along the rocky coast of Molokai.

Down through the South Seas they went to Borneo, New Guinea, Papua, and along the coast of Australia. Then up through the Pacific islands to the Marshalls, Japanese mandated, where they again were held for questioning.

Aug. 7 of last year they cleared on the long up-wind beat to Hawaii that ended after 79 days in shipwreck. For 15 days they ate candles after their food reserves spoiled. Four days out of Honolulu the NYK liner Tatsuta Maru passed them, and they waved and shouted for help. But the passengers and crew waved back as the liner swept past and rocked their 40-foot junk in its swells.

In a dead calm, maddened by starvation, they watched the lights of Honolulu twinkle a few miles ahead one full night. Then they were driven back to the east until they managed to drop anchor off Molokai, where Captain Bisschop fainted. Road workers heard Tatibouet's calls for help and took them off.

That night a storm came up and their records went to the bottom with the Fou-po II.

Arriving at Honolulu, Captain Bisschop received a letter from the French Geographical society asking him to rush pictures and information on the Marshall Islands. Before returning to his mission he's writing a book from memory, his pictures and records having been lost.

Jap Poor Pawn Breakfasts

Daughters Sold to Save Families

Tokio, Japan.

WITH the exception of sections in the larger cities in the far east, such as Tokio, Osaka, Shanghai, Singapore, and Hongkong, the teeming millions of the orient, who make up a third of the world's population, still live today in such misery and squalor as the west has never experienced—not even during the worst of the depression years.

Pitiful tales of starving millions in China are brought here daily by people returning from the inland of the war-torn republic.

"Never before in my many years of life in China have I seen such poverty and famine and deplorable conditions in general as at present," declared an American mission worker after completing a 700-mile trip through the famine-stricken areas in central China.

The poor in some sections are forced to eat food that is not usually given to pigs. In the province of Suiyuan weeds from the fields have been used for food for several years, and Suiyuan is by no means the worst-hit section in the famine-stricken areas.

But it is unnecessary to go to China to learn what real poverty is. There is enough of it right here in Japan to satisfy anyone who desires to see "how the other half lives." He will soon find that the other half does not live. It barely survives.

From the barren northeastern seacoast towns of Japan come tales of dire suffering among the farmers and fishermen. In some of the villages there are only two or three girls between the ages of 15 and 20 left. The rest have been sent to the cities to serve as maidservants or "sold" to the licensed quarters to pay off their parents' debts.

With many of these farmers, who recently have been hit by a series of typhoons and floods, the question has not been one of profiting by the sale of their daughters. The question has been rather whether the girls were to remain on the farms and starve to death with the rest of the family. According to investigators sent to the district by the government, many farmers actually believed they were doing their daughters a favor by sending them to the cities to live a life of shame.

A typical scene in a slum district of Tokio. People here, as can be noted, exist in absolute squalor, their homes nothing more than flimsy shacks.

buys empty bottles, but are men and women of a still lower class who subsist by picking up rags and scraps of paper in garbage cans.

The lowly ricksha coolie is an aristocrat among Tokio's slum dwellers. So are the street hawkers, the bootblacks, and the menders of wooden clogs.

As an example of extraordinary practices among the city's slum dwellers there is the custom of wives of poverty-stricken families putting the day's breakfast in the pawnshop. This may sound ridiculous, but none the less is a very common practice in certain circles.

The wage earner of the family finds that he hasn't even car fare to take him to his place of work. So the rice that was to be eaten at breakfast is taken to the pawnshop and pledged for 10 sen (about 3 cents). The family naturally goes hungry at breakfast and noon. In the evening the head of the family returns with some money, redeems his rice, and the family eats.

This happens almost every day in one or another of the "cells" in the slum areas.

One sometimes wonders at the ingenuity of the people living in these sections of the city. Take, for instance, the custom of stripping a goodwife of her clothing, which is practiced so frequently, especially in summer, that it is no longer regarded as funny. When a family in the slums finds that it has no rice or anything else to pawn it is often the practice for the wife to be stripped of whatever clothing she has on. Her spouse turns these over to the pawnshop for car fare. If perchance he fails to obtain work, which is not rare, it is just too bad for his wife. Sometimes she is obliged to keep strictly indoors for a couple of days.

Japanese census takers finding another homeless citizen to enumerate. Many of Japan's paupers are wanderers of the street.

A Japanese beggar. So long as a person can stand without props he does not beg.

The world at large may have heard of Japan's tremendous trade expansion in recent years and of the resultant prosperity, but such reports have not done much to relieve the sufferings among the poverty-stricken class. That there is prosperity in some parts of Nippon there is little doubt, for it is still possible for the starving farmers to "sell" their daughters to the gay quarters.

This, however, does not mean that the cities are so prosperous that there is no misery and squalor in them. There is a lot of filth in every city in the orient, and Tokio is no exception. This much, however, can be said for this city: there is very little thriftless poverty here.

This undoubtedly explains why there is so little begging here. The down-and-outer who begs a dime for a cup of coffee would have a hard time in Nippon. At best he may receive a copper penny, and that not unless he falls on his knees and bows his head so low that it touches the ground. No beggar who can stand, much less walk, receives any alms in Japan unless he is a child.

No matter how down and out a Nipponese may be, he will strive to earn his own food, if not his board; and if he cannot do this he may even search for it in garbage cans. But he will not go begging so long as his legs will carry him.

There are various occupations for such persons; more, in fact, than one brought up in the west can imagine. There are, for instance, the yonageshi, who make a specialty of dredging the bottoms of open sewers with baskets. These human dregs shake their baskets in the muddy water after scooping up everything that lies in the sewer and pick up anything worth recovering from the mud and slime.

This is one reason why there are so many ragpickers in the country. These persons are not to be confused with the junk man of the west who Win Back Pep, Clear Your Skin, Look Younger!

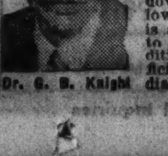
Women Need Help More Often Than Men

When Acids and poisons accumulate in your blood you lose your vitality and your skin becomes coarse and cloudy—you actually feel and look years older than you are. And what is worse, functional Kidney disorders may cause more serious ailments, such as Getting Up Nights, Nervousness, Leg Pains, Lumbago, Swollen Joints, Rheumatic Pains, Dizziness, Dark Circles Under Eyes, Headaches, Frequent Colds, Burning, Smarting, Itching, and Acidity.

The only way your body can clean out the Acids, poisons, and toxins from your blood is through the function of 9 million tiny, delicate tubes or filters in your Kidneys. When your Kidneys get tired or slow down because of functional disorders, the acids and poisons accumulate and thus cause much trouble. Fortunately, it is now easy to help stimulate the diuretic action of the Kidneys with a Doctor's prescription, Cystex (pronounced Siss-Tex), which is available at all drug stores.

Doctors Praise Cystex

Dr. Geo. B. Knight, of Camden, New Jersey, recently wrote: "When Kidneys don't function properly and fail to properly throw off the waste matter strained from the blood, aches develop in the muscles and joints, the appetite suffers, sleep is disturbed and the patient is generally run-down and suffers with lowered vitality. Cystex is an excellent prescription to help overcome this condition. It starts its beneficial action almost immediately, yet contains no harmful or injurious ingredients. I consider Cystex a prescription which men and women in all walks of life should find beneficial in the treatment of functional Kidney disorders." And Dr. T. J. Rastelli, famous Doctor, Surgeon, and Scientist, of London, says: "Cystex is one of the finest remedies I have ever known in my medical practice. Any doctor will recommend it for its definite benefits in the treatment of many functional Kidney and Bladder disorders. It is safe and harmless."



Dr. G. B. Knight

World-Wide Success

Cystex is not an experiment, but is a proven success in 31 different countries throughout the world. It is prepared with scientific accuracy and in accordance with the strict requirements of the United States Dispensatory and the United States Pharmacopoeia, and because it is intended especially for functional Kidney and Bladder disorders, it is swift, safe and sure in action.

German Comedy Introduces New Teutonic Actor to New York

Plays Naive Embezzler in the Adaptation of "Tomorrow's a Holiday."

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK, Jan. 11.—[Special.]—The first week of the new year brought nothing to the Broadway theaters worth cheering about. A tricky comedy called "Tomorrow's a Holiday," adapted from the German by that gay little Mexican, Romney Brent, and "Hell Freezes Over," a horror drama in which six men stranded in the antarctic die variously between 9 and 11 p. m.

"Tomorrow's a Holiday" was interesting principally because it brought to notice in America a pleasant little actor named Curt Bois. Mr. Bois, as the story goes, does not approve of Mr. Hitler, nor Mr. Hitler of him. Therefore he has decided he had much rather live in America where everybody approves of practically everybody else, unless they get into politics.

Joseph Schildkraut Sponsors Bois.

Mr. Bois is a personal friend of Joseph Schildkraut, also a development of the continental theater. Mr. Schildkraut, admirer as well as friend, undertook to arrange an introduction for Mr. Bois in the native theater. It was he, I understand, who induced Mr. Brent to make the adaptation of "Tomorrow's a Holiday," done originally by Leo Perutz and Hans Adler. It was he who took the play to John Golden. Mr. Golden and Mr. Schildkraut produced it together.

Mr. Bois is a small man of about the same build and with something of the same timorous bantam style of attack as Ernest Truex. Dark-skinned and wide-eyed, he also suggests an Eddie Cantor type. Seeing him only in one part, and that a serious one, I have a feeling that his forte is character rather than comedy, though he has a good reputation as a comedian. . . .

In "Tomorrow's a Holiday" he plays Toni Heffner, a happy husband in Vienna who finds himself in a most unhappy predicament. He is division manager of a local bank, an honest, hard-working fellow. But, at the moment, he has borrowed eight thousand kronen from his cash drawer, expecting to put it back in a few days. Then he hears that the company examiner will be on hand next day to look over the accounts. And next day is a holiday. Wherever is he going to raise eight thousand kronen between dinner time and 9 o'clock next morning?

Banker Tries to Save Toni by Playing Poker.

Toni tries to borrow of his best friends. They are either broke or suspicious. He goes to another banker for help, only to learn that this banker is himself facing bankruptcy. He approaches a certain Baron Traising who has a reputation for gambling. Traising turns out to be a borrower, not a lender, but an obliging friend in that he promises to try to win eight thousand kronen at poker. Grasping at this last chance, Toni sits in as a kibitzer at the poker game, dying the death whenever Traising loses, exulting wildly when he wins. Traising finally wins the necessary sum, but promptly bets it on the turn of a card to save his pride when his fellow players accuse him of quitting. And loses it all.

Toni comes into the last act completely crushed and expecting the police to call for him any minute. In the nick of time, of course, he is saved. Baron Traising has found another poker game and kept his winnings.

Play Builds Up Hopes Only to Betray Them.

There is good fun in "Tomorrow's a Holiday," but it is a spotty play and extremely tricky. Too obvious a dose, I fear, for popular approval. Folks who know little and care less of the tricks of the theater may not resent the play that is artificially builded in the hope and expectation of fooling them, but they are seldom good advertising agents.

Helping Mr. Bois are Mr. Schildkraut himself, magnanimously playing the second rôle of the gambling baron; Doris Dalton, a pretty girl who was with Dennis King in "Petticoat Fever," and a large number of competent but less well known players. . . .

"Hell Freezes Over" Destroys Its Victims in Pairs.

The horror play, "Hell Freezes Over," I have it from reliable scouts, is simply that and nothing more. Which, from a comfortable distance, seems quite all right. There is, I am convinced, a public for plays that are deliberately designed to shiver the spinal columns of the lightly susceptible. But I also have noticed that any of these that achieve success are also blessed with a lot of comedy. If you have horror, you must have relief, too. And there is little comedy in the fate of seven men stranded in the wreck of a dirigible which has crashed on the way to the south pole.

"Hell Freezes Over" takes care of its victims in pairs. At the end of the first act the seven are about to start to walk across the ice 600 miles to a relief station, but one of their number has his foot crushed by a girder and the others refuse to leave him. When the crushed foot becomes gangrenous the doctor of the expedition mercifully poisons the boy and then poisons himself. There are two gone.

Death Swallowing Cast as Curtain Falls.

Two others start again for a relief ship and perish of exposure. Two others discover, quite by accident, that one is the husband of a woman the other seduced. They try to beat each other to the draw and both die of gunshot wounds.

This leaves but one, a philosophical explorer of many experiences and a helpful philosophy. The duelists have chained him to the wreck to keep him from interfering with their plans. He is thus left to starve to death slowly and by himself. Which is the happy picture the audience takes away.

Curiously, many people have had faith in "Hell Freezes Over." It has been threatened with production many times, and the author, John Patrick, has probably collected neat sums in advance royalties. At the present time I understand at least a half dozen well known Broadwayites have an interest in the production, including Beatrice Kaufman, wife of the playwright, and Harpo Marx. . . .

The seven actors engaged include several of achievement in the profession, Lee Baker, John Litel, Louis Calhern, and Myron McCormick among them. . . .

Your correspondent has nothing resembling exact knowledge of how long he is likely to live, but he knows that it will not be long enough for him to understand the money situation. Here, on the one hand, he has word from Hallie Flanagan's federal theater project, reporting progress in assembling jobs under the WPA for distressed actors, as well as theaters in which the actors may appear. And almost in the same mail he gets figures going to prove that the rush to spend money in the New York theaters through the holidays was, if not unprecedented, at least unlike any similar rush that has occurred in the last six or eight years.

It is, for example, reported that Mr. White's "Scandals," which is the newest of the hoopla shows, grossed $8,886 at the New Year's eve performance by raising the prices to $8.80 top. Mr. Harris' and Mr. Gordon's "Jubilee," modestly holding the top price to $7.70, took in $7,600.

Cowl and Hayes Pack in New Year's Eve Crowds.

"First Lady," with Jane Cowl, being dramatic and therefore not in as great demand as the musicals, charged $5.50 each for the best seats, and probably $2.50 for the worst, and counted $4,176 in the till by 9 o'clock. And Helen Hayes, who did her broadcasting early [that being her regular Tuesday night assignment], began playing "Victoria Regina" at 10 o'clock in the evening before an audience that had paid $4,743 to see her.

A half dozen other popular plays did equally well. An encouraging indication of a returning prosperity, but puzzling, as I say, when contrasted with the government's effort to save the theater's dependents from starvation. Well, at least the government got the taxes, as the President might say. . . .

Any One Can Write Bad Book for Musical Show?

The late Harry B. Smith was the most active of the librettists over a period of years. He probably worked successfully with more composers than any other man of his time, and though there always will be some question as to the quality of his work, the fact that it lived and served the purpose for which it was created may reasonably be counted in its favor. To write 300 "stage pieces" and to have at least the titles of half of them inspire pleasant memories with playgoers of two generations is in itself an achievement of which the Smith descendants may fairly boast. I shall always remember Mr. Smith for one typical admission. He doubtless read more frequently than any of his contemporaries the familiar critical estimate of a musical play that while its music was pleasing its book was terrible. Taking account of this in his own book of reminiscences, "First Nights and First Editions," he said: "Almost any one can write a bad book for a musical comedy and sometimes the worst ones are profitable."

There were a lot of bad books in the Smith list, but they made him a fortune, bought him a library of rare first editions, kept him busy, and turned his own pursuit of happiness into an exciting and satisfying adventure.

SEEN IN "CAPTAIN BLOOD"

This most demure and completely charming photograph of Olivia De Havilland shows her as she is seen in "Captain Blood" — adapted from the famous novel by Rafael Sabatini. Errol Flynn—Lily Damita's husband—plays opposite Miss De Havilland. The film's on the United Artists' screen.

Prima Donna

GLADYS BAXTER of "The Great Waltz" has had a brilliant career in operettas. She became a star in "Countess Maritza." She was a star of "Music in May," "A Wonderful Night," and "Three Little Girls."

Born in Virginia, she came to spend a winter in New York and took up vocal study as a diversion. Her teacher suggested that she try out for "Tangerine," which was then in production, and she immediately was offered an unimportant rôle. "The Magic Ring," "Peg o' My Dreams," "Little Jesse James," and "When You Smile" followed.

Then she was engaged to play the princess in "The Student Prince." After that followed "I Told You So." Then she was engaged to play the lead in "Cherry Blossoms," which launched her as a prima donna and led to her success in "Countess Maritza."

Her present rôle, Countess Baranskaja, royal patroness of young Johann Strauss in "The Great Waltz," is probably her greatest success. The Strauss score is difficult and requires a fine dramatic soprano. In addition, the part itself calls for acting skill.

Archbishop of York Delights Chicago Society

He Talks of Them of Kindness and "Releegion," but Not at All of Politics.

By Cousin Eve.

WHEN Bishop George Craig Stewart introduced the archbishop of York, primate of England, at the Church club dinner in the Red Lacker room, he did it superbly. And what a large occasion. Here was a speakers' table replete with the great of the city: Mayor Kelly, British Consul General and Mrs. Bernays, Chairman A. J. Lindstrom, Gen. and Mrs. Charles G. Dawes, Mrs. Francis T. A. Junkin, Mr. and Mrs. Edward L. Ryerson Jr., Clifford Barnes, Bishop Campbell Gray of Indiana.

And Lady Temple, with the august archbishop, who was being apostrophized as successor to St. Wilfrid, Cardinal Wolsey, and Geoffrey Plantagenet. She is a charming looking, demure brunette, quite young. The primate of England and member of the house of lords, if dressed in a monk's cowl, instead of a maroon outfit with many buttons, a gold cross, and high, black lether puttees, would look like a fifteenth century monk, so round and jovial is he, so solid and serene.

Rising to his feet, he addressed our own prelate as "My Lord Bishop" and proceeded with a talk of no political import whatever. Just a plea that kindness might spread among individuals in ever increasing circles, until it becomes international. There was a good deal about "releegion," too. Any one expecting to hear how grand and effective is the league of nations, never heard a peep.

Rigorous Rules Govern Wardrobe for Prelate's Dinner.

There was a great to-do before this dinner as to what the ladies should wear. One who dearly loves all bishops urged her friends to honor the great occasion with their most glorious and resplendent attire, satins, velvets, frontless, backless, feathered, what not. But I knew a happening which deterred me from anything but the most godly costume with long sleeves and high neck. It happened, I believe, in Paris or London, but after all it might have been Rome. There was a dinner party with a Cardinal. Etiquet or protocol or whatever requires that ladies should wear extremely discreet dress at such a party. But one woman whose rank brought her to be seated next the great church dignitary wore little above the table.

Cardinals usually are brilliant men of the world, and this one was no exception. So the dinner went forward until the fruit finally was passed and the Cardinal's decollete neighbor was about to select an apple for herself. "Pray, madame, do not take that apple," said his eminence. "Remember Eve—she ate the apple and knew that she was naked."

At the Church club dinner were many men with the collar buttoned behind. Dr. and Mrs. Duncan Browne had a table at which were Mrs. P. A. Valentine, Mrs. Garfield King, Mrs. Richardson Dunham, Mrs. Charles C. Ansit, Frederick Norcross, Mrs. George Payson, Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Dempster. Mrs. Francis Junkin had two tables, with, among others, Mrs. William Baum, Col. and Mrs. Robert Peck, Miss Gisela Binz, Mrs. Richard T. Crane, Mrs. George Meeker, Mrs. Robert Newberry, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Noyes, Mr. and Mrs. Hal Bangs, Mr. and Mrs. T. W. Hinde were there.

The week's large social event was Mrs. Francis Junkin's musical Tuesday night at the Drake. An innovation was a dozen young bucks of society with broad, red, satin ribbon sashes dining with Mrs. Junkin and acting later as ushers at the party. Among them, Blake Blair, Robert Fernald, Chester Brundage, Dudley Short, and Robert Grant. Mrs. Junkin in a lovely toilette of powder blue velvet received in the foyer of the ball room. A double file of guests met pretty and charming Gisela Binz of Berlin and also a tall, handsome young cleric, Canon Sale of Fairabault, an adopted son of Mrs. Junkin.

The program was given by Miss Binz at the piano and Richard Hale, baritone, of New York, a lieder singer, who also is seen occasionally in drama. It was a gorgeous evening. The young German girl has surely a marvelous future, and the singer a distinguished past.

Many pretty ladies in enchanting fresh costumes: Mrs. John A. Carpenter, in black tulle laced in silver, and, incidentally, with her in-laws, the Baclovics. Mrs. Silas Strawn in copper satin; Mrs. Ernest Graham in violet and silver lamé [wonderful costume!]; Mrs. Bartholomay Osborne in ruby red; Mrs. Charles Goodspeed in demure red lace, high at the neck and belted; Mrs. Lewis Bernays in white with many, many fringes; Mrs. Frank McCoy in vivid emerald crepe and Mrs. Duncan Browne in a frock of black brocaded in gold. Mrs. Hamilton McCormick, in violet, came with a dove party. Also present were Mrs. Howard Shaw, Mrs. Hambleton Kirk, and Mrs. John Crerar.

Hutchins Thinks Saluting Flag Just Dandy.

Dancing followed in the ballroom, and many lingered a while in the long gallery, where there was a buffet. Here I heard an amusing story of Robert Hutchins, whom most people know to be the handsome and nimble witted president of the University of Chicago.

A doughty dame rose up at some big California dinner and addressed this to him: "I want to know—do you think school children should or should not salute the flag?"

"I think it's just dandy," said President Hutchins.

Two charming people from England staying with Mrs. Jacob Baur during the week, Mr. and Mrs. Post Wheeler. The last time I had seen them was last July at the royal jubilee garden party at Buckingham palace. They were living then in their house on Chelsea embankment. Since then Post Wheeler has retired from the diplomatic service, and they are delectably on the loose and going to Hollywood with their pockets full of ideas and enchanting writings. For they are both of the literati.

As Hallie Erminie Rives of Virginia, Mrs. Wheeler did her bit in romantic fictions of the long ago, following on those of her cousin Amelie Rives, now Princess Troubetskoi.

Seven Now Correct Number for a Luncheon.

Post Wheeler finished last summer his "Hodanzo, or Japanese Arabian Nights, Ten Thousand Tales of Delight," written in twelve volumes and now in the workshop of Heinemann. This material was collected in his long diplomatic stay in Japan. His latest book is a romance of Ethiopia and its golden legends.

Mrs. Baur's luncheon for the Post Wheelers was of the best. Seven sat down at the small table in the Baur conservatory. Seven is now considered the ideal number for a good luncheon. Down the middle of the table ran a magnificent ancient Japanese obi splashed with huge butterflies of flame and green. The talk was spontaneous and amusing. I loved the look of the two travelers, he with keen eye and small brown goatee; she slim, vivid, hair tawnily thick, a true Virginian, much alive and ultra intelligent.

With the new year Post Wheeler determined to take applause for an old saying of his which has been resurrected and going the rounds without giving him credit. Why a woman is beautiful but dumb: "Because she is beautiful, man loves her. Because she is dumb, she loves man."

I asked Mrs. Wheeler how was her neighbor the Dowager Julia, marchioness of Tweeddale, a most remarkable, slim, and energetic peeress of 90 years, once lady in waiting to Queen Victoria. She has a corner house on Chelsea embankment, on the six floors of which riots one of the largest collections in existence of small porcelain figures and much choice eighteenth century furniture.

Austrian Gets Message from Dead English Soldier.

This reminded Mrs. Wheeler of the current Lady Tweeddale, whose elder son and heir was killed in the great war, and she told me this singular story. She met the marchioness of Tweeddale at a diplomatic luncheon one day, where there was a stranger. I believe she was an Austrian.

During the course of luncheon this Austrian called for pencil and paper and began to write rapidly. It seems she was an automatic writer. In a few minutes she inquired if any one present had lost a son in battle, for this was a message from him. Lady Tweeddale took the message and told Mrs. Wheeler afterward that it was in the language of her son, with all his endearments, and was a great comfort to her.

A nephew of Dowager Lady Tweeddale, Col. Stewart Roddie, one of the bachelor beaux of London, comes here in February to do some lecturing. Col. Roddie was head of the disarmament commission in Germany after the war. He is a fascinating Scotchman and one of the best lecturers ever.

Henry Field Home a Study in Gray.

One of the bright hours of the holidays, the housewarming at the Henry Fields, 219 Lake Shore drive. I was the first guest and saw ahead of everybody the pristine elegance and sheen of their new apartment. It is highly simple, with that simplicity which is the most expensive thing in life, and uncomplicated, restful. The living room, foyer, and dining room are almost one and have silver walls, or maybe they are platinum. Gray velvets and silver gray satin hangings shut out the light. A long gray satin sofa fills a wall space, flanked by small tables; one carried white roses, the other red.

A bright fire snapped on the harth, with gray satin fauteuils at either side. Books in beautiful bindings filled a wide wall. The chef d'œuvre of originality was the living room floor, a lackered pattern of gold lotus leaves on dull red.

Floor Covered with Lackered Wall Paper.

I wrung the secret of her lovely floor from Betty, who never could keep a secret—it was wall paper, heavily lackered. Each person hearing the secret at once said he felt like a fly! The rest of the house had a black enameled floor, which, in the boudoir of madame, had white bear rugs and a silver bed. In the dining room was the mysterious whiteness and peace of a convent. Through sheer white window draperies came a light, radiant yet subdued. Too late for sunlight—it was Marquis de Veyrac's light, and he was present and proud of his job.

On an old oak refectory table, great flagons and bowls of mulled wine, eggnog, and coffee were featured.

The host and hostess were overwhelmed with compliments for their new abode.

Ruth Draper was also an early guest at the house warming and Mrs. Charles Goodspeed, Walter and Mrs. Kirk, the Kellogg Fairbanks, Edward and Olive Bennett, Ruth Page, Walter Frazier, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Meeker, Arthur Jr., and dozens more. The merry go round of the holidays leaves a great backdrop of friendly faces, seen here and there. To sort them out afterward is difficult.

Chummy Place Cards Cause a Hubbub.

New Year's eve Mrs. Francis Junkin had a dinner for thirty chez elle in the Drake tower which was extremely gay. Place cards had only the first names of the guests, so there were Gipsys and Vivians and Elizabeths and Lucys chasing madly round the huge circle, also Tommys and Johnnys and Harolds and Henrys, wondering where they were to sit. After dinner, the Christmas tree was lighted and made to yield a second crop of gifts, while Mrs. Junkin officiated as Mme. Santa Claus in a glowing costume of scarlet satin, becoming to her rosy, youthful face and mop of curling gray hair.

Here again nobody had a family name, just Peggy or Freddy. Made one feel gambolsome. Then lots of music. Mr. and Mrs. Ernest R. Graham also had thirty for dinner that night at Astor and Banks streets, a superb dinner with speechmaking. Even the ladies were called upon, which really isn't quite ethical. We poor darlings are not always prepared.

Bridge tables were strewn about the first floor of this beautiful house. There was an undercurrent of music during the evening and a few handsome song birds. Mme. Rosa Raisa was stunning in black crêpe, beautiful figure and jewels. Mme. Fitziu was in red, Mme. Le Mance in pale blue. Mrs. J. Hamilton Lewis, coming late, entertained a large circle with a thrilling travelette on Russia, and what a poor time she and the senator had there.

Scudders' Celebration a High Point of New Year's Day.

Mr. and Mrs. William Scudder had the large party of New Year's day in Bellevue place. It was an eggnog celebration, followed by luncheon and bridge for the Chicago club widows, and some who have no such worries. The hostess, noted for her popularity and looks, wore a long silver tunic frock, très chic. At luncheon one sat down at tables covered with gold tissue, all the service and flowers being golden, absolutely on the gold standard and in spite of the New Deal.

Who was there is a long, long story. But I met the Stanley Fields, Frank Hibbards, Mrs. Joseph Coleman, Orville Babcocks, Henry Hoopers, Mrs. James Ward Thorne, the Hampden Winstons, Jimmy Ames, Ralph James, Mrs. C. Morse Ely, the William Odells, Bernard Rogers, Mr. and Mrs. Alden Browne, Mrs. Mark Cummings, Mr. and Mrs. Secor Cunningham, Nelson and Anna Barnes.

The Edward Bennetts had a dense crowd of well wishers at noon in their charming house at Astor street and Burton place. Olive was receiving in a draped frock of red velvet with flat gold necklet and bracelets, most enchanting. A whole avalanche of men was departing for the Chicago club as I arrived, but the Kellogg Fairbanks, John Alden Carpenters, John Storrs, Miss Gwethalyn Jones, and a few others remained. Including a rather dark, saturnine man, the great French artist, Fernand Leger, and interesting Mme. Armand Legère, who is touring with him, a pretty blonde.

Captains of Industry at Millers' Party.

Other of the afternoon's festivities were eggnogs at the John S. Millers late in the day, where one met a large number of notable men of the law and captains of industry, railroad presidents, and such. Mrs. John Miller was assisted informally by Mrs. Alan Dixon, her sister-in-law.

Mrs. P. A. Valentine's party at 209 Lake Shore drive was a feast of color to the eye and warmth to the soul. Her large living room glows with vivid carmine hangings, the tea table was ablaze with red poinsettias.

Receiving with the hostess, a much admired blonde beauty, were her son and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Anderson Valentine, happily home after two years in London.

One saw many of the vieille roche, the old Prairie avenue set at this reception—Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Field, the Arthur Meekers, Secor Cunninghams, and Mrs. Joseph Coleman, Mrs. C. Garfield King, Mr. and Mrs. Tracy and Mr. and Mrs. John Drake, Mrs. Henry Blair, Anita Blair, Dean and Mrs. Duncan Browne, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Insull, Mrs. Elisha Chandler, Herman Waldeck, Robert Fernald, Col. Ralph James, Mrs. J. Ogden Armour, looking again in marvelous health and about to return to Arizona for a month.

The William Monroe New Year's day party is history, always the same dashing crowd, and, as Robert Eskridge pointed out to me that day everybody present is somebody, somebody interesting, charming, or both. Henry Monroe receives usually in the hall, and various younger nephews and nieces among the Roots are at strategic points, while the host and hostess and Harriet Monroe, noted editor of Poetry, receive in the large living room, beautiful with blazing logs, discreet lighting, and notable Chinese collections.

RETURNS TO BENNETT SCHOOL IN NEW YORK

Miss Carlotta Lagorio is the debutante daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Frank A. Lagorio. Her mother and father introduced her to society at a tea in their home on Wellington avenue on Dec. 20. Miss Lagorio, one of the most striking looking of the season's buds, has returned to the Bennett School in Millbrook, N. Y., after the gay holiday season.

"Married Desk" Is New Vogue in English Homes

LONDON—"Married desks" are coming into vogue here. They really are two desks joined back to back with one side for the wife and the other for the husband. They look exceedingly "matey," as the English say, and they certainly suggest that the Englishman's "den" is doomed.

Thus far the Englishman's "den" has held its ground obstinately. The space limitations of the modern flat are telling against it, although there are English couples who cramp themselves extraordinarily in order to preserve one cubicle as sacred to the "master's" occasional evenings and Sunday mornings.

But the "married desk," which has appeared in several of the big furniture stores, suggests that the battle is lost and that the Englishman no longer has the space in his castle for complete solitude while he goes over the bills.

There are many myths existing in England about the English home. For example, it appears to be a fixed idea among the editors of women's pages in the newspapers that the really clever wife always sees to it that her husband's slippers are warmed by the fire when he comes home at night, and that he has a glass of sherry ready to sip.

Outside of a Chelsea studio one seldom knows an Englishman who wears slippers in the house, and certainly no English wife who would dream of warming them. Men's slippers are sold in the stores and so, one assumes, they must be worn, but they seem far less in evidence here than they were in the United States some time back, and emphatically the typical English wife is only a shade less casual in her treatment of her husband than the American wife whose "spoiledness" is an international theme.

However, the editors of home pages here all seem to come from Scotland, and warmed slippers and sherry may flourish in the domestic north in a way difficult to detect here in the south of England.

The Lake View Musical society will hold its first concert of the new year tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock in the Crystal ballroom of the Blackstone hotel. Millicent Chapman Cooke has arranged the program.

Woman's Club to Have Lunch for Congress

Guests at Tribune Forum to Be Entertained by Group on February 14.

DISTINGUISHED guests attending the third annual Woman congress Feb. 13 and 14 in the Palmer house will be entertained at luncheon the noon of Feb. 14 by the Chicago Woman's club. The congress, one of the country's outstanding annual events for women, is a forum for the discussion of current affairs under the sponsorship of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.

MRS. RALPH N. WEBSTER.

Plans for the luncheon were made during the past week by a special committee of club members appointed by the board of directors which has Mrs. Ralph W. Webster as president. Mrs. Edward C. Higgins is the chairman of this committee, and the members include Mrs. Walker G. McLaury, Mrs. Vinton E. Sisson, Mrs. Arthur Osterholm, Mrs. William Bethke, and Mrs. Lewis H. Dodd.

The luncheon will be a pleasant social interim between the morning and afternoon sessions of the congress on the 14th. The morning session will consider the modern problems of business and industry and the most significant advances in the field of science. At the afternoon meeting half a dozen of the most glamorous figures in the world of the arts will be presented as speakers.

Distinguished Visitors at Congress to Be Special Guests.

Mrs. Higgins and her committee have set 12:15 as the hour for the luncheon. Although the distinguished visitors at the congress are to be special guests, any one attending the congress sessions will be welcomed at the luncheon. Since the capacity of the dining room of the Chicago Woman's club is limited, reservations at $1 a person will be made in the order of their receipt. These reservations should be addressed to Mrs. Edward C. Higgins, Chicago Woman's club, 72 East 11th street.

This will be the second occasion on which the club, one of the oldest and most influential in the city, has entertained in connection with the Woman congress. Out of town guests are especially pleased to have the opportunity of visiting the club, since its home is one of Chicago's most handsome buildings.

Number of Out of Town Visitors to Be Quadrupled.

The out of town attendance at the congress will be quadruple what it has been in former years. From all parts of this country and the border areas of Canada women leaders are coming to hear the national and international authorities who will be presented as speakers at the six sessions. Railroad passenger associations are coöperating by granting a special round trip concession amounting to a fare and one-third.

During the past week several hundred additional ticket requests have been filed in the congress headquarters, bringing the total well into the thousands. There are no ... fees of any character for any of the five sessions commencing at noon on Feb. 13 and continuing through the afternoon of Feb. 14. Two dollars is the fee being asked for the formal dinner that will bring the congress to a brilliant close the evening of Feb. 14. Requests for tickets or dinner reservations should be filed as soon as possible in the headquarters of the Woman congress, room 1418 Tribune Tower, Chicago.

English Lessons on French Radio Upset British

LONDON. Wireless listeners are writing furious letters of protest to the newspapers regarding "lessons in English" which are being given from a French broadcasting station.

It appears that the French "professor" has an American accent. For example, he is teaching the continent to pronounce Sir Walter Raleigh as "Rawlee," instead of, as the English pronounce it, "Rally." His "pupil," it is complained, has a "nondescript accent" unlike anything ever heard in these isles, and the "professor's" idea of colloquial English embraces such phrases as: "Are you stony broke, old boy?" and "Bless my soul!" which, he explains, are in current use in polite English society.

The Chicago Woman's Aid will observe Chicago Authors' day with a luncheon for Elisa Bialk, Elinor Maxwell, Louis Zara, and Raymond Kelly at 12:30 o'clock Tuesday at 185 North Wabash avenue. All four guests will speak.

Harriet Vittum to Preside at Symposium on Housing.

A symposium on housing will be held at 12:30 o'clock Thursday, with Harriet K. Vittum presiding. Miss Vittum is chairman of the women's committee of the Chicago Association of Better Housing. Alfred K. Stern, chairman of the Illinois state housing board, will talk on "Housing from a Local Point of View," and Edmund Hoben, assistant director of the National Association of Housing Officials, will discuss "The National Aspect of Housing."

A number of Chicagoans are in Washington, D. C., for the annual meetings of the Council of Women for Home Missions and the Home Missions council, to be held tomorrow through Friday at the Calvary Baptist church there.

The opening session of the Council of Women for Home Missions will be combined with a fellowship supper at the Y. W. C. A. tomorrow evening. Emphasis at these annual meetings is on problems of the rural church.

Midwinter Institute to Be Sponsored by Epworth Leagues.

A midwinter institute is to be sponsored by the Chicago Western District Epworth leagues, for all leaguers in the Chicago area, on seven consecutive Tuesday evenings, beginning this Tuesday. Sessions will be held at the Church of the Redeemer, Sacramento boulevard at Adams street.

Dr. George Fowler will speak at the opening session, and Bishop Ernest Lynn Waldorff, the Rev. C. H. Newham, Harry X. Cole, Dr. J. W. Sumwalt, and the Rev. Logan Hall will speak at later meetings. Each session will open with supper at 6:30 o'clock.

Five north side sisterhoods will hear Mrs. Henry Nathan of Buffalo, N. Y., president of the National Federation of Temple Sisterhoods, speak at their annual reciprocity meeting at 2 o'clock Tuesday at the North Shore Congregational Israel temple in Glencoe. Mrs. Nathan will speak on "Gateways to Life."

Mrs. Nathan will be the principal guest at a breakfast at the Northmoor Country club preceding the meeting. Presidents of all Chicago sisterhoods, wives of rabbis, and members of the national board also will attend the breakfast.

Illinois Club Leaders Bound Toward Capital

Prominent Women Heading Large Delegation to Federation Conclave.

By Ruth DeYoung.

FIVE women leaders will represent Illinois in Washington, D. C., this week at the annual new year board meeting of the General Federation of Women's Clubs. Going today with a large delegation from the central and far west are Mrs. Edward J. Lehman, president of the Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs; Mrs. Walter W. Seymour, second vice president of the General Federation; Mrs. William F. Farrell, General Federation director; Mrs. William J. Piggott, chairman of the federation's music department, and Mrs. Fred R. Lufkin, vice chairman of press and publicity for the national organization.

MRS. WALTER W. SEYMOUR.

The Washington meeting, due to convene Tuesday and continue through Saturday, is one of the most important small assemblies of organized women in the course of a year. The General Federation board consists of the executive committee, state directors, department chairmen, members of the board of trustees, and the extension secretary for international clubs. State presidents, division chairmen, and chairmen of standing and special committees are conference members of the board and urged to attend all of the meetings.

During the sessions this week Mrs. Roberta Campbell Lawson, president, and chairmen of the nine departments of work will outline the programs for the coming year. "Education for Living," keynote of this administration of the federation, will be emphasized in these outlines and in the addresses to be heard.

United States Surgeon General Hugh S. Cumming, Representative Wesley E. Disney of Oklahoma, Colo.; John Monroe Johnson, who is assistant secretary of commerce, and Kermit Roosevelt, vice president of the United States Lines, are among those who will speak to the board. Representative Disney will discuss the bill he introduced at the last session of congress providing for the establishment of a national academy of public affairs. Col. Johnson and Mr. Roosevelt will speak on the American merchant marine, while Surgeon General Cumming will discuss public health problems. Mrs. Grace Morrison Poole, immediate past president of the General Federation, will discuss some current international problems.

MRS. W. F. FARRELL.

Social affairs mingled with this business and educational program include a reception Wednesday at which Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt will receive in the White House. Mrs. Roosevelt also is to be the speaker Friday evening at a dinner given for the federation's clubs in foreign countries. Another social affair will be the annual reception given by the board at federation headquarters for members of congress and their wives. This event will be held Tuesday evening.

Prize to Be Awarded for Essay on True Experience.

Another item of national interest today concerns the competition being sponsored by Independent Woman, the official organ of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs.

"Must women be better at their jobs than men to earn the same money?" is the question asked by the federation officials. To check the truth of the contention the January issue of Independent Woman is launching a prize contest. Twenty-five dollars will be awarded to the woman who writes, in 300 words or less, the most vital and convincing true experience story indicating that business or professional women must do work superior to that of their masculine associates in order to win similar recognition and monetary reward.

"Basing the contest on the assumption that women are discriminated against is fair enough," says Winifred Willson, editor of the magazine, "because disbelievers will have a chance to air their views later.

"But they'll have to be pretty good to prove, for example, that men teachers deserve salaries twice as large as women in similar classifications. The disparity exists today, if we may believe figures compiled by the United States office of education. There is practically the same disparity in industrial wages.

"Men should, I think, stop to consider whether or not they may be fashioning a boomerang. If more and better work is demanded of women, for earnings equal to those of men, may they not [since effort creates ability] develop real superiorities?"

The contest is open to any one and entries are asked by Feb. 1. The winner is to be announced in the March issue of Independent Woman.

From all over Illinois members of the board of managers of the Illinois Congress of Parents and Teachers are coming to Chicago Tuesday and Wednesday for their two day meeting in the Stevens hotel. Mrs. Arthur R. Williams of Normal will preside. A good portion of the meetings is to be given to discussing plans for the 37th annual convention of the congress to be held in Chicago April 14 to 17. Mrs. Frank A. Damm heads the convention committee.

To further the objective of the Illinois congress, which is "to secure more adequate laws for the care and protection of children," the legislation and citizenship committee, under the direction of Mrs. Louis Hildebrandt, will hold a series of studies for council legislation chairmen of the Chicago area beginning a week from tomorrow in the Stevens hotel.

Mrs. Will F. Lyon, southwest council legislative chairman, will conduct the first class and explain the objectives of the series. At the last meeting of the series, Monday, March 30, Mrs. Hildebrandt will explain "The Parent-Teacher Legislation Program."

IN CHARGE OF DANCES

Miss Julianna Holmes is on the committee in charge of the North Shore Fortnightly dances which are being held at the Shawnee Country club this winter. The dance series began in November and will end in February. The next dance will be given on Jan. 18.

Gordon Selfridge Injured While in His London Store

Gordon Selfridge, with a "bigger and better" trade on his hands than ever before, fell while going the rounds of his store recently and injured his leg so that he has been confined to his home for some time. LONDON No bones were broken, but a bad bruise resulted, and his daughter, the Princess Wiasemsky, not only had her general social arrangements to make, but had an invalid on her hands as well.

The only Selfridge grandchild, Princess Titianna Wiasemsky, is keeping the big household in Carlton House Terrace in a whirl of excitement with her parties and her dancing exhibitions. She is the sub-sub-deb age now, with almost as many engagements as if she were "coming out."

Quaint Places Found on Auto Tour of Europe

Motor Carries Traveler to Mountain Villages Not Reached by the Trains.

By June Provines.

A TRAVELER who wants to drive his own automobile in Europe should have no hesitation, for he will have no more difficulty than in driving at home. Roads are excellent, garages frequent, and gas stations, while not quite as ubiquitous as in America, are numerous enough for any one's needs. This is true, certainly, in Germany, Austria, Switzerland, Italy, and France, and more or less in all other European countries with the exception of Russia.

We drove a small car more than 5,000 miles last summer without accident, without getting lost [with the exception of an hour in a dense German forest when we tried to take a short cut to a little rococo church for which we were searching], and without encountering a dearth of gas stations.

Places Far Removed from Usual Routes.

Through northern Germany and the Harz mountains, through Bavaria, with its sunlit forests, its tolling church bells and wayside shrines and gaily frescoed houses, and across the border into Austria we motored. The Austrian Alps, wilder and more magnificent than the German Alps, offered a constantly changing scene. Snow peaks, green forests, waterfalls, native costumes as varied as the scenery, and quaint little inns with names out of a fairy tale—"Guest House of the Blue Chamois," "Guest House of the Three Moors," "Guest House of the Wild Man," and similar ones suspended from signs brave with fine ironwork or illustrated in frescoes on the fronts of the inns—captured our attention. The advantage of going by motor is that these picturesque towns and villages, not visited by train travelers, are made accessible.

Where the Romans Used to Bathe.

Motoring along a broad road that followed the swift-flowing Inn river out of Innsbruck we went past Hall, where the Romans once came to bathe in the brine baths, and where many fashionable hotels offer hospitality to modern day resorters, and at Jenbach turned off into what was until recently the royal hunting country. We spent a night at Achensee, a lake of deep, glowing blue in a mountain setting. Another night we spent at Kufstein, where there is a mighty old fortress, and charming houses, and excellent hotels. It was Saturday night, and in the morning we heard the church bells ringing, and the sound of many feet on the pavement. Getting up to look out the window, we saw peasants in the ancient costumes of the province, wearing high crowned hats with wide brocaded streamers falling to their knees, climbing the little hill to the church.

Motoring Through the Dolomites.

The Austrian lakes, Salzburg, Zell-am-Zee, a gay little town whence one starts on the trip across Austria's highest mountain on the new motor road opened last summer, the Gross Glockner, all followed in due course. Then we delivered ourselves up to the bersaglieri and the customs officials at the Italian border. We motored through the beautiful Dolomites, great strange peaks that look like the minarets and towers of giant castles, with the green of larch forests splashed against their streaked pink and white grandeur. Cortina, Bolzano, Murano, then the magnificent road along Lake Garda, where dark eyed children were selling swigs of lemon trees with pale yellow fruit attached. A night at the Grand hotel at Bellagio, with its garden and fountains, then St. Moritz, and Interlaken, and Kandersteg, with snow covered Alps and waterfalls and marvelously clean, neat, and charming hotels.

The Pardon at St. Anne de Palud.

Then, because it started to rain and kept on raining, we were on our way again. Blue Lake Geneva Byron's castle of Chillon, and stops at Ouchy and Geneva, then Paris, and a dash to the coast of Brittany to see the "pardon" at St. Anne de Palud, the most impressive in Brittany. A "pardon" is a religious ceremony, with pilgrims flocking in from every direction, and the scene at St. Anne de Palud looked as some medieval plain might have looked when crusaders were encamped.

We saw the blue nets of the sardine fisherman at Concarneau and ate lobsters at Julia's famous place at Pont-Aven. We did a hundred other things, with an obedient little car to take us anywhere at any time. And not once did a gas station fail to show up when it was needed, or a native fail to be helpful, despite linguistic difficulties.

Driving our own car made the trip more interesting and more amusing, and it was singularly uncomplicated.

NEARING THE END OF THE JOB ON THE NEW SUPERLINER

Finishing touches are being made on the bridge of the Queen Mary as the exterior of the ship approaches completion. The picture also shows a large part of the main promenade deck, which is more than 750 feet long and entirely enclosed in glass.

Chicago Leads the Procession in Travel Gains

THAT Chicago and surrounding territory are leading the nation in the return to prosperity is indicated by the figures released yesterday by Raymond-Whitcomb, Inc., travel agency.

For December the company's sales showed an increase of 41 per cent over December of 1934. The Chicago office spurted ahead of the national average, with an increase of 92 per cent. This placed the local office in top position for the month. For the year 1935 the Chicago branch showed the highest percentage of increase in sales over 1934 of any of the company's offices. The gain promises to continue this year.

"On the Columbus cruise around South America, sailing next month, it has been difficult to get reservations for several weeks," said Fred V. Robinson, district manager. "In the Chicago office territory, which extends from Indiana to Colorado, there are about 175 passengers booked for this 45 day trip—a remarkably high percentage of the passenger list. In other fields of travel, such as cruises to the West Indies and to Mexico, the bookings are much heavier than last season at this time, with indications of a complete sellout. There is an unprecedented advance reservation for the North Cape cruise in June. Almost six months before sailing, a large share of the better space is under deposit."

Hialeah Park to Open Thursday

MIAMI, Fla., Jan. 11.—Resort and society interest will center next Thursday on the opening of Hialeah Park, $2,000,000 tropical racing plant of the Miami Jocky club.

A number of extra bleacher sections have been constructed, and these, added to the present grandstand and clubhouse, will accommodate nearly 50,000 spectators. The reserved boxes, numbering 156, have been sold out for the season. The feature event of the seven race opener will be the Hialeah Park Inaugural handicap for three year olds and up.

D E T O U R S

By Frederic Babcock.

SOME of the troubles, along with the fun, of doing Florida in oil were related the other day by Bruce Thompson, Oak Park artist. He has spent several seasons down there and he has run into plenty of both natives and tourists. He has found that any artist who undertakes to sketch in that state in the tourist season may expect to have the public looking over his shoulder.

"I think my largest informal audience was at a shuffleboard club in St. Petersburg," Mr. Thompson said. "The St. Petersburg press agent claimed a membership of 3,000 for the organization and I thought fully that number took a look at my sketch. Though the subject seemed promising for a picture, the result was disappointing. Too much company."

● "One midafternoon a small boy came by," the artist continued. "He remained until near sundown, asking a question now and then. On leaving he apologized, saying he would like to stay longer, but his mother would be expecting him for dinner.

"Grownups stick around even longer, and without apology. Some of them seem to think an artist at work is a part of Florida's free entertainment, and maybe they're right.

"A common type of winter visitor on the gulf coast is the elderly man with nothing to do, plenty of time, and too lazy to fish. One of this class took a seat behind me one day on Tampa bay. He watched for an hour without a word and then spoke up: 'I've always thought I could do something like that.' 'Ever try it?' I asked. 'Nope.' 'Why don't you?' 'Mebbe I will.' A pause, as if to think it over. Then: 'Naw, I guess I won't. Too damn much trouble!'"

● The Seminole Indians make good models, said Mr. Thompson. He added:

"Any native Floridan will tell you that sitting still is one of the best things the Seminoles do. However, I learned that this lack of appreciation is mutual. The Indian's opinion of the 'cracker' is: 'White man holo-wagus; locksee ojus.' Which means: 'The white man is no good; he lies plenty.' The Seminole model holds a pose well, but when he says, 'Me hiepus,' he goes. If your sketch isn't done, it's just too bad; he goes anyway.

"Most of the people who look over the artist's shoulder are polite. They either say nothing or else what they say is brief and complimentary. 'Isn't it pretty!' is the commonest remark. Some lookers will discuss the sketch in stage whispers that are more distracting than ordinary conversation. There is a run of wisecrackers, of course, and their favorite joke is to pretend to look through the painting for a portrait of themselves or their friends.

"Then there are the amateur critics. One of them insisted that I show a whole tree instead of merely a part of it. I explained that I thought the composition would be better if part of the tree were left out. The word 'composition' evidently puzzled him. He shook his head and said: 'You'd better go home and get a bigger canvas.'"

Yes. Souvenirs from all parts of the world may be picked up there at reasonable prices. The Prado has numerous attractive shops, and so have Opispo and O'Reilly streets. Famed Painting by Rembrandt Is Hung Here

"Christ at Emmaus," from Louvre, Will Be at Art Institute Until Jan. 19.

By Eleanor Jewett.

THE important and impressive exhibition of paintings by Rembrandt and his pupils in the east wing galleries of the Art institute will close next Sunday night, Jan. 19. Owing to the delay in receiving the great religious picture "Christ at Emmaus" by Rembrandt, it was hoped to extend the period of the exhibition, but, due to the fact that the Worcester museum is also awaiting the painting and has set its own exhibition date, the canvas cannot be held in Chicago. It will be here, however, during this next week, and every one should make a point of seeing it. It ranks as one of the most important religious pictures in the world.

The other exhibitions in the east wing galleries are worth a visit, too. One hears many of the younger people of the north shore were keen to buy paintings by Soutine from the last Arts club exhibit, paintings that were prohibitive in price to them but otherwise thrilling. This critic found Soutine more than a little high in another sense and not thrilling at all. But all kinds make a world and doubtless the modern exhibit from the Carter H. Harrison collection now in the Art institute on display is fascinating. At least it is a distinct foil to the old masters lent by Max Epstein. Some may prefer the moderns to Watteau, Velasquez, and Botticelli, others may not. It is a large order to please every one. However, the conviction remains that, for lasting value, the Watteau owned by Mr. Epstein is a good bet. The abstract paintings by Fernand Leger are extremely dull and involved, but even they may rouse a burning fire of enthusiasm in those given to seeing things in circles. Dogmatism is to be deplored. The Art institute this week is extremely catholic in its offerings.

New Etchings and Engravings Hung.

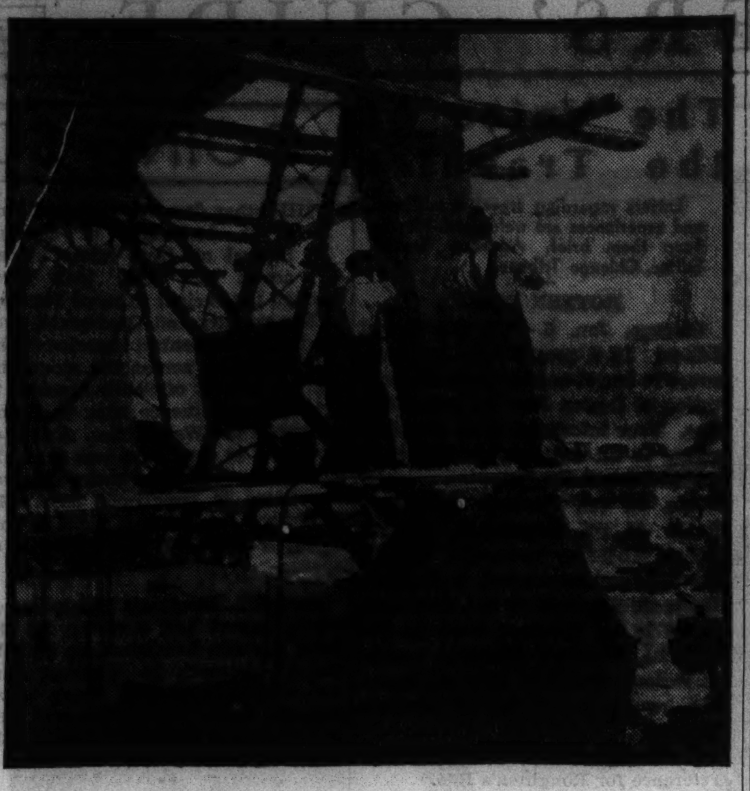
A recent gift of etchings and engravings made to the Art institute by Bernard F. Rogers of Chicago follows the International Lithograph exhibition in the print rooms of the museum, which closed last Monday. The collection consists of rare early Italian etchings, a Durer, a Rembrandt, and nineteenth century prints. It is hung in Gallery 12. In other galleries lithographs by Daumier, water colors by Rowlandson, old masters of the Netherlands, and the famous Gurley drawings by early masters are installed.

A series of twelve talks for children on "Different Ways of Painting" will be given by Miss Helen Mackenzie, curator of the children's museum, on Saturdays from 9:15 to 9:50 from Jan. 4 to March 28. These talks are free to all children. A series of twelve gallery tours free to children of members of the Art institute will be given by Miss Mackenzie Saturdays from 12:30 to 1 p. m. from Jan. 4 to March 28. This series has proved extremely popular—so popular, in fact, that it is carefully limited now just to children.

Lecture Series Opens in Fullerton Hall.

The Art institute is offering a second series of free lectures on "Adventures in the Arts" in Fullerton hall, sponsored by Miss Florence Dibell Bartlett. The first series, given in the fall, was attended by large numbers, which taxed the capacity of the hall. Not a seat was left empty week after week. The opening lecture of the new series was last Thursday evening, Jan. 9, at 6:30. Miss Parker spoke on "The Art and Life of Mexico." Next Thursday the subject will be "The Collections of the Louvre in Paris." All of the lectures are illustrated with slides. The public is invited.

The Texas Centennial exposition in Dallas, opening June 6, will contain an extensive showing of art. The exhibit will be held on the exposition grounds and will inaugurate the new building of the Dallas Museum of Fine Arts, which will be finished by then. The museum will cost $500,000. The exhibition of fine arts will be arranged by Robert B. Harshe, director of the Chicago Art institute, and Daniel Catton Rich, associate curator of painting and sculpture of the institute. Mr. Harshe has been appointed advisory director of the exhibit, and Mr. Rich his associate.



CHICAGO SCENE

Art Notes

The Chicago galleries, 220 North Michigan avenue, opened a group of interesting shows last Monday. Richard Chase gives us fifty paintings of Chicago, fifty new paintings that [with a previous fifty] give us a comprehensive view of Chicago in all its aspects, including the gay colors it wore during A Century of Progress. Mr. Chase offers seventy-five water colors and twenty-five oils.

Tunis Ponsen is showing landscape and marine paintings. C. Curry Bohm offers "Landscapes of Brown County" and paints with the eye of a poet, and Arthur G. Rider exhibits paintings of California and Spain. It was Mr. Rider's forceful still life which won the still life prize in the last Chicago Galleries Members' exhibition. The current show will continue to Jan. 27.

Paintings by May Hardman Gilruth are the first exhibit this year in the Cordon club, Fine Arts building. Mrs. Gilruth has a gay palette. Her paintings run over the walls in a sparkling ripple of color. She is modern and impressionistic. She suggests, and has the wit to stop with a hint. Her paintings are fascinating exclamation points thrown up in protest against a world too often dull. The "Fresh Snow" is a capital example of that particular habit of hers. The "Study in Green" is another delightful suggestion. More finished, but just as pleasing, are "At Ease," "Dorothy," "Dreaming," and "Cactus in Flower."

When Chicago Was Young

The Elegant Eighties

By Herma Clark

Letters from Martha Freeman Esmond to her friend Julia Boyd of New York.

Chicago, August 12, 1886.

DEAR JULIA: I have just returned from an afternoon of calling, my visits being made on the west side. I went more especially in order to call on my friend Mrs. Cheney whose father, Mr. Philo Carpenter, has just died. Somehow I felt as if an epoch had closed when I heard of his passing, for he was a Chicago pioneer and had been closely associated with all the city's activities from the beginning.

The story of his arrival here is like a novel. In Troy, N. Y., he heard of Fort Dearborn and the opportunities in this new country from a relative for whom he was working. His imagination was fired and he bought a stock of drugs . . . he had been working in a drug store . . . sending these on before him to the promised land by way of the Erie canal. In the spring of 1832 he took the train to Schenectady. From there he went to Buffalo by canal boat. Here he embarked on a small steamboat for Detroit, thence went to Niles, Mich., in a covered wagon. From here he floated down the St. Joseph river to St. Joseph, Mich., on a small lighter belonging to Mr. Hiram Wheeler. The regular sailing vessel that made trips from St. Joseph to Fort Dearborn had been laid up, because of the cholera raging here, so Mr. Carpenter and Mr. George W. Snow, Mrs. R. N. Isham's father, who was on his way here too, bargained with two Indians to take them round the lakes in a canoe. Now wasn't that an adventure? Only one with an active mind and great physical endurance would have undertaken it. I looked it up on the map, one day, when Mr. Carpenter told us about this eventful trip, and was amazed at his wanderings.

In 1832, I've heard him tell many times, the village contained only 200 people, exclusive of the fort. The troops here, commanded by Gen. Scott, were suffering terribly with cholera, and Mr. Carpenter was warmly welcomed, you may be sure, when it was known that he had a stock of medicines. He nursed the sick and used up drugs so rapidly he soon had to send for more. A flourishing drug business was the result. In about eight years he moved to a larger building on Lake street, then beginning to be our shopping center. But soon after he sold out to Brinkerhoff and Penton and never again was in business, save to look after his large real estate holdings.

Will has just been making for me a sketch of these first real estate possessions of Mr. Carpenter, and it's an impressive sight, for the land he bought from the government for $1.25 is now bound by Halsted, Kinzie, Madison, and Elizabeth streets, and at a valuation of $125 a front foot is worth about four million dollars today. Mr. Carpenter had other valuable holdings, but the financial crash of 1837 almost ruined him, for he had endorsed many notes for friends an acre is now a part of the great west side, and its residents think of themselves as living almost downtown. This hundred and sixty acres . . . a poor practice, more prevalent then than it is now, I believe. When it became necessary to pay these claims, he made no effort to evade them, and as money couldn't be had, he spread out a full schedule of his real estate and allowed two disinterested men to select from any part of it what they thought fair. Will recalls that they took 960 acres of land downstate, four and a half blocks in Carpenter's addition, on the west side, half a block in the school section, three lots on Washington street, near the present site of the Chamber of Commerce, and a house and lot, his La Salle street homestead . . . property soon after appraised at more than a million dollars—all for a debt of $8,500.

He faithfully carried out the agreement, though he knew the award was excessive. That's what the Scripture means, I think, by the verse: "He that sweareth to his own hurt and changeth not." Would that we had more superhonest men like Philo Carpenter in the world!

He helped build the First Presbyterian church, organized in Fort Dearborn, but, being an ardent abolitionist, he felt the Presbyterians weren't strong enough in their opposition to slavery, so he withdrew from the denomination and organized the First Congregational church.

Dear old man! Chicago will miss him. I send you a picture which shows what a noble face he had. Much love as always.

MARTHA FREEMAN ESMOND.

FOOTNOTES.

Grandchildren of Philo Carpenter are: Mrs. Jefferson G. Harlow, Oak Park, and Mrs. Mittie Ambler, Chicago. Great-grandchildren are: W. W. Solomon and Mrs. Aubrey Clary, Oak Park; Frances Ambler and Elizabeth Cheney, Chicago.

A charming letter from a southern reader, Mrs. J. M. Heard, Aberdeen, Miss., tells of a match safe much in vogue in the middle seventies. Such a wall ornament made by Mrs. Heard was of cardboard, worked in wool thread. The injunction, "Scratch My Back," impelled one to look on the other side, where sandpaper was found. Ball ornaments completed this bit of fancy work. Mrs. Heard also recalls wool mats, thought beautiful in those days, crocheted in rose, calla lily, and other flower designs.

Javan Hotels Know How to Extract Cash

Touring the East Indies Is Expensive Under Present Rates of Exchange.

By Mason Warner.

SURABAYA, Java, N. E. I.—In Java 42,000,000 people are crowded into about 50,000 square miles of area—approximately 10 per cent less than Illinois.

Illinois appears in a perpendicular position on the map, while Java lies crosswise, 662 miles wide and from 36 to 157 miles from top to bottom. Java is smaller than Borneo, Celebes, Sumatra, or New Guinea, the other large islands in the Netherlands East Indies, but it is the richest and most important commercially in the Malayan archipelago. The natives under Dutch supervision produce great quantities of sugar, rubber, tea, coffee, tobacco, rice, tapioca, and kapok, a sort of tree cotton.

Of the 100,000 white population the Dutch are the most numerous, counting ten to one for other Europeans and Americans combined. The Chinese number 500,000 and the Arabians some 300,000. The Japanese are coming in at a lively rate, and are capturing the retail trade from the Chinese, who have controlled it for the last five centuries. Japanese products are sold in huge quantities, and in Surabaya, chief commercial city, three of the eight banks are owned by Japanese. Of the remaining five, three are Dutch and two British. The Japanese banks enjoy the larger share of the import business and are entering the export trade in an aggressive and successful manner.

How Travelers Fare in Java Today.

There is one little detail about landing in Java that annoys some tourists. If the stranger cannot prove that he is making only a short visit, to gain admittance he must deposit 150 guilders with the immigration authorities. He can prove he is only in transit by producing his ticket for transportation out of the country. If he has no "out" ticket, he puts up the cash, which is refunded to him if he departs within a period of six months. If he stays longer, the 150 guilders goes as head tax.

Traveling is comfortable. The mountain resorts are havens of retreat from the heat, and it is no wonder the Dutch describe them so enthusiastically. But, at the present rate of exchange, touring the East Indies is decidedly expensive. It would not be cheap if the guilder were on the old 40 cent parity. The hotels have a quick and easy but not painless method of money extraction, and a dismaying separation from cash begins immediately after the exchange of dollars into guilders has been effected.

Motor hire is costly; railway fares with a premium for fast trains are comparatively expensive. Meals in dining cars are low in quality and high in charges—even on table d'hôte luncheons bread is charged extra, and so is butter. The Dutch discourage tipping, but the Javan servants are numerous and immune to such suggestions, and if the tourist wishes prompt service he has to pay for it.

They Don't Do the Expected.

Porters, waiters, and hotel boys are immaculately innocent of any language except their Malayan, and the Dutch have had to learn that. Malay waiters are interesting. They seldom do the expected. At one meal a hotel guest will sit unnoticed and unattended until he insists upon attention. At the next meal he will be surrounded by a dozen waiters. One will act as knife putter-down, another as knife taker-up; two will place and replace the forks. One will bring a plate, but it requires two additional waiters to get it on and off the table. On only two maneuvers do they all act in accord. They are slow in bringing the foods—and startlingly sudden, swift, and energetic in removing them. Whether the diner has eaten all he wishes of the serving of any course is of no concern to the waiter. It is best not to hesitate when dining at a Javan hotel.

The Chinese are preferred as servants by the majority of white residents in the orient and the far east because of their intelligence and cheerful willingness to serve the foreigner, in the ready anticipation of his wants, and in the realization of the fact that the white man's ways are different from his own. The Chinese deserve to be popular, even if they do "squeeze" their way to financial independence in five or six years.

Dutch Hotels and Japanese Shops.

The rooms in Javan hotels are large and airy, with high ceilings and open windows and half-doors that are never closed, although provided with strong and expensive locks. Tub and shower bath equipment is plentiful and the hotels throughout are extraordinarily clean and sanitary. On those points, trust can be placed in the Dutch, if not the natives.

The hotels do not provide soap. Therefore the average tourist, be he ever so careful a packer-up, buys soap at every place he stops. He always overlooks the soap. When a tourist enters a Japanese bazar in Java, the clerk goes immediately to the soap counter.

The Japanese bazars sell popular American brands of soap at practically the same prices prevailing in the United States. Other merchandise appears to be sold at amazingly low prices. Any writer should make money in Java. A small bottle of good ink retails for one cent, and it is equipped with a fancy cord and a ring to slip on a finger so that it can be carried with no risk of spreading ink in pocket or among other articles in a package. Fountain pens [quality unknown] can be bought for 10 cents, and paper in all shapes and sizes at ridiculously low prices.

There's Variety in the Native Villages.

The Dutch have spent about $40,000,000 in improving the harbor and providing port facilities for Sourabaya, but tourists do not linger long, for there is little to see there. Leading out of the city are several good motor roads, dotted with native villages, called "kampongs." The natives came over long ago from the Malayan peninsula, but, while they have a common origin, there are many variations in the physical characteristics, modes of living, customs, and housing.

They speak a dozen or more languages, all of common Malayan root, but widely differing—Madurese in east Java, Javanese in central Java, Sundanese in west Java. The kampongs retain the distinctive speech and characteristics of their founders, and within short distances of each other near Sourabaya can be viewed Madurese kampongs, Javanese kampongs, Sundanese kampongs.

Still more variety in the kampongs is afforded by the trade guild communities near the larger cities. In these are gathered the members of certain guilds. The lether workers dwell in their kampong, the potters in another, the blacksmiths in still another. It appears as if the men prefer to "talk shop" in a mixture of languages rather than chatter village gossip in their native tongue.

France Will Build Riviera Highway

CONSTRUCTION has been started on a superhighway between Cannes and Nice, along the Riviera coast, said word received last week by Edward O'Connor, Chicago manager for Thomas Cook & Son.

The motor road, expected to be one of the finest in France, will be considerably wider than most of the national routes there and will include three bridges, spanning the Loup, Var, and Cagne rivers. The cost of these bridges is expected to be about $1,500,000. Unusual construction difficulties will be encountered, due to the character of the soil along the coastline, which is strewn with rocks and boulders.

The cost of the road will be borne by the French government, the city of Nice, and the department of the Alpes Maritimes.

ROTTEN ROW.

Chicago, Jan. 6.—To the Travel Editor: In a recent issue your answers to travel queries gave the derivation of Rotten Row as Roughten's Rue. Your informant must have had access to an authority unknown to me, as I found the following sources: Route du roi, Century dictionary; Route de roi [supposed], International; source unknown, Oxford; Route de Roi [supposed], Britannica; Route du roi [said to be], Standard; Route le roi [perhaps from an Old French], Webster; formerly applied to various streets in different towns, the reason being usually obscure, Murray.

I should be glad to learn of the reference for Roughten's Rue.

PUT THEM IN A BOOK.

Oak Park, Ill., Dec. 29.—To the Travel Editor: For many Sundays I have greatly enjoyed the articles on the far east by Mason Warner. He is apparently a keen observer and an enthusiastic traveler, and this, combined with his broad background of knowledge and an occasional humorous touch, makes his writings very interesting.

I think many of your readers would be grateful if you could make these writings available in book form. One is apt to miss an article occasionally, and even those read are worth rereading and having in permanent form.

ASK THE CANADIAN PACIFIC.

Chicago, Dec. 30.—To the Travel Editor: Will you kindly inform me in next Sunday's TRIBUNE how much shorter is the sea route to Europe from Canadian ports as compared with the New York port? What advantage, if any, has a traveler who embarks on a Canadian steamship in a Canadian port? Does he save on time or money, or both, or neither? Do you think the ocean fares to Europe will be lower or higher in the near future?

Skaters at Petoskey.

GOING SOMEWHERE?

THE other day Attorney and Mrs. J. R. McKnight of Chicago hopped off from Miami on an aerial tour that took them through the ancient ruins of Yucatan, to Mexico City and Guatemala, over the jungles of Central America to the Panama canal, across the mountainous north coast of South America to Trinidad, and thence back to Miami by way of the West Indies. A stop of from one to four days was made in each instance and the entire trip was negotiated in twenty-one days. Mr. McKnight says he next plans to conquer the orient—at the same rate of speed.

George L. Lundberg, widely known travel expert and secretary of the Bons Vivants, has joined up with H. and R. Anspach in Highland Park and will manage that firm's travel bureau. Until recently he was with the American Express bureau at the Marshall Field store.

A "three in one" cruise trip, embracing the Mardi Gras in New Orleans, the West Indies, and Mexico, has been announced by the French line in conjunction with the Drake travel service. The party will leave Chicago Feb. 23 over the Illinois Central, spend two days at the New Orleans fête, and then sail on the Mexique for Vera Cruz, Cristobal, Kingston, and Havana. The three days at Vera Cruz will permit the voyagers to make the rail trip to Mexico City.

Effective last Tuesday, the Great Eastern system inaugurated a through bus service between Chicago and New York. Heretofore there has been a change of buses at Cleveland. By eliminating all in-between stops the company hopes to shorten the running time by from four to five hours.

The grandeur of Zion, Bryce, and Grand canyons and their accompanying national parks, and the engineering marvels of Boulder dam will be shown in a series of illustrated lectures in the Chicago territory this week. The lecturer is R. A. Kirkpatrick, a special representative of the Union Pacific railroad. His schedule calls for appearances tonight before the young people of the St. Thomas Apostle church, tomorrow noon before the Joliet Kiwanis club, Tuesday noon at a Medinah temple luncheon at the Hamilton club, Wednesday noon at a department of agriculture luncheon at Mandel Brothers' men's grill, Wednesday evening before the Oak Park Kiwanis club, Thursday noon before the Kiwanians of La Grange, Thursday evening before those of Park Ridge, Friday at the Armour institute, and Friday evening at the Fort Dearborn school.

Next summer the Misses Louise and Anne Ingram, in coöperation with the States Steamship lines, will act as cruise directors for two tours of the orient. One group will leave Portland, Ore., on the General Pershing June 16 and the other on the General Sherman July 7. China, Japan, and the Philippines are to be the main objectives.

The Illinois Central announced yesterday that its Panama Limited and its Floridan had been equipped with completely furnished bedrooms for winter vacationists. Each room accommodates two passengers. By removing a sliding partition the single room may be transformed into a salon for four persons.

Miami Guarding Goose That Laid Golden Eggs

No Hiking of Prices Found as Resort City Enters Upon Its Banner Season.

By Hal Foust.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MIAMI, Fla., Jan. 4.—[By Mail.]—If you want to be statistical you can get estimates from official sources ranging from 260,000 to 2,500,000 on the number of winter visitors coming here this season. That it's a record tourist year there is little doubt, for the railroads are doing a banner business, the streets are jammed with automobiles with out of state licenses, and a housing capacity increased in the last year to accommodate 175,000 vacationists on any one night is well booked.

A veteran estimator, E. G. Sewell, city commissioner and former mayor, places the number of visitors to this tropical resort this season at 1,000,000 and their expenditures at $50,000,000. His calculations, when analyzed in detail too tedious to recount, seem sound.

Accommodations for Modest Purses.

In so far as could be learned, there is no hiking of prices; the civic and business groups are guarding the health of the goose that lays the golden eggs. Of course the swanky hotels that must make a year's profit on their investments in a season of little more than two months are charging rates too high for a commercial traveler. They aren't catering to traveling salesmen. But there are accommodations, including small hotels, rooming houses, and tourist camps, for modest vacation budgets.

This city of 111,000 year around population was developed as a winter colony and is designed for the accommodation and amusement of vacationists. Gerry Swinehart, one of the official publicizers, says housing units have been expanded by an expenditure of $12,000,000 for new hotels, apartment buildings, and private dwellings in the last year. He writes, in a press release, as follows:

"Bedecking the sunny fairways, cabanas colonies, tea gardens, parks, and boulevards, Miami's lush foliage and royal palms are nodding a cordial welcome, dispelling any forebodings that November's tardy hurricane might have diminished Miami's scenic beauty."

A Million Dollar Sports Program.

An occasional palm with a frozzled top or a frame building under repair are reminders of damage in the storm season that has ended.

"The resolute bid for the favor of a tourist trade grown sleek on the nation's expanded income," continues the public relations counselor, "is supported by the traditional all sports program into which more than $1,000,000 is being poured for the entertainment and diversion of pleasure seekers fleeing northern blasts."

Golf, tennis, horse and dog racing, polo, yachting, fishing, and prize fighting are included in this program.

WHERE WINTER DOESN'T MATTER

Mexico Looking for One Million Visitors in 1936

WITH the opening of the Mexico City-Laredo highway and the recent announcement of the Panama Pacific Steamship Line that it would make Acapulco a regular port of call, Mexican tourist officials are placing estimates of entertaining close to 1,000,000 visitors in 1936, B. E. White of the Chicago office of the American Express company said yesterday.

"Mexico as a winter vacation country is not only appealing to people of the northern states but to southern borderland regions, where nearly every one is familiar with the republic's mild climate and scenic grandeur," said Mr. White. "More than 1,500 business men from the southwest will visit Mexico City this month. In the groups will be 800 guests from San Antonio, with two excursions from Los Angeles, arriving by rail and returning by steamer from Pacific Mexican ports. In addition to the rail tours leaving Chicago every two weeks the port cities are sending in an almost daily stream of visitors.

"Mexico City is becoming a great tourist center. The business shot up almost overnight, but the city is now catering to visitors with the ease of old-time resorts. It is undergoing a great transformation. Millions of dollars are being spent in new buildings and improvements."

Racing and Hocky at Winter Resort

LAKE PLACID, N. Y., Jan. 11.—Bobsled racing on the Mount VanHoevenberg slide, an ice harness meet on Mirror lake, and amateur hocky in the Olympic arena mark the current week-end at this resort.

A novice four man bob meet is carded for the Olympic slide Sunday morning. Racing will be from the mile start at Whiteface curve. With so many of the champion bobsledders on their way to the Olympic games in Germany, new faces will be noted in the race lineup.

Chicagoans on the Move

WHEN the Vulcania sailed from New York yesterday on her first eastbound trip since being remodeled, reëngined, and redecorated, her passenger list included J. Madison, who plan to spend three months at Viterbo, where they have a winter home; Miss Johanna Fitzgerald, who will remain in Rome until February; Monsignor O. H. Schurmann de Berenbrook of Milwaukee, and Antonio Di Carlo.

Mendelsohn, all of Chicago; Roderick Ott, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence A. Brill, and Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Goldstein, all of Milwaukee, and Edmund J. Swanke of Manitowoc, Wis.

Forty middle westerners, twenty of them Chicagoans, sailed from New York yesterday on the Virginia for a two weeks' cruise to California via Havana and the Panama canal. Those from Chicago were Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Kenworthy, Miss M. E. Shields, Mrs. D. S. Treen, Mrs. F. A. Sauger, Mrs. P. R. Schwehe and her daughter Ruth, Mrs. J. M. Arvey and son Irwin, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur X. Elrod, Miss M. Hathaway, Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Hilton, Mrs. J. Hammerman and her three children, and Mrs. A. Rosenberg and her son Leonard.

Florida Launches Big Ad Campaign

FOR the first time in its history, Florida has joined the ranks of national advertisers, selling its attractions and opportunities in the principal markets in a series of newspaper and magazine advertisments to appear as part of a campaign recently launched by the governor's all-Florida advertising committee. The ads are designed to reach 12,000,000 readers.

The movement, inaugurated last July by Gov. David Sholtz, today is in full operation and on the way toward accomplishments that have long been the hope of many civic-spirited Floridans. In the last fourteen years many organizations have attempted to organize a sentiment in Florida behind a national advertising effort for the state as a whole, but it remained for the governor's all-Florida committee to raise the necessary funds to go into the production of a comprehensive campaign.

COLD?

Do These 2 Things

Instantly!

(A Simple Method that Anybody Can Follow)

1. Take 2 BAYER ASPIRIN Tablets and drink a full glass of water. Repeat treatment in 2 hours.

2. If throat is sore, crush and stir 3 BAYER ASPIRIN Tablets in 1/3 glass of water. Gargle twice. This eases throat rawness and soreness instantly.

The pictured directions above show perhaps the quickest, simplest and most modern method yet discovered to combat cold and sore throat.

Your own doctor will approve this way. Millions of people have discarded "cold killers" and patent nostrums for this modern way. It relieves the average cold almost as fast as you caught it.

Note that all you do is this.

Three Bayer Aspirin tablets, crushed and dissolved in 1/3 glass of water as a gargle. Gargle with this mixture twice, holding your head well back to permit this medicated gargle to reach the irritated membranes of the throat.

The Bayer Aspirin tablets that you take internally act to fight a cold almost instantly. AND—eases the aches and pains that usually accompany most colds.

The gargle acts instantly like a local anesthetic to soothe the pains in the throat and to ease throat irritation.

Try this way. You will be amazed at how quickly you can ease a cold or sore throat. Be sure, though, that you get Genuine BAYER ASPIRIN tablets. They dissolve almost instantly in the stomach. Hence start working almost instantly. And also, dissolve thoroughly enough in water for use as a gargle.

Why BAYER Aspirin Works So Fast

Drop a Bayer Aspirin tablet into a glass of water.

By the time it hits the bottom of the glass it is disintegrating.

IN 2 SECONDS BY STOP WATCH

A Genuine Bayer Aspirin tablet starts to disintegrate and go to work.

What happens in these glasses happens in your stomach — Genuine BAYER Aspirin tablets start "taking hold" of pain a few minutes after taking.

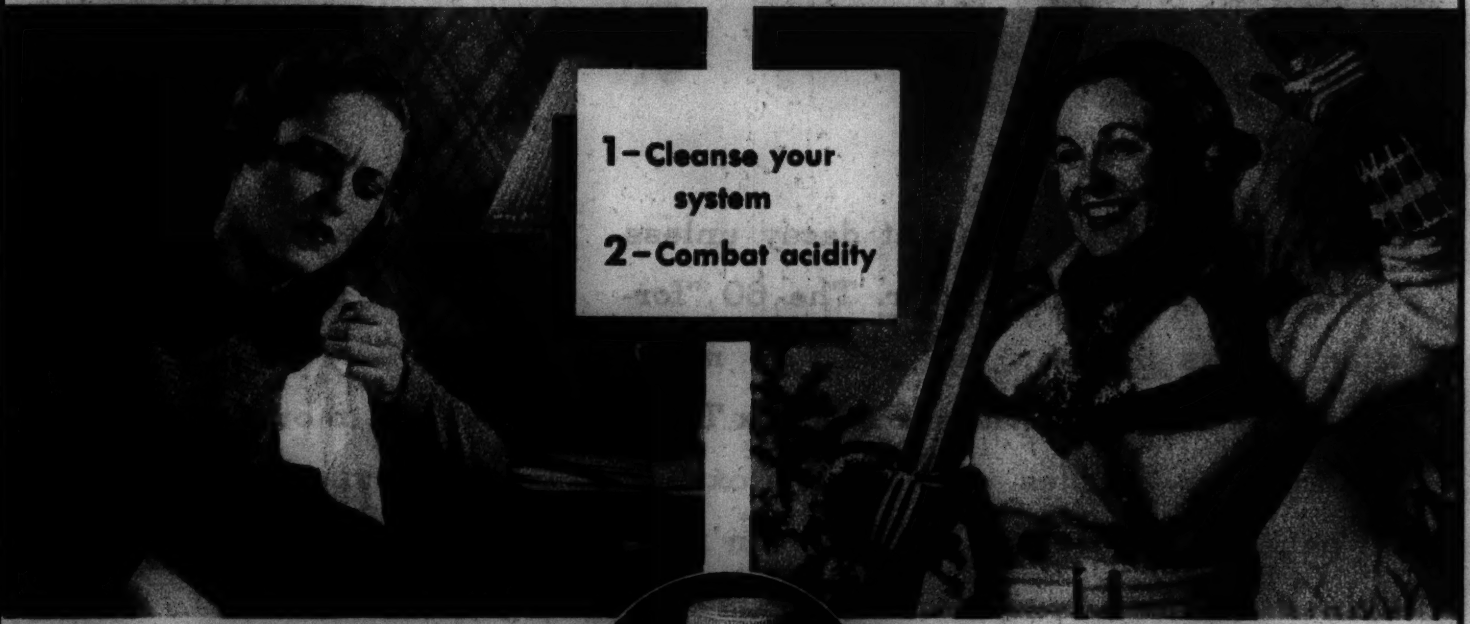
COLDS go in a hurry when you hit them two ways



AT THE FIRST SIGN OF A COLD, do two things for your system: (1) clean out the intestinal tract (2) combat the acidity that encourages a cold. And Sal Hepatica does both. For in addition to cleansing the system—quickly, gently, thoroughly—Sal Hepatica has a definite alkaline (anti-acid) reaction . . . helping your system return to its normal alkaline reserve. No ordinary laxative gives you the alkalizing effect that Sal Hepatica gives.

SO WHENEVER A COLD THREATENS, take two teaspoons of Sal Hepatica in a glass of water—both to cleanse the system and to combat acidity. In addition, get plenty of rest and quiet (go to bed if your cold is severe)—watch your diet and drink plenty of liquids. That is the new scientific way. Get a bottle of Sal Hepatica today.

TUNE IN: Fred Allen's "Town Hall Tonight" NBC—Wednesday Nights, Coast-to-Coast. A full hour of music and fun.

Sal Hepatica does BOTH!
